Q. Is this bond one of the issue of bonds which were pledged to secure the notes given to the United States in settlement of the indebtedness of the Central Pacific Railroad Company under the settlement agreement of February 1, 1899?

A. It is.

Q. Did the bonds, when so pledged, bear this guarantee of the Southern Pacific Company?

A. They did.

Q. How do you know this?

A. Because it was my duty to examine those bonds when they were delivered by the American Bank Note Company to the 1866 assistant treasurer. They were turned over to me for examination, and to see that the bonds were signed and delivered to the Central Trust Company as trustee.

Q. And they bore this guarantee on them at the time they were so delivered?

A. They did.

Q. Did you afterward have occasion to receive these bonds pledged back from the United States Government?

A. I did.

Q. Did you then have occasion to see that the guarantee was still on them?

A. I did.

Q. Were the notes of the Central Pacific to the United States covered by this agreement of February 1, 1899, which has been offered in evidence, paid?

A. They were.

Q. By whom were the first four maturing notes paid?

A. They were paid by Speyer & Company; taken up by Speyer & Company.

Q. And by whom were the remaining sixteen notes paid?

A. They were paid by the Southern Pacific Company.

Q. Were the payments made all together in cash, or was 1867 any part made through credits or through credit for services?

A. It was made by both payments for transportation services and by cash.

Q. Have you the sixteen notes in your possession now at this hearing?

A. I have.

Q. Will you produce those sixteen notes?

A. Here they are.

Q. Where did you get those notes?

A. Those notes were delivered to me by our representative from Washington.

Q. No; I mean how did you get them at the present time?

A. These notes had been sent on here from San Francisco in 1913.

Q. In 1913?

A. Yes.

Q. So they escaped——

A. They escaped the fire. You have reference to the fire of January 8, 1912, in the Equitable Building?

Q. Yes.

Mr. McCLENNEN. You do not mean 1912, do you?

1868 The WITNESS. Yes. That was the date of the fire—January 8, 1912. That was the fire in the Equitable Building.

Mr. McCLENNEN. Was that 1912?

The WITNESS. Yes.

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. From whom did you receive them?

A. They came to me from the assistant treasurer at San Francisco.

Q. Who was the assistant treasurer?

A. Mr. H. A. Jones.

Q. Have you the check stub books of the Southern Pacific Company covering the period over which these notes extended?

A. I have, for fourteen of them.

Q. The last fourteen?

A. The last fourteen.

Q. Will you please explain what has become of the stub book of the Southern Pacific Company covering the period of the maturity of the fifth and sixth notes?

A. When Mr. Harriman took over the Southern Pacific Company we moved from the offices at No. 23 Broad Street to No. 120 Broadway. All vouchers, papers, check stubs and so forth were sent up to our pier for storage and safekeeping. Among those papers and records were the check stubs.

1869 Q. And what happened to the check stubs which on that occasion were sent to the pier?

A. They were destroyed by a fire.

Q. So that you had a fire at the pier?

A. We had a fire at the pier.

Q. What date was that?

A. There were two of them. One was in 1907 and one in 1910.

Q. By which fire were these check stub books destroyed?

A. I can not tell you that, but by one of the two fires.

Q. By one of those two fires?

A. Yes. I can not tell you which they were destroyed in.

Q. You have the check stub books covering the maturities of the remaining fourteen notes?

A. I have; yes, sir.

Q. How did they escape the fire?

A. Because those checks were issued after we had moved to No. 120 Broadway.

Q. Where were they at the time of the fire at No. 120 Broadway?

A. They had been sent to the pier for storage and safekeeping.

1870 Q. And they were there at the time that there was not a fire?

A. At the time there was not a fire.

Q. Is that true?

A. That is true.

Q. Have you produced for exhibition to counsel the notes referred to—sixteen notes?

A. The sixteen notes; yes, sir.

Q. And have you produced and have you here the check stub books?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many of these check stub books have you now produced?

A. Thirteen.

Q. What did you have to do, if anything, in connection with the payment of these notes, or any of these notes? I am speaking now of the last fourteen notes.

A. The last fourteen. The checks for the amounts due at the maturity of the notes would be drawn in my office and I personally delivered them to the assistant treasurer of the United States here in New York.

Q. They were the checks of what company?

1871 A. The checks of the Southern Pacific Company.

Q. And after you had personally delivered those checks to the assistant treasurer of the United States, what was the next thing that you had to do with the transaction?

A. The next thing would be that the bonds which were held as collateral against each note, and the note itself, would be brought over to me from Washington by our representative.

Q. And it would be received by you?

A. It would be received by me.

Q. Have you certified copies from the books of account of the United States Treasury showing the accounts kept by the United States Treasurer in respect to these notes?

A. I have.

Q. Will you produce them for exhibition?

A. Yes, sir [witness producing notes].

Q. Mr. Van Deventer, have you been able to prepare, and have you prepared, from the entries on the check stubs and the endorsements on the returned notes, a statement showing the dates of the payments, and how much was paid by check of the Southern Pacific Company and how much by transportation services?

1872 A. I have.

Q. Have you checked that statement that you prepared, by reference to the certified copy of the accounts of the office of the Treasurer of the United States?

A. I have; yes, sir.

Q. Is the statement which you have prepared correct?

A. It is.

Q. Will you let me see it?

A. Here it is [witness handing statement to counsel].

Q. This statement simply shows, in considerable detail, the payments which you have testified to, by the Southern Pacific Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. BLAIR. The witness is yours.

Cross-examination by Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. The notes which you have produced here are the sixteen notes which were paid to the United States and not the four which were taken up by Speyer & Company?

A. They are.

Q. Are the four notes which were taken up by Speyer & Company in existence?

1873 A. They are.

Q. The sixteen which you have produced here are subsequent, in maturity dates, to the four that were taken up by Speyer & Company?

A. They are.

Q. Did you personally deliver to the subtreasurer the sixteen checks which accomplished the payment of the balance on each of these sixteen notes?

A. I did.

Q. Those checks were made payable in what form; will you tell me, if you have the stub book here?

A. My stub books will show.

Q. What is the first date of a payment for which the stub is still in existence?

A. (After examining stub book.) July 30, 1902.

Q. With this stub and a blank check, which you now have before you, will you read into the record the original check as it was issued; that is, create this check.

A. The check would read:

NEW YORK, July 30, 1902. No. 596.

THE NATIONAL CITY BANK OF NEW YORK:

1874 Pay to the order of Conrad M. Jordan, assistant treasurer at New York, $918,744.93.

Nine hundred eighteen, seven hundred forty-four dollars 93/100.

SOUTHERN PACIFIC COMPANY,

(Signed) A. K. VAN DEVENTER,

Assistant Treasurer.

Countersigned:

WILLIAM MAHL, Controller.

Q. Was the form of the other sixteen checks the same as that of the one you have created for the record here?

A. It was; allowing for the differences when there were different treasurers. Mr. Hamilton Fish was the treasurer during the latter part of the maturity of those notes.

Q. Did you see those checks when they came back canceled from the bank?

A. No; I do not know that I did.

Q. You have no personal knowledge of the course that those checks took from the assistant treasurer's hands until they got back to your office as canceled checks?

A. Nothing more than that they came to us from the City Bank, against which the checks were drawn.

Q. Those sixteen checks you personally delivered to the 1875 assistant treasurer in New York?

A. The assistant treasurer in New York or his representative.

Q. Do you remember whether any of them were delivered to the assistant treasurer himself?

A. The greater part of them were.

Q. When you delivered the check did you at the same time receive back the notes, the balances of which were paid by that check?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you receive the note subsequently or prior to the delivery of the check?

A. Subsequently.

Q. And how soon after the delivery of the check?

A. Usually a couple of days.

Q. The first check which you delivered was delivered on or about August 1, 1901?

A. No; you will find that those notes were paid before maturity by reference to that certified statement of account there.

Q. Referring to the certified statement, it appears from the statement from the United States Treasury that the balance of the 1876 note was paid on February 23, 1900. Is that correct?

A. That is right.

Q. Then on February 23, 1900, or thereabouts, you took a check to the assistant treasurer in New York in payment of that fifth note?

A. Of the fifth note.

Q. It being the first one which had been paid to the United States?

A. Yes.

Q. To make that perfectly clear, by "the first one paid", being the fifth note, you mean to exclude the first four maturities, being the four notes taken up by Speyer & Company?

A. I do.

Q. And when you received the note you received it from the assistant treasurer or from the assistant treasurer's office?

A. No. The note and the collateral held against the note was delivered to our representative at Washington, and he would in turn bring the bonds and the note and deliver them to me.

1877 Q. So that you have no personal knowledge of the manner in which your Washington representative acquired the note from the representative of the United States? You simply know that at some time a little subsequently to your giving the check your representative at Washington came to you in New York with the note and the collateral?

A. Yes.

Q. And when you received the note it had on the back of it this indorsement, which it now has:

"Treasury Department, office of the Secretary, February 21, 1900. Without recourse"—a name which it is difficult to decipher—and "Acting Secretary of the Treasury"?

A. Yes.

Mr. BLAIR. You are referring, now, to the note maturing at what date?

Mr. MCCLENNEN. I am referring, now, to the note maturing August 1, 1901, payable August 1, 1901.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. The check for the sixth note, that maturing February 1, 1902, was issued in February, 1901?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And when you received that note it bore upon the back the indorsement "Without recourse. L. J. Gage, Secretary of 1878 the Treasury"?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that note also received from your Washington representative in the same way you have described for the first one?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you, at the time of the delivery of the checks to the Assistant Treasurer, receive any receipts or other voucher for them?

A. I received receipts.

Q. Are any of those receipts in existence?

A. They are not.

Q. For convenience I will read into the record one of these notes, note No. 6:

"$2,940,635.78. San Francisco, Cal., February 1, 1899. On or before February 1, 1902, the Central Pacific Railroad Company will pay to the order of the United States of America two million, nine hundred and forty thousand, six hundred and thirty-five and 78/100 dollars, with interest meantime at the rate of three per cent per annum, payable semiannually. For value received.

"This is one of the series of twenty notes given by said 1879 railroad company to the United States of America, each for the same principal sum, and bearing interest at the same rate, but maturing at different dates; that is to say, on or before the expiration of each successive six months for ten years, counting from the date hereof.

"If default shall be made in any payment of either principal or interest of any of said notes, or any part thereof, then all of said notes then outstanding, principal and interest, shall immediately become due and payable.

"CENTRAL PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY,
"By ISAAC L. REQUA, President.

"Attest:
"W. M. Thompson, Secretary.

"Corporate seal Central Pacific Railroad Company."

On the reverse side: Cancelled revenue stamps and

"Interest paid to August 1, 1899, $44,109.54.
"Interest paid to February 1, 1900, $44,109.54.
"Interest paid to August 1, 1900, $44,109.54.
"Interest paid to February 1, 1901, $44,109.54."

Mr. HERRIN. Will you call attention to the fact that the note is canceled?

1880 Mr. MCCLENNEN. Cancellation punch mark appears through the paper.

Mr. HERRIN. Through the signature to the note.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. Through the signature to the note and the attestation.

What has been read from the back of the note is all in handwriting. That has been read from the face of the note is all in print, except e due date, February 1, 1902, and the words "Isaac L. Requa" and W. M. Thompson" and the corporate seal.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. The copy to which you have referred of the account received om the United States is a photographic copy of the original ccount?

A. It is.

Q. It is entitled "Central Pacific and Western Pacific Railroad ndebtedness ($58,812,713.48) under agreement of February 1, 1899." "Twenty semiannual notes of $2,940,635.78, each with interest at ree per centum."

That is correct?

A. That is correct; yes, sir.

881 Q. On this account the first four notes, with an item of accrued interest, constitute the debit side of the account?

A. They do.

Q. And the balancing credit is the item "1899, March 27, by re-emption through Speyer & Company of first four notes maturing ugust 1, 1899, to February 1, 1901, with interest, covering warrants os. 1693 and 1694"?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Thereafter on this account a separate account is kept with ach of the sixteen notes?

A. That is right.

Q. And on the debit side for each note, is the principal of that ote and the items of interest up to the date when it was taken up?

A. That is right.

Q. On the credit side, taking, for instance, note No. 5, due August , 1901, it is in this form:

1899, July 31, by proportion (1/16) trnspn. service February 1 to July 31, 1899	$25,753.15
August 1, by cash payment	18,356.39
1900, January 31, by proportion (1/16) trnspn. service, August 1, 1899, to January 31, 1900	37,977.07
882 "February 1, by cash payment	6,132.47
"February 27, by cash payment by Central Pacific R. R. Co., February 23, 1900, the note due August 1, 1901, with accrued interest (covering warrant No. 991)	2,946,194.79
	3,034,413.87

That is correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. In each instance of the cash payments prior to the final item for the principal of the note, the amount of cash added to the proportion of transportation service credit makes up the amount of the interest to that date?

A. That is correct.

Q. For convenience: The significance of that "1/16" which appears in the item is that the transportation service for the period was attributed equally to the interest on each of the sixteen notes still outstanding?

A. It was.

Q. And as the notes were paid, the fraction varied, 1/15 and 1/14, and so on down?

A. It did.

1883 Q. The Southern Pacific Company has always kept accounts of its relation with the Central Pacific Railroad Company or the Central Pacific Railway Company?

A. It has.

Q. These checks of the Southern Pacific Company, which you have referred to as delivered to the Assistant Treasurer of the United States, were, in that accounting, charged against the Central Pacific Railroad?

A. They were.

Q. So that, in the final incidents of these payments, the payments were made by the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. The payments were made by the Southern Pacific Company for account of the Central Pacific Railroad Company.

Q. So that the payment was borne by the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. It was charged to their account.

Q. And the charge was met by the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. It was.

Q. In the same way, the transportation for which the United States gave credit against these notes was either performed over the road of the Central Pacific Railroad or else was charged against the 1884 Central Pacific Railroad Company by the Southern Pacific Company in accounting between the two companies?

A. I am not the accounting officer, and I can not tell you how that was done, actually.

Q. The money that was obtained from the refunding four per cent bonds, the mortgage of August 1, 1899, and from the three and a half per cent bonds, the mortgage of August 1, 1899, of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, was received, as a matter of banking, by the Southern Pacific Company, was it not?

A. It was.

Mr. BLAIR. What bonds are you referring to? Are you referring to the entire issue?

Mr. MCCLENNEN. No; the money received.

Mr. BLAIR. Are you referring to the entire issue or to those bonds that were returned by the United States Government?

Mr. MCCLENNEN. I am referring to the entire issue of the four per cent refunding bonds and three and a half per cent bonds, so far as they resulted in money and not in a mere exchange of securities.

Mr. BLAIR. I do not know whether the witness understood 1885 your question. That is the reason I asked.

The WITNESS. No; I did not. I——

Mr. MCCLENNEN. Let me make it clear, then.

Mr. BLAIR. Let him make his correction first.

The WITNESS. The bonds were received by me. They were sold from time to time, and the amount that we received for the bonds was credited to the account of the Central Pacific Railway Company.

Mr. BLAIR. And you are now referring to the bonds received from the United States Government on the payment of these notes?

The WITNESS. Yes.

Mr. BLAIR. And not to the entire issue of the bonds?

The WITNESS. No.

(Whereupon, at 12.30 o'clock p. m., a recess was taken until 2 o'clock p. m.)

1885-a AFTER RECESS.

ANDREW K. VAN DEVENTER, the witness under examination at the taking of recess, resumed the stand and testified further, as follows:

Cross-examination (continued) by Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. Were all of the bonds of the Central Pacific Railroad Company which had been deposited with the United States as collateral for these sixteen notes of February 1, 1899, and which were subsequently received back when checks were given to cover those various notes, subsequently sold?

A. They were all sold; yes.

Q. And all the proceeds of sale were carried to the credit of the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Yes.

Q. The Southern Pacific Company acted as the fiscal agent or banker for the Central Pacific Railroad Company in all of its money transactions, did it?

A. I do not know that I can say that it acted as banker or fiscal 1886 agent. They did just as I have said to you, they paid these notes, charged them to the Central Pacific Railway Company,

Q. That is, not being a cash transaction, it did not pass through your hands?

A. It did not pass through my hands.

Q. Only cash transactions passed through your hands?

A. Yes; the cash transactions only passed through my hands.

Q. Who would be the individual who would know to what extent that item of $1,366,442.43 was Southern Pacific Company receivable, and what portion of it was Central Pacific Railroad Company receivable, and what treatment was made of the two parts on the books of the company?

A. The controller's office.

Q. And who was the controller at that time? That would be in March, 1901.

A. William Mahl was controller at that time.

Q. Where is Mr. Mahl now?

A. His home is in the city. I do not know that he is here.

1891 Q. That is, in the city of New York?

A. Yes.

Q. Did the Central Pacific Railway Company receive the proceeds of the bonds secured by the mortgage of March 1, 1911, known as the European loan?

A. They did; yes, sir.

Q. Was that money paid directly in to the treasurer of the Central Pacific Railway Company by the brokers or syndicate, or whatever floated the loan?

A. It was paid to the Southern Pacific Company.

Q. And credited to the Central Pacific Railway Company in the accounting between the Southern Pacific Company and the Central Pacific Railway Company?

A. That is my recollection; yes.

Q. The guarantee that has been put in evidence—the guarantee of the four per cent first refunding bonds of August 1, 1899—is engraved, is it not, upon the bond itself?

A. It is.

Q. That is, it is not detachable from the bond?

A. Oh, no; it is engraved upon the bond itself.

1892 Redirect examination by Mr. BLAIR:

Q. I understand you to say that the cancelled checks of the Southern Pacific Company used in making the payments to the Government are not in existence so far as you know?

A. That is correct.

Q. Who was Mr. Chambers?

A. Mr. D. A. Chambers was our representative at Washington.

Q. By "our representative" you mean the representative of what company?

A. Of the Southern Pacific Company.

Q. How long had he been the representative of the Southern Pacific Company at Washington in 1898 and 1899? How long prior to those dates had he been the representative of the Southern Pacific Company at Washington?

A. Oh, many years, Mr. Blair. I can not state how many, but it was a good many years.

Q. What were his chief duties?

A. His duties, so far as my connection with him was concerned, were to look after the collection of the warrants and transmit them to the treasurer.

1893 Q. Warrants for what purpose?

A. For transportation services.

Q. Rendered by what company?

A. Rendered by the Southern Pacific Company.

Q. Were those warrants large in amount and frequent in number?

A. Yes; they were.

Q. Requiring him frequently to appear at the Treasury Department as representative of the Southern Pacific Company?

A. That is my understanding.

Q. You have been questioned about an endorsement appearing on the back of note No. 6, namely, "Without recourse", then a signature, and underneath the words "Acting Secretary of the Treasury", and a similar endorsement on note No. 5. Is there any such endorsement on any of the subsequently maturing fourteen notes?

A. No, sir.

Q. The endorsements on the subsequently maturing notes are of payments made on account of the note and interest?

A. On account of the notes.

Q. Let us take up the endorsements on note No. 7, which, I 1894 believe, is the note with reference to which the check that you have endeavored to fill out and state to the examiner was drawn?

A. Yes, sir; it is.

Q. Now, will you please read into the record, as an example of the character of the endorsements, the endorsement on this note No. 7?

A. "Interest paid to August 1, 1899, $44,109.54.
"Interest paid to February 1, 1900, $44,109.54.
"Interest paid to August 1, 1900, $44,109.54.
"Interest paid to February 1, 1901, $44,109.54.

"Under authority of an act of Congress approved March 3, 1901, $9,260.57 interest from February 1 to March 11, 1901, has been paid on this note by Treasury warrant No. 3431.

"Mch. 11, 1901.

"Under authority of an act of Congress approved March 3, 1901, $1,366,442.43 principal has been paid on this note by Treasury warrant No. 3431.

"March 11, 1901.

"Interest paid to August 1, 1901, $18,655.50.

"Credit on principal balance found due by settlement July 31, 1901, $432,895.93.

"Interest paid to February 1, 1902, $17,119.46.

1895 "Credit on principal, balance found due by settlement February 1, 1902, $222,552.49.

"Interest paid to date of maturity (Aug. 1, 1902), $13,781.17.

"Part payment of interest was by settlement of transportation account to Aug. 1, 1902, balance by cash, cash deposited with asst. treasurer U. S., New York, N. Y., N. Y. C. D. No. 2263.

"$918,744.93 balance of principal due Aug. 1, 1902, paid by cash deposited with asst. treasurer U. S., New York, N. Y., C. D. No. 2262."

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. Mr. Van Deventer, I see on the note No. 7, maturity date August 1, 1902, among the endorsements the following:

"Under authority of an act of Congress approved March 3, 1901, $1,366,442.43."

Will you subtract that from the total amount of interest as stated in Exhibit C, namely, $1,496,090.41, and tell me what the difference is?

A. $129,647.98.

Q. Now, divide that sum by fourteen.

A. $9,260.57.

Q. That is, the quotient is $9,260.57?

1896 A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, look on the photographic account sheets of the Government and see if you do not find $9,260.57 appearing as a credit on each of the fourteen notes, in succession.

A. I do.

Q. I think you have explained about the disposition of the bonds received back by the Southern Pacific Company on the payment of these notes to the Government, but let me see if I understand that. Those bonds, when they were returned to the Southern Pacific Company, were sold from time to time?

A. They were.

Q. And the proceeds credited to the Central Pacific Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And any balance—that is, any difference between the proceeds and the amount paid on these notes—was charged to the Central Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the bonds which were sold were the bonds which bore the guarantee of the Southern Pacific Company?

A. They were.

Q. And they are now outstanding with the guarantee of 1897 the Southern Pacific Company upon them?

A. Yes, sir; they are.

Q. My attention has been called to your answer in respect to Mr. Chambers, that he was to collect for services rendered by the Southern Pacific Company. Did you say to collect from whom?

A. I intended to say from the Government.

Q. Yes. I thought you did.

Recross-examination by Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. The guarantee to which you had reference in your last answer as to a guarantee, was this same guarantee that is engraved on the back of the bonds?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. To which you have referred in your earlier testimony?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was Mr. Chambers' official position?

A. We called him an agent of the Southern Pacific Company.

Q. He is now dead?

A. He is dead; yes, sir.

1898 Q. Did he have any work to do except to collect for Government transportation?

A. I do not know, sir.

Q. His services connected with the payment of these notes to the Government consisted merely of receiving from some one in Washington the note which you had previously covered by a check handed to the assistant treasurer or his representative here in New York?

A. The taking up of the note, the delivery to him of the collateral, and he, in turn, bringing it over here and delivering it to me.

Q. That is, the service he performed was purely that of a trusted messenger, so far as that was concerned?

A. So far as that was concerned, yes.

(Witness excused.)

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel for the defendants puts in evidence the report of the United States Pacific Railway Commission of December 1, 1887, and a message of the President of the United States—Grover Cleveland—transmitting the same, January 7, 1888, 50th Congress, first session, the same being contained in volume 2, Senate Executive Documents, first session, 50th Congress, 1887–1888.

Mr. McCLENNEN. It is agreed by counsel for both parties 1899 that this report and the President's letter of transmittal may be referred to in the original printed documents without being copied into the record.

(The documents referred to were received and marked "Defendants' Exhibit No. 31, April 15, 1915.")

Mr. BLAIR. Also Senate Report No. 293, 51st Congress, first session, submitted February 17, 1890, to accompany S. 2680, being a report from the Committee on the President's Message, transmitting report of the Pacific Railway Commission; especially that part thereof beginning with page 25 of the report relating to the Central Pacific Railroad Company, being pages 25 to 78, inclusive, of said report.

I suppose the same stipulation may be understood in respect to the waiver of the necessity of copying the original printed documents into this record.

Mr. McCLENNEN. Yes. The petitioner objects to the introduction of this report as incompetent, immaterial, and irrelevant, and objects to the purported statements of facts contained in it as proof of those facts on the ground that they are hearsay.

1900 Mr. BLAIR. Also, Senate Report No. 830, 53rd Congress, third session, submitted January 28, 1895, from the Committee on Pacific Railroads, entitled "Partial report", especially that part thereof relating to the Central Pacific Railroad Company, pages 91 to 108, inclusive, of said report.

Mr. McCLENNEN. Petitioner makes the same stipulation and the same objection to Exhibit 33 as appears above to Exhibit 32.

(The document referred to was received and marked "Defendants' Exhibit No. 33, April 15, 1915.")

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel for the defendants puts in evidence also House of Representatives Report No. 1290, 53rd Congress, second session, submitted by Mr. Reidy, from the Committee on Pacific Railroads, July 21, 1894, to accompany H. R. 7798.

Mr. McCLENNEN. The petitioner makes the same stipulation and the same objection to this as made before, as above stated, to Exhibit No. 32.

(The document referred to was received and marked "Defendants' Exhibit No. 34, April 15, 1915.")

Mr. BLAIR. The defendants also put in evidence Senate Report No. 778, 54th Congress, first session, submitted May 1, 1896, by Mr.

Gear, from the Committee on Pacific Railroads, to accompany 1901 S. 2894, and in connection with this offer the defendants put in evidence a copy of S. 2894, referred to in said report, duly certified by James M. Baker, Secretary of the Senate of the United States, under his seal, the offer including the certificate.

(Senate Report No. 778 was received and marked "Defendants' Exhibit No. 35, April 15, 1915.")

(The copy of S. 2894 was received and marked "Defendants' Exhibit No. 36, April 15, 1915", and will be found in the volume of defendants' exhibits.)

Mr. McClennen. The petitioner makes the same stipulation and the same objection as to Exhibit No. 35 as that made before, as stated above, to Exhibit No. 32.

Mr. Blair. The defendants put in evidence House of Representatives Report No. 1497, 54th Congress, first session, submitted April 25, 1896, by Mr. Powers, from the Committee on Pacific Railroads, to accompany H. R. 8189.

Mr. McClennen. The petitioner makes the same stipulation and the same objection as made to Exhibit No. 32.

(The report referred to was received and marked "Defend-1902 ants' Exhibit No. 37, April 15, 1915.")

Mr. Blair. The defendants also put in evidence a certified copy of H. R. 8189, referred to in said report, with the certificate attached thereto of South Trimble, Clerk of the House of Representatives.

(The certified copy of H. R. 8189 was received and marked "Defendants' Exhibit No. 38, April 15, 1915", and will be found in the volume of defendants' exhibits.)

Mr. Blair. The defendants also put in evidence Senate Report No. 20, 55th Congress, first session, submitted April 1, 1897, by Mr. Gear, from the Committee on Pacific Railroads, to accompany S. 119.

Mr. McClennen. The petitioner makes the same stipulation and the same objection to this Exhibit No. 39 as heretofore made to Exhibit No. 32.

(Senate Report No. 20 was received and marked "Defendants' Exhibit No. 39, April 15, 1915.")

Mr. Blair. The defendants also put in evidence a certified copy of S. 119, together with the certificate attached of James M. Baker, Secretary of the Senate of the United States.

1903 (The certified copy of S. 119 was received and marked "Defendants' Exhibit No. 40, April 15, 1915", and will be found in the volume of defendants' exhibits.)

Mr. Blair. The defendants put in evidence Senate Document No. 61, 54th Congress, second session, presented by Mr. Gear, the same being a communication from C. P. Huntington, transmitting a copy of a lease by the Central Pacific Railroad to the Southern Pacific Company and amendments thereof to date, including the amendment of 1894. The letter referred to in the preceding offer reads as follows:

"HOTEL NORMANDIE,
Washington, D. C., January 8, 1897.

"DEAR SIR: As heretofore requested by you, I send herewith a copy of the lease of the Central Pacific Railroad to the Southern Pacific Company and amendments thereto to date, viz:

"Original lease, February 17, 1885.

"Modification of lease, January 1, 1888.

"Modification of lease, December 7, 1893.

"Modification of lease, March 22, 1894.

"I remain, yours, truly,

"C. P. HUNTINGTON.

1904 "Honorable J. H. GEAR, "Chairman Railroad Committee,
"United States Senate, Washington, D. C."

The lease and amendments are those which are set forth as an exhibit to the petition in this case.

(The document referred to was received and marked "Defendants' Exhibit No. 41, April 15, 1915.")

Mr. BLAIR. The defendants put in evidence Senate Document No. 227, 56th Congress, second session, being a letter of May 12, 1900, from the Secretary of the Treasury, L. J. Gage, relating to the question of interest upon certain allowed claims for transportation services, and so forth, being a copy of the letter annexed to the answer of the defendants in this case as Exhibit C, and appearing at page 28 of said answer.

It is stipulated that for the contents of said letter reference may be made to said Exhibit C to the answer of the defendants in this case.

(The letter referred to was marked "Defendants' Exhibit No. 42, April 15, 1915.")

Mr. BLAIR. The defendants put in evidence also House of Representatives Document No. 660, 61st Congress, second session, the same being a letter from the Acting Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a copy of a communication from the Secretary of War, submitting an estimate of deficiency appropriation for transporation of the Army and supplies, especially the portion thereof on page 2, giving as one of the causes of deficiency the payment of the Southern Pacific indebtedness and the cessation of crediting of transportation charges against that indebtedness, the letter of said Acting Secretary being dated February 4, 1910.

(The document referred to was marked "Defendants' Exhibit No. 43, April 15, 1915", and will be found in the volume of defendants' exhibits.)

Mr. McClennen. Petitioner makes the same stipulation and the same objection as to Exhibit 43 as heretofore stated to defendants' Exhibit No. 32.

Mr. Blair. The defendants also put in evidence a certified copy of Senate bill No. 3522, 54th Congress, second session, introduced in the Senate January 13, 1897, by Mr. Gear, and reported January 22, 1897, with amendments, together with certificate attached thereto signed by James M. Baker, Secretary United States Senate.

1906 ants' Exhibit No. 44, April 15, 1915", and will be found in the volume of defendants' exhibits.)

Mr. Blair. Defendants also put in evidence certified copy of House of Representatives bill No. 3750, 55th Congress, first session, introduced in the House of Representatives July 12, 1897, by Mr. Hepburn, and referred to the Committee on Pacific Railroads, together with certificate attached thereto signed by South Trimble, Clerk of the House of Representatives.

(The bill referred to was marked "Defendants' Exhibit No. 45, April 15, 1915", and will be found in the volume of defendants' exhibits.)

(Whereupon an adjournment was taken until to-morrow, Friday, April 16, 1915, at eleven o'clock a. m.)

1907 TWENTY-THIRD DAY.

Room 2506, 165 Broadway,
New York City, April 16, 1915.

The hearing was resumed, pursuant to adjournment, at 11 o'clock a. m., before Frank R. Hanna, special examiner.

Present on behalf of the United States: James W. Orr, Esq., Edward F. McClennen, Esq., and Edward E. Gann, Esq., special assistants to the Attorney General.

Present on behalf of the defendants: W. F. Herrin, Esq., J. P. Blair, Esq., and Garret McEnerney, Esq., for the Southern Pacific Company.

1908 Henry Ruhlander was called as a witness on behalf of the defendants, and being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. Blair:

Q. State your residence, please, Mr. Ruhlander.

A. 15 East 48th Street, New York City.

Q. What is your occupation?

A. Banker.

Q. Are you a member of the firm of Speyer & Company?

A. I am.

Q. Is that the same firm of bankers which participated in the set tlement in 1898 and 1899 of the indebtedness of the Central Pacifi to the United States?

A. Yes; the same.

Q. And the same firm of bankers which participated in the read justment of the affairs of the Central Pacific Railroad Company about that same time?

A. Yes.

Q. Those were large transactions, even for such a house as Speye & Company, were they not?

A. Yes.

1909. Q. You were connected with the firm at that time?

A. I was.

Q. In connection with the readjustment of the affairs of the Centra Pacific, did Speyer & Company have occasion to prepare a plan o readjustment?

A. They did.

Q. You were asked to bring with you the original plan of readjust ment. Have you done so?

A. I have.

Q. Will you please produce it and exhibit it to counsel?

A. Here it is.

Mr. McCLENNEN. Is this the same text as the one set out in th answer?

Mr. BLAIR. Yes.

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. This plan of readjustment was actually carried out, Mr. Ruhlan der, in accordance with its terms?

A. Yes.

Q. Resulting in the organization of what we call the new company the Central Pacific Railway Company?

A. That is correct.

1910 Q. And the issuance of its four per cent refunding bonds an its three and a half per cent mortgage bonds?

A. Yes.

Q. And the acquisition of the common stock of the old Centra Pacific Railroad Company by the Southern Pacific Company in ex change for its stock and twenty-five per cent in bonds?

A. Yes.

Q. And the other conditions of the plan were carried out?

A. Yes; the plan was carried out.

Q. Was this plan of readjustment preceded by negotiations and conferences?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. With what interests?

A. There were very many interests. There was the Government, in the first instance; there were the bondholders for various issues, the five per cent bondholders; there were the stockholders who were represented by two different interests, the so-called American company and the so-called London committee, of which Mr. Banbury, a member of Parliament, was the chairman.

Q. This plan of readjustment was preceded by negotia-1911 tions and conferences with representatives of the Southern Pacific Company?

A. It was.

Q. Were these negotiations of an extended character—that is, did they cover a considerable period of time?

A. They did. Certainly a matter of such large volume as that would take considerable time to whittle into shape.

Q. Would it be safe to say that it extended over a period of many months?

A. Yes.

Q. Before the plan was completed?

A. Before the plan was finally agreed upon.

Q. Or before the plan was drawn up in the form in which it appears as of date, February 8, 1899?

A. Yes; that is correct.

Q. Before that period?

A. Yes.

Q. What was the occasion of this plan of readjustment? What was the necessity of the readjustment of the affairs of the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

Mr. McCLENNEN. The petitioner objects to the question as calling for a statement of opinion and a statement of facts as 1912 to part of which the witness, in the nature of things, can not have personal knowledge.

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. You may answer.

A. Primarily the settlement with the United States of the indebtedness of the company.

Q. Did Speyer & Company have any negotiations or conferences with representatives of the United States Government prior to what is known as the settlement agreement, the agreement made with the United States?

A. Yes.

Q. Were they of an extended character?

A. It took quite some time. I can not just tell how much you mean by an extended time, but probably a month or so, a month or two months.

Q. Were these two sets of conferences and negotiations going on concurrently?

A. Yes.

Q. With reference to each other?

A. Yes; absolutely. It seems to me, in the necessity of the case, they would have to go on together.

Q. And each had what common object in view?

1913 Mr. McCLENNEN. Petitioner objects to the question as calling for an opinion and for a matter which is immaterial.

The WITNESS. The adjustment of the indebtedness to the Government and the rearrangement of the debt of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, and partly an exchange of the security with the Southern Pacific Company's securities.

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel for the defendants puts in evidence a copy of the plan and agreement of readjustment, which is Exhibit B in the answer.

Mr. McCLENNEN. The petitioner, reserving the right to object to this agreement, stipulates that the copy of it contained in Exhibit B of the answer shall have the same force and effect as the original plan of readjustment, in evidence.

(The copy of the plan of readjustment was received and marked "Defendants' Exhibit (Ruhlander) No. 45–a, April 15, 1915.")

Mr. BLAIR. The witness is yours.

1914 Cross-examination by Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. Mr. Ruhlander, what you have before you is one of the original executed instruments?

A. Correct.

Q. At the front of the original instrument there is a printed circular dated February 20, 1899?

A. Yes.

Q. Was that circular bound up with the original before execution?

A. Yes.

Q. Following that circular of one page is what is styled "Central Pacific Railroad Company. Plan of readjustment", which by comparison appears to be in the language of Exhibit B of the defendants' answer in this case, and in the original that extends through page 13?

A. Yes.

Q. Following that on the original before you is a blank page, 14. Then on page 15 begins what is entitled "Central Pacific Railroad Company. Readjustment agreement"?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that extends to the end, on page 26?

1915 A. Yes.

Q. And the only signatures in execution of this are those at the end of the whole instrument, on page 26?

A. Yes.

Q. Will you read into the record the names of the parties who executed the instrument?

A. Do you want me to do that?

Q. Yes; just read them right from that copy.

A. They are as follows: Speyer & Company; Speyer Brothers; Laz, Speyer Ellissen; Deutsche Bank; Teixeira de Mattos Brothers; Speyer & Co., depositary.

Q. The circular which constitutes page 1 of this original instrument is dated February 20, 1899?

A. Yes.

Q. On what date, as nearly as you can fix it, were the signatures affixed to this instrument?

A. On what date?

Q. Yes.

A. I should say during the month of February; I can not make a positive statement, but I should say approximately.

Q. And undoubtedly, I take it, subsequent to the seventh day of February, the document being dated February 8th?

1916 A. I should say that was so.

Q. Did you personally have to do with the negotiations which led up to the making of this readjustment agreement dated February 8th?

A. I was consulted at the time by my chief, but I did not take part in the negotiations with the interests.

Q. Who were the individuals of Speyer & Company or Speyer & Company's offices, or who was the individual who dealt with the other parties in interest?

A. Mr. James Speyer.

Q. Is he living?

A. Yes.

Q. Where is he now?

A. He is a resident of New York City.

Q. Did you meet any representative of the United States Government in these negotiations?

A. I met them and shook hands with them once, and that is about all I had to do with it.

Q. Were you personally at any negotiations between any representative of the Government and others in interest?

A. No.

Q. You have no personal knowledge—using the word 1917 "knowledge" in its precise sense—have you, that this plan of readjustment was seen by any representative of the United States Government?

A. I am sure it was.

Mr. McCLENNEN. I should like to ask to have that stricken out as not responsive.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. Did you ever mail this plan of readjustment to any representative of the United States Government?

A. Did I personally ever mail it?

Q. Yes.

A. I would not be able to remember that, whether I did or did not.

Q. Did you ever see it handed to any representative of the United States Government?

A. No; I can not say that I did; no.

Q. Then, disregarding what your beliefs may be on the subject, is it not a fact that you have no direct personal knowledge that any representative of the United States Government saw the plan of readjustment—using "knowledge" to exclude what may have been told you?

1918 A. I am absolutely sure they did, because the representatives of the Government was frequently at our office when we were discussing the plan.

Mr. McCLENNEN. Petitioner moves to strike that answer out as not responsive.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. You appreciate, do you not, the distinction between firm convictions and absolute knowledge from your own eyesight?

A. I certainly do.

Q. Using "knowledge" in the strict sense, is it not true that you have no knowledge that any representative of the United States Government saw the plan of readjustment?

A. Yes; I am positive that they did see it. That is all I can tell you. When you ask me whether I saw them hand it to them, I did not.

Mr. McCLENNEN. The petitioner moves to strike out the answer as not responsive.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. Do you know what individuals purporting to represent the United States Government conducted or participated in the negotiations with Speyer & Company or the representatives of the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

1919 A. My recollection is—it is a long while ago—that the first conference took place at Washington. I was not present, so that I do not know who represented the Government.

Q. In any later negotiations do you know who represented the Government?

A. I know Mr. Root had something to say about it as counsel for the Government.

Q. That is, Mr. Elihu Root?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know of any one else who had anything to do with it as representing the United States?

A. Why, I think the records will show that it was in the hands of a commission at the time, representing the United States Government; and while I will not be positive, my opinion is that Mr. Bliss, Mr. Lyman J. Gage, and some third party—I can not recall them for the moment—represented them.

Mr. BLAIR. The Attorney General?

The WITNESS. Attorney General Griggs.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. Did you see Mr. Root when in negotiation on this subject?

1920 A. I saw him in our office, but I took no part in the negotiation.

Q. Did you see Mr. Bliss, Mr. Gage, or Mr. Griggs?

A. No.

Q. You never saw a copy of this plan of readjustment in the hands of Mr. Root?

A. No.

Q. When, as nearly as you can fix it, did the negotiations which led to the execution of the agreement between the United States and the Central Pacific Railroad and Speyer & Company, dated February 1, 1899, copy of which constitutes Exhibit A of the answer, begin?

A. I should say, in a general way, several months before that time. When you pin me down to how long, I can not give you any definite answer.

Q. You mean something more than one and less than six, perhaps?

A. That is about it.

Q. And the negotiations in which Mr. Root was engaged when you saw him at the office of Speyer & Company were the negotiations which resulted in the execution of that agreement of February 1?

1921 A. I understood that Mr. Root was acting as counsel for the commission, and I do not know whether he had anything to do with the working of the plan itself, the mapping out of it, or whether he merely looked after the details from the legal point of view, a the principles of the plan had been agreed upon.

Q. I see. That is, he may have been merely——

A. He may have been merely counsel.

Q. And put into definite legal shape——

A. And put into definite legal shape what had been agreed u with the United States Government.

Q. Who were the counsel for Speyer & Company in the matter this same agreement of February 1, 1899?

A. May I look at the agreement?

Q. Certainly.

A. The firm names have since been changed. At that time it w
Stewart, Guthrie & Steele, which is no longer in existence, and Evar Choate & Beaman, no longer in existence.

Q. Do you know who, of those respective firms, had to do with th matter?

A. Yes.

Q. Who?

1922 A. Messrs. Beaman and Steele.

Q. That is, Mr. Beaman, of Evarts, Choate & Beaman, a
Mr. Steele, of Stewart, Guthrie & Steele?

A. Yes.

Q. Mr. Beaman is no longer living?

A. He is dead.

Q. And Mr. Steele?

A. He is a partner of J. P. Morgan & Company now.

Q. Who were the counsel for the Central Pacific Railroad Com pany or the Southern Pacific Company in those negotiations?

A. I should say that Mr. Charles H. Tweed was the general counse and he looked after matters. I do not know whether they had em ployed any special counsel in this connection, but he was their ge eral counsel.

Q. Who were the individuals connected with those two companies other than counsel, who were the negotiators in these transactions?

A. I should say on behalf of the company the leading spirit was th late C. P. Huntington.

Q. When was the text of this plan of readjustment, dated Febru ary 8, 1899, got into final shape?

A. I could not give you the exact date, but approximately at that time.

1923 Q. In the course of the negotiations there were many differ ent methods discussed of arriving at the results sought, were there not?

A. Yes, sir.

Redirect examination by Mr. BLAIR:

Q. Mr. Ruhlander, this plan of readjustment about which you ve been testifying and which we have offered in evidence as pro- ced by you is annexed as a part of a readjustment agreement, is not?

A. Yes.

Q. And that readjustment agreement is signed and executed by at are called in the plan the syndicate managers, or something like it, is it not?

A. The readjustment managers.

Q. The readjustment managers. And the readjustment agreement what you might call the agreement between the underwriters of the an, is it not?

A. No; that is an agreement between the security holders who de- sited their securities to enable the readjustment managers to carry out the plan.

924 Q. It is not part of the plan of readjustment itself except to the extent to which you have stated?

A. That is right.

(Witness excused.)

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel for the defendants put in evidence the articles f association of the Central Pacific Railway Company dated July , 1899, an amendment of April 2, 1900, and amendment of Feb- ary 24, 1912.

It is stipulated that the printed copy may be put in evidence in eu of the original.

(The pamphlet referred to was received and marked "Defendants' Exhibit No. 46, April 16, 1915", and will be found in the volume of efendants' exhibits.)

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel for defendants put in evidence the deed of onveyance of July 29, 1899, from the Central Pacific Railroad Com- any to the Central Pacific Railway Company. It is agreed that in eu of the original there may be copied into the exhibits the copy of ich deed of conveyance found in the Union Pacific merger record, olume 8, page 3834.

(The copy of the deed of conveyance referred to was received and arked "Defendants' Exhibit No. 47, April 16, 1915", and will be found in the volume of defendants' exhibits.)

925 Mr. BLAIR. Counsel for defendants put in evidence in- denture dated August 1, 1899, of the Southern Pacific Com- any to the Central Trust Company of New York, subordinating the outhern Pacific Company's lease of the Central Pacific Railroad ompany's property to the lien of the first refunding mortgage of he Central Pacific Railway Company.

It is agreed that in lieu of the original there may be copied into the record the copy of this indenture to be found in the Union Pacific merger record, volume 8, page 3852.

(The indenture referred to was received in evidence and marked "Defendants' Exhibit No. 48, April 16, 1915", and will be found in the volume of defendants' exhibits.)

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel for defendants put in evidence a similar indenture dated August 1, 1899, of the Southern Pacific Company to the Central Trust Company of New York, subordinating its lease of the Central Pacific Railroad Company's property to the lien of the mortgage of the Central Pacific Railway Company securing its issue of three and a half per cent bonds.

It is likewise stipulated that, in lieu of the original, there may be copied into the exhibits the copy of said indenture to be found 1926 in the Union Pacific merger record, volume 8, page 3855.

(The indenture referred to was received in evidence and marked "Defendants' Exhibit No. 49, April 16, 1915", and will be found in the volume of defendants' exhibits.)

Mr. BLAIR. In support of its pleas of res adjudicata and estoppel of record contained in the answer, and also as conclusive evidence of the existence at the time of the Union Pacific merger in 1901 of actual and vigorous competition between the so-called Ogden route and the Sunset line or the Sunset-Gulf route, and of the absence of motive or power in the Southern Pacific Company to prevent such competition, counsel for the defendants now put in evidence the record in the suit of the United States versus the Union Pacific Railroad Company, the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company, and various other defendants whose names will appear from the document offered in evidence, said suit being numbered 993 in equity in the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Utah, viz:

Original petition of the United States of America.

Answer of the defendants Edward H. Harriman, Southern Pacific Company, joint and several answer of the defendants Union Pacific Railroad Company, Oregon Short Line Rail-1927 road Company, and Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company; joint and several answer of the defendants William A. Clark and of the San Pedro, Los Angeles & Salt Lake Railroad Company; separate answer of the defendants the Farmers Loan & Trust Company, Henry C. Frick, the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway Company, Henry H. Rogers, James Stillman; and the joint and several answer of Jacob H. Schiff and Otto H. Kahn, and the replications of the United States to the several answers, being all the answers filed in the case.

The opinion and decree of the United States Circuit Court for the District of Utah in said cause, of date June 24, 1911, and reported in the 188th Federal Reporter, page 102, and following.

The opinion and decree of the United States Supreme Court on appeal of the said case, rendered December 2, 1912, reported in volume 226 of the United States Reports at page 61 and following.

The supplemental opinion and decree of the United States Supreme Court rendered January 6, 1913, upon the motion as to form of mandate in said cause, reported in 226 U. S. Reports, page 470 and following.

The decree entered in the District Court of the United 1928 States for the District of Utah in said cause, dated February 12, 1913.

The final decree entered in the District Court of the United States for the District of Utah in this case, dated June 30, 1913.

The brief of facts filed in the United States Supreme Court on behalf of the United States of America, by George W. Wickersham, Attorney General, Frank B. Kellogg and C. A. Severance, special assistants to the Attorney General; and the brief of law of the same party by the same counsel.

Mr. McCLENNEN. The petitioner objects to the evidence offered, on the ground that it is immaterial.

Mr. BLAIR. It is stipulated, subject to this objection, that the pleadings in said cause offered need not be produced in the form of copies certified by the clerk of the court, but may be copied into this record from the printed record in the Union Pacific merger suit.

It is further stipulated that the opinion and decree of the United States Circuit Court of June 24, 1911, need not be copied into the transcript, but may be referred to as reported in the 188th Federal Reporter, page 102 and following; and, further, that the 1929 opinions and decrees of the United States Supreme Court included in the offer of the record need not be copied into the record, but may be referred to in the officially printed volume of the reports of said court.

The production of a certified copy of the decree of the District Court of the United States for the District of Utah of February 12, 1913, and the final decree of June 30, 1913, is waived, and the printed copies produced may be received in lieu of such certified copies.

It is mutually agreed that either party may supply any omissions in the pleadings or decrees or orders in said court which may not have been included in the foregoing offer.

It is stipulated further that the briefs offered in evidence need not be copied among the exhibits in this case, and that in event of appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States the briefs forming part of the record of said court may be referred to, and that the copies of these briefs need not be copied into the transcript of appeal.

(The documents offered in evidence, as above stated, were marked collectively, "Defendants' Exhibit No. 50, April 16, 1915", and with the exception of those not to be copied, according to the terms of the above stipulations, will be found in the volume of defendants' exhibits.)

1930 HUGH NEILL was recalled as a witness on behalf of the defendants, and having been previously sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. BLAIR:

Q. Mr. Neill, what is your connection with the Pacific Mail Steamship Company?

A. I am secretary of that company.

Q. Did you hold that office in May, 1914?

A. I did.

Q. Were there any resolutions adopted by the directors of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company about that time, in respect to a change in the business of that company after the opening of the Panama Canal?

A. There was a resolution.

Q. What was the date of the meeting at which the resolution was passed?

A. At a meeting of the board of directors held May 7, 1914, such a resolution was passed.

Q. Was there more than one resolution? Was there a resolution in regard to sending out a letter?

A. There was a second resolution adopted with reference 1931 to a letter to be sent out to the stockholders.

Q. Have you produced a certified copy of the second resolution to which you have referred, about the distribution of a letter?

A. I have prepared a certified copy of that resolution.

Q. Have you annexed to it as an exhibit a copy of the letter referred to in the resolution?

A. I annexed to the resolution, marked "Exhibit A," a printed copy of the letter referred to in the resolution itself.

Q. The resolution refers to a meeting of the stockholders. Have you annexed as an exhibit a true copy of the notice of the meeting of the stockholders which was sent out?

A. I annexed to the resolution, marked "Exhibit B", a copy of the printed notice of the meeting that was forwarded by United States mail to each stockholder of the company prior to the meeting.

Q. Have you annexed also a copy of the blank form of proxy ich was sent out to each stockholder?

A. I have annexed, marked "Exhibit C", a copy of the form of proxy that was sent out to each stockholder.

32 Q. Were the letter to which you refer, the notice of the stockholders' meeting, and the proxy, all enclosed at the same ne to the stockholders?

A. They were all enclosed in the same envelope.

Q. Did the envelope also contain the printed copy of the set of solutions of May 7th?

A. It did.

Q. Have you also produced a certified copy of the minutes of the eeting of the stockholders held pursuant to the notice?

A. Yes, sir; I have produced a certified copy of the minutes of e stockholders' meeting held May 27, 1914, it being a meeting that as held pursuant to the notice.

Q. Were you present at that meeting?

A. Yes; I was.

Q. And you acted as secretary?

A. I acted as secretary of the meeting.

Q. And you were present at the meeting of the directors and rved as secretary to that meeting?

A. I was present and served as secretary.

Q. And these papers which you have produced and certified to e true and correct copies of the originals?

A. They are.

33 Mr. BLAIR. Counsel for the defendants put in evidence the documents just identified by the witness, namely, the certified pies of the two resolutions adopted by the board of directors of the acific Mail Steamship Company May 7, 1914, together with the hibits attached thereto, including the circular letter dated New ork, May 7, 1914, signed "Julius Kruttschnitt, President", the no-ce of meeting, the blank form of proxy, and the certified copy of ie resolution of the stockholders of May 27, 1914.

(The documents above referred to were received in evidence and arked "Defendants' Exhibit (Neill) No. 51, April 16, 1915", and ill be found in the volume of defendants' exhibits.)

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. Mr. Neill, can you tell us the amount of stock at such meeting f stockholders which was held by the Southern Pacific Company?

A. The Southern Pacific Company was represented at that meet-ng by 110,755 shares, which were voted by its proxy.

Q. Will you please state the amount of stock other than that wned by the Southern Pacific Company which was represented

1934 at that meeting, whether by proxy or otherwise; or, if yo have got it separately, put the two together.

A. At the commencement of the meeting there were 30,820 share of stock represented in person or by proxy, those shares being owne by stockholders other than the Southern Pacific Company.

Q. By what vote was the resolution of the stockholders approv ing the recommendation of the board of directors adopted?

A. The resolution about the readjustment of the business wa adopted by a favorable vote of 135,250 shares.

Q. What was the number of shares voting against it?

A. The number of shares voting against it was 6,340. There wa present one stockholder owning 150 shares who preferred not to ca a vote.

Q. How much stock not owned by the Southern Pacific Compan voted for the resolution?

A. 24,495 shares.

Q. How much stock not owned by the Southern Pacific Compan voted against the resolution?

A. 6,340 shares.

Cross-examination by Mr. McCLENNEN:

1935 Q. Of those 24,495 shares, were there any shares in whi the Southern Pacific Company or any of its officers had an interest?

A. Some of those shares were owned by directors of the Pacif Mail Steamship Company. Some of them were owned by person who had not connection with the Southern Pacific Company. That is as far as I can answer your question.

Q. If you exclude those classes that you have just mentioned, d you know how many shares there would be left of that 24,495?

A. I have made no compilation of that. It would require som time to do it.

Q. Do you know enough of the matter to know whether it woul be a large or a small part?

A. A comparatively small number of shares. The holdings of th directors were not large.

Q. I am afraid we have spoken at cross purposes. What I asked yo was whether, excepting that held by the directors or those connecte with the Southern Pacific Company in some way, the remainin number would be large or small.

A. The remaining number would be large.

Q. I was afraid you misunderstood me. To put it again, t 1936 make it perfectly clear: The more substantial part of the 24,49 shares is entirely disconnected with the Pacific Mail Steamsh

Company or the Southern Pacific Company, or persons interested in either as officers or employees?

A. That is entirely correct.

(Witness excused.)

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel for the defendants put in evidence certified copies of the application of the Southern Pacific Company to the Interstate Commerce Commission, under the provisions of section 5 of the act to regulate commerce, as amended by section 11 of "An act to provide for the opening, maintenance, protection, and operation of the Panama Canal, and the sanitation and government of the Canal Zone", approved August 24, 1912, in connection with the operation of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, filed with said Interstate Commerce Commission February 18, 1914, under its docket number, 6605, and an amendment of said application filed December 7, 1914, and a further amendment of said application filed May 21, 1914, and a third amendment to said application filed April 2, 1915.

Counsel for the defendants also put in evidence the report of the Interstate Commerce Commission upon said application.

1937 It is stipulated and agreed that the reports of the commission just put in evidence need not be put into the record as exhibits, but may be referred to in the officially printed and bound volumes of reports of the Interstate Commerce Commission, with the same effect as if the same had been incorporated in the record.

(Whereupon, an adjournment was taken until Monday, April 19, 1915, at eleven o'clock a. m.)

1938 TWENTY-FOURTH DAY.

ROOM 2506, 165 BROADWAY,
New York City, Monday, April 19, 1915.

The hearing was resumed, pursuant to adjournment, at 11 o'clock a. m., before Frank R. Hanna, special examiner.

Present on behalf of the United States: James W. Orr, Esq., Edward F. McClennen, Esq., and Edward E. Gann, Esq., special assistants to the Attorney General.

Present on behalf of the defendants: W. F. Herrin, Esq., J. P. Blair, Esq., and Garret McEnerney, Esq., for the Southern Pacific Company.

1939 EDWARD CHAMBERS was called as a witness on behalf of the defendants, and having been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Where do you reside?

A. Chicago.

Q. What is your occupation?

A. I am vice president of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Rai way Company—the Santa Fe Railway system—and in charge of i traffic.

Q. How long have you been with that company?

A. Thirty-six years.

Q. Did you have any railroad experience before you entered t employ of the Santa Fe?

A. No, sir.

Q. What has been, generally, your duty and responsibility duri your employment, beginning from the first and coming down, in general way?

A. I began with the Santa Fe at Pueblo, Colorado, in the stati service, in 1879, and remained there until 1885. I served in all t positions at the station except agent.

1940 From 1885 to 1887 I was local agent for the Santa Fe at S Diego, California, and had charge of its depot business, u yards, and the commercial business in the city.

From 1887 to 1894 I was local agent at Los Angeles, in charge the depot business and the yards and the commercial business the city.

From 1894 to 1896 I was assistant general freight agent of t Santa Fe lines in southern California.

Q. Covering what lines?

A. Covering the lines south of Barstow, California; approximate 500 miles of rails.

From 1896 to 1905 I was general freight agent for the lines co trolled by the Santa Fe system west of Albuquerque, New Mexi which included their California lines.

At first my jurisdiction covered lines in California only. Afte wards there were added the lines between Albuquerque, New Mexi and Mojave, California, and afterwards there were added to m jurisdiction the lines in northern California known as the San Fra cisco and San Joaquin Valley lines.

Q. That brings you down to 1905.

1941 A. From 1905 until 1913, with headquarters in San Francis I was assistant freight traffic manager of the Santa Fe sy tem. I had charge of the local business of the lines west of Alb querque, New Mexico, and the through business between points the lines west of Albuquerque, and other points on the Santa F system lines and beyond.

From 1913 up to date I have been vice president of the Santa F system, in charge of all its traffic.

Q. Both passenger and freight?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Outside of your supervision of traffic, have you any duties as to general policy, the construction of lines, or anything like that?

A. I am usually consulted before new lines are constructed or acquired.

Q. How long have you been in position where your views were taken, and you engaged in the conferences which were considering the construction of new lines?

A. As to the western end of the Santa Fe, since 1896; and as to all points on the Santa Fe system, since I become vice president in 1913.

Q. Are you familiar with the lines of railway operated by the Southern Pacific Company?

1942 A. Yes, sir.

Q. You know, generally, that those lines consist of what main lines? You may give them.

A. The line from San Francisco via Sacramento to Ogden and from San Francisco through the San Joaquin Valley via the Coast Line, through Los Angeles to El Paso, and the line from El Paso to Galveston and running to New York; the Texas lines—lines within Texas.

Q. Any lines north of San Francisco?

A. And the line from San Francisco to Portland.

Q. To Portland, Oregon?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are familiar with the country served by those lines, are you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And have been for a number of years?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have frequently been over these lines, have you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. After the building of the Central Pacific main line connecting from San Francisco to Ogden, what would naturally be the 1943 next step in railroad development or construction to be taken concerning that line?

A. Building feeders for that line through the valleys of northern California.

Q. What, if any, lines southerly from the Central Pacific main line would you regard as feeders?

A. The line south through the San Joaquin Valley, through to Los Angeles, connecting northern and southern California.

Q. How far north would you go for these lines as feeders?

A. The line that is south into the Salinas Valley and north of Sacramento into the Sacramento Valley.

Q. How far north would the line be constructed as a feeder, nat rally, from Sacramento?

A. As a feeder, up to the Oregon line.

Q. You will remember, as a matter of railroad history, if you not know personally, that when the Central Pacific main line w opened in 1869 there was no other transcontinental rail line and th the first transcontinental line other than the Central Pacific w formed by the junction of the Santa Fe at Deming, New Mexi with the Southern Pacific in 1881.

1944 What would you say as to the construction of the line sou erly from Los Angeles to Deming, which was constructed, to whether that would be a natural, congruous development of ra road building as a part of this system of which the Central Paci main line was a nucleus in the beginning?

A. I think that would be the natural and businesslike move make, to extend the line from southern California eastward throu Arizona.

Q. The Texas Pacific line—you know the location of that, do yo

A. Yes.

Q. Extending from Sierra Blanca on the Southern Pacific li eastward to what point?

A. To Texarkana, Arkansas.

Q. Now, I will remind you, as a historical fact, that the junctio of the Texas Pacific was made with the Southern Pacific line Sierra Blanca in 1882. What would you say as to the extension the Southern Pacific line eastwardly from Sierra Blanca upon th route it was built upon to Houston, forming connection with th lines built between Houston and New Orleans?

1945 A. I would say that at that time the natural thing to do a the business thing for the Southern Pacific to do was to ge through line between California and New York, and the extension their line eastward was the desirable thing to do.

Q. Eastward to what point?

A. Well, to New Orleans. New Orleans is where they first e tended it to.

Q. To some point on the Gulf of Mexico?

A. Yes.

Q. Did the business needs of that country which is served by th line—which, of course, includes California, the local territory, an whatever traffic might be gained on that line—did those busine needs justify the construction of that line at that time?

A. They did. At that time, and for some years afterwards, the At lantic seaboard territory supplied the manufactured merchandise fo the entire Pacific coast and took all the Pacific coast products, great bulk of them, perhaps seventy-five to eighty per cent of the

Q. Was there any other line that could have been built at that time, first, after the construction of the Central Pacific, which would have been more practicable or a better line for railroad pur-1946 poses or for the service of the public than the Southern Pacific line from Goshen to New Orleans?

A. I think that was the best line that the Southern Pacific could build to serve all their purposes; of course, any through line would have been beneficial.

Q. You spoke of the purposes of the Southern Pacific. My question called for your consideration of the service to the public also. Do you include that?

A. That would include the service to the public.

Q. Do you remember when the Southern Pacific line was opened for operation in 1883?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember, generally, what amount of traffic that line obtained, transcontinental traffic, between the Atlantic seaboard and the Pacific coast, as compared with the like traffic served by the Central and Union Pacific and connecting lines?

A. Well, I am not so familiar with what they obtained in 1883, because I was not acquainted with the California business to any great extent at that time, although I was acquainted with the business down over the Southern Pacific lines via Deming and via Mojave, in connection with the Santa Fe.

1947 Q. Do you know whether or not the Sunset line, as we call it, got any considerable amount of transcontinental traffic between the Atlantic coast and the Pacific coast?

A. It did.

Q. It did at first?

A. I think it did at first. In 1885 and afterwards, when I first became acquainted with the California business so as to judge of that, they were getting a very large share of the business between California points and the Atlantic seaboard territory.

Q. You say it had a large share. What other lines took the rest of it in 1885?

A. When I say a large share of that business, I include, of course, the Sunset Route and the route via Ogden to the Atlantic seaboard. The only other route into California in 1885 was the Santa Fe, and they got a small share of the Atlantic seaboard business.

Q. In 1885 the Santa Fe only touched southern California?

A. That is all.

Q. And it entered northern California at what date?

A. It entered northern California by connection over the Southern Pacific rails in 1884.

1948 Q. But with its own line?

A. With its own line in 1899.

Q. So, even before the Santa Fe had its own rails in northern California, it was doing business in northern California by traffic connection with the Southern Pacific?

A. It was.

Q. And it did some considerable business that way, did it not, before it had its own rails?

A. It did.

Q. When you say the Sunset Route had a large share of the business, do you mean as much as half or more of this transcontinental business?

A. You mean of the Atlantic seaboard business?

Q. Of the Atlantic seaboard business with San Francisco and the Pacific coast.

A. Of the westbound Atlantic seaboard business they had considerably more than one-half; probably as high as eighty or ninety per cent of it.

Q. How do you account for their securing eighty or ninety per cent of that business as against the all-rail lines that connected via the Union Pacific at Omaha?

1949 A. The service was very much better via the Sunset Route than via any of the other routes to California.

Q. Can you explain how it was better?

A. It was under a single management between New York and California and had through billing and gave the traffic continuous movement in both directions.

Q. And was it more expeditious as to time?

A. It was more expeditious and more regular.

Q. As a general proposition, I suppose service controls traffic, does it not?

A. Service is the most important factor in the routing of traffic.

Q. It is the controlling factor?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. After this Southern Pacific Sunset-Gulf route obtained the eighty to ninety per cent of this transcontinental traffic, was there a change in that division as between that line and the all-rail lines? If so, how was that brought about?

A. As the service of the all-rail lines via Chicago and St. Louis improved, the traffic was attracted from the Sunset Route to the all-rail lines until finally the all-rail lines got what I would consider a reasonable share of the traffic in their competition with 1950 the Sunset Route.

Q. Did you have anything to do personally with improving the service by the all-rail lines to compete with the Sunset-Gulf line?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. State what that was.

A. It was during my service as local agent at Los Angeles. We made an arrangement with the Erie Railroad to waybill through from New York to the Pacific coast points, and to run through cars wherever it could be done, based on the volume of business received. That gave us just one interchange or one connection, which was at Chicago. The Santa Fe lines at that time extended from Kansas City to Chicago. This arrangement gave us a service that enabled us to start in and compete with the Sunset Route, and gradually work it up to such a point where we could about equal their service.

Q. As to time?

A. As to time, and as to the other things that go to make up service.

Q. About what date was that?

A. That was about 1888. It was 1889 or 1890.

1951 Q. You speak of through billing; that you had an arrangement by which the Santa Fe, which extended from California to Chicago, there connecting with the Erie, which connected New York and Chicago, through-billed the freight. Was that done generally by these all-rail carriers at that time—through billing?

A. No. I think the Erie-Santa Fe arrangement was the first through billing in connection with the all-rail lines.

Q. What was the practice before that by other carriers?

A. The practice before that was for each line to make its own waybill and collect its proportion of the joint rate from the connecting carrier, so that when the freight arrived at its destination you had, except the proportion of the rate for the delivering line, the balance of the charges as advance charges; so that if any overcharge existed in these advance charges, you had to go back to the railroad that caused the overcharge in order to get an adjustment. In the through billing the total rate was used and the total charges extended, and the delivering agent could correct the charges from the destination back to the point of origin.

Q. This local billing was a very cumbersome method apparently?

1952 A. It was a very cumbersome and very unsatisfactory method, because it caused a great delay in the settlement of overcharges.

Q. And that is one subject upon which much friction may arise, if it is not taken care of properly, is it not—the settlement of claims of the shippers?

A. Yes, sir. That was one strong point in favor of the Sunset Route. The delivering agent, whether it was at Los Angeles or an[illegible] point anywhere on the Southern Pacific lines in California, could adjust any error that was made in the billing with respect to the charges, right back to the point of origin.

Q. How soon, if you remember, did the all-rail lines generally between the Atlantic and Pacific coasts, adopt this practice of through billing such as you put in force on the Erie and the Santa Fe?

A. I think generally about 1900 and afterwards.

Q. Or was it 1890? Was it as late as that—about 1900?

A. I mean, to get them all in. It took quite a long time for all the roads to get adjusted. They came in one after another. I think after the Santa Fe came the route via Ogden and Omaha.

1953 Q. That resulted in an improvement of the all-rail service, of course?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did it also result in the diminishing of the proportion of this traffic which was obtained by the Sunset-Gulf route and the taking of a considerable portion of that traffic for the all-rail lines?

A. It did.

Q. What is practically the field of competition now open between carriers where each may serve the same traffic?

A. Do you mean the field that is open to them——

Q. I mean, how can these carriers compete—include everything by which they can compete; any means by which they can compete with each other.

A. The most important feature in the competition between the carriers is the service. That is probably looked after closer to-day than ever before, and the whole country, both east and west bound, as to its competitive traffic, is covered with joint rates that are open to practically all carriers.

Q. The joint rates filed under the law practically cover all possible routes, do they not?

A. Yes, sir.

1954 Q. You said practically all the means was by way of the service or to improve the service. What would you say as to rates? Is that now a possible means of competition—the reduction of rates generally?

A. Generally it is not possible nowadays for one carrier to get any advantage over the other in the making of the rates, because it requires forty to fifty days of publicity before the rates can become effective; that is, where you make a change.

Q. How about the possibility, financially or economically, of reducing these rates generally that are now in force?

A. I would say the rates were down to a level where they can not stand any further reduction without a serious financial embarrassment to the carriers generally.

Q. Is it or is it not a fact that the present level of the transcontinental rates has been in effect for the last decade—ten or more years—without substantial change or material change?

A. Yes.

Q. So the present level has been maintained for that period?

1955 A. The present level of transcontinental rates has been; yes, sir.

Q. The carriers have made some applications to the Interstate Commerce Commission for leave to reduce transcontinental rates as to certain classes of traffic without affecting the intermediate rates, as far as possible. Now, that is an application to reduce rates, is it not, to some extent?

A. The application is practically asking the commission for permission to meet the rates of the water carriers at the terminals without disturbing the reasonable rates at the intermediate points.

Q. But it is a reduction of the through rate, is it not?

A. It is a reduction of the through rate.

Q. And what I wanted to call your attention to was the consideration of that fact in connection with your statement that you could not generally reduce these rates without disturbing the finances of these roads or tending towards their bankruptcy.

A. This is a new condition that confronts us now; with the opening of the Panama Canal the rates of the water carriers have gone lower than they were before, and the level that we had set to 1956 meet the competition before the canal opened has got to be changed; it has got to be lowered in order to meet the existing competition of the water carriers.

Q. But that only affects a small part of the whole traffic of the roads?

A. A small portion; yes, sir.

Q. And it does not amount to a general lowering of all of these rates?

A. No, sir; just the lowering of the rates on traffic that the water carriers carry in large volume.

Q. It is a condition which forces these carriers to either make that reduction or else go out of the business as to these classes of traffic?

A. Yes, sir; that is correct.

Q. You have said that service is the controlling factor as to the routing of traffic. I would like to have you state what service consists of. What was in your mind when you spoke of service?

A. The time en route is the most important point.

Q. Expedition as to time is important?

A. Yes.

Q. Is there anything else going with service, that is a part of it, material to be considered?

1957 A. The receiving and delivering facilities of the carriers a quite important as factors in the service.

Q. Is there anything else? You spoke of the settlement of clai of shippers. Has that anything to do with it?

A. That is, I should say, part of the service.

Q. Do you consider that——

A. In fact, the general dealings with the shipper are all includ in the service.

Q. The service, then, includes the dealings with the shipper co cerning his shipments?

A. Yes.

Q. That would include the prompt and fair settlement of clai for damage, and so forth?

A. It includes everything that means money to the shipper.

Q. It means everything in which he is interested?

A. Yes.

Q. How much of a factor is solicitation, in and of itself? Is th a controlling factor?

A. Solicitation has some bearing on the securing of business, ever thing else being equal; but it must be backed up by equal 1958 good service as that given by the competitor; otherwise solic tation has but little effect.

Q. Solicitation without being backed up with an equivalent servi to that of the competing line would not amount to much?

A. It has no material effect.

Q. I will ask you whether solicitation may or may not be define as advertising, or bringing to the knowledge of the shipper th service you are able to give him?

A. Yes; and the other things that a salesman usually passes out t a customer.

Q. It is advertising your goods?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you considered the effects or result of a separation of th
Central Pacific lines from the other lines operated by the Southe Pacific Company?

A. In a general way; yes, sir.

Q. What would be the effect of that separation? By "separation"
I mean putting the ownership and management of the Centra Pacific in separate and independent hands. What would be the effe of that separation as to rates?

Mr. McCLENNEN. The petitioner objects to the question a 1959 incompetent, immaterial, and irrelevant, calling upon the wi ness for an opinion which, by his previous answer, it does no appear that he is qualified to express, and for an opinion based upo facts not sufficiently certainly incorporated in the question, so that it may be known to the court upon what facts he bases the opinion.

(By request the reporter repeated the pending question, as above recorded.)

The WITNESS. It would have a tendency to increase the rates. It necessarily would increase some of the rates.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Do you speak of local rates as contradistinguished from transcontinental rates?

A. Local rates; that is, the rates that now exist as between the Southern Pacific and the Central Pacific stations in California and other places.

Q. Or in the local territory?

A. Or in the local territory.

Q. Why would that separation have a tendency to increase rates?

A. It would make in many cases a two-line haul where a single-line haul now exists under the present system.

1960 Q. And does that, generally, a double service, justify a higher rate for the same distance than is justified by a single service?

A. That is the general rule.

Q. What effect would this separation have as to service to the public?

Mr. MCCLENNEN. The petitioner objects to the question as incompetent, immaterial, and irrelevant; calling upon the witness for an opinion which, by his previous answer, it does not appear that he is qualified to express, and for an opinion based upon facts not sufficiently certainly incorporated into the question so that it may be known to the court upon what facts he bases the opinion.

The WITNESS. It would impair both the freight and the passenger service, I would say.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Will you explain more fully how it would impair that service?

A. It would require transfers where none now exist, and it would require the separate service of the Central Pacific and the Southern Pacific to perform a haul which the single line now performs; and it would disarrange the train service generally. I do not see 1961 how any other result could come, where the lines are separated, especially in the California territory.

Q. Is it possible or practicable to do away with these disadvantages you have mentioned by traffic arrangements between the two companies, operating on the one hand the Southern Pacific lines and on the other hand the Central Pacific lines?

A. You might do away with a few, but it is not practicable to away with all.

Q. What would be the result or necessity as to terminals, wh one company now owns the terminal and the other company has terminal at that point, and vice versa, or where lines are absolut disconnected by this separation of these properties? I refer to t branch lines owned by the Southern Pacific Railroad Compa which connect only with the lines of the Central Pacific, and not all with the other lines of the Southern Pacific Railroad Compa What must result from the separation of those lines with respect those terminals and those disconnected lines?

A. I would say, at the common points where the terminals owned by the one company, that it would either require a separ terminal constructed by the other company or the arrangeme 1962 for the joint use of the existing terminal. In either case would say it would mean an increase in the cost of doing t same business.

As to the short lines, in some cases they might, by joint operati connect up the rails of the Southern Pacific that were separate but I think in many of these cases it would require the building additional track to make the connection.

Q. If you have a terminal, say, at any connecting point, whi is entirely ample and sufficient to do the business when it is operat by one company, such as the Southern Pacific Company; now, i you separate these lines, would it not be necessary to incr se t terminal facilities for the operation of two companies at a poi like that, where the present terminal might be sufficient for sing operation?

Mr. McCLENNEN. I object to the question as leading, also as incom petent, immaterial, and irrelevant; calling upon the witness for a opinion which, by his previous answers, it does not appear that h is qualified to express; and for an opinion based upon facts not suf ciently certainly incorporated in the question so that it may be know to the court upon what facts he bases the opinion.

1963 The WITNESS. It might be necessary to increase the terminal At any rate, it would increase the expense of doing the busi ness, because a single company can operate the terminal, certainly at a less cost than that of the joint operation.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. And with less terminal facilities, really? If you have two com panies operating a terminal, do you not have to have a larger ter minal than where one company is doing the business?

A. That would be the tendency. I would not say as to the exte of the extension.

Q. You have considered mainly the effect of this separation upon the local traffic. Now, I will ask you what would be the result, what would be the effect, if any, on the interstate commerce served by those lines?

Mr. McCLENNEN. The petitioner objects to the question as leading, also as incompetent, immaterial, and irrelevant; calling upon the witness for an opinion which, by his previous answers, it does not appear that he is qualified to express; and for an opinion based upon facts not sufficiently certainly incorporated in the question so that it may be known to the court upon what facts he bases the opinion.

1964 By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. The first point I want to get at is—and I might as well ask it now—whether or not it would increase the competition as to interstate traffic or transcontinental traffic?

A. I do not think it would increase the competition to any great extent.

Q. Why do you say that?

A. Because the service really controls the securing of business, and it would be necessary to continue, really, the service that the lines are giving to-day in order to compete with the other lines in California. It might increase the solicitors somewhat, but it is a question whether it would be necessary to have any more solicitors in the field than there are now.

Q. You, of course, bear in mind that at the present time there is competition for this interstate traffic not only by the Ogden route, but the Sunset Route, the Atchison, the Salt Lake road, the Western Pacific and the Gould system, and the Panama Canal and other water carriers; that competition generally between those carriers now exists. Would or would not the entry of the Central 1965 Pacific lines into the field by a separate management change that situation to any appreciable extent?

A. I think it would not. The strongest competition that the Santa Fe have to-day in northern California is the route via Ogden. Next comes the route via El Paso, including the Sunset Route, and next comes the Western Pacific.

Q. Your first competitor is the Central Pacific line?

A. Taking the business as a whole.

Q. You find it a formidable competitor with the Santa Fe?

A. I certainly do.

Q. Do you think that it could be made any more formidable by putting it into the hands of somebody else than the Southern Pacific?

A. I think not. I do not see how it is possible.

Q. It is suggested in the petition—I will only attempt to give the substance of the allegation—that the Southern Pacific Company, for the purpose of forcing traffic via the Sunset Route, via the S set line, allows the service to deteriorate upon the Central Pacific and refuses to make arrangements with the Union Pacific for moving of the traffic by that line; that those things are done favor traffic via the Sunset line—the Sunset-Gulf Route. T 1966 particular point I wish to call your attention to is the a gation that they allow the service on the Central Pacific lin deteriorate. Would the allowing of that deterioration, the allow of that Central Pacific service to deteriorate, be to the interest of Southern Pacific Company or against its interest?

Mr. McCLENNEN. The petitioner objects to the question as leadi

The WITNESS. It would not be to its interest.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Would it be against its interest?

A. It certainly would be.

Q. Will you explain why that would be so?

A. The Santa Fe is the principal competitor of the Southern P cific route to the Middle West territory, and for the business th passes through the Chicago gateway to the points east of Chica
The Southern Pacific could not afford to let the Central Pacific ro run down. They are necessarily bound to keep that service eq to that of the Santa Fe, otherwise the Santa Fe would not only ha the advantage in the business which is delivered directly to the poi it reaches with its own rails, by Kansas City and Chicago, b it would have the advantage in the business which goes to 1967 comes from the lines east of Chicago.

Q. Would any of this business get over to the Sunset Ro in that way?

A. Yes.

Q. How?

A. It would. It always has done it.

Q. What I mean is: Would the impairment of the service on t Central Pacific help to give business to the Sunset Route, or would not merely help the Santa Fe and other competitors of the Centr Pacific?

Mr. McCLENNEN. The petitioner objects to the question as leadi and as leading away from the opinion just expressed by the witn

The WITNESS. The business is moved as a whole; and giving serv to the Chicago business necessarily means giving service to the bu ness also going east of Chicago; so that it all goes in together.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Yes.

A. It could not separate the business going to the territory th the Sunset Route serves, the seaboard territory, from the busi

1968 to the Middle West territory; so that on the whole it is absolutely necessary for the Central Pacific to keep the Southern Pacific in condition to perform just as good service as the Santa Fe. Otherwise they would lose business; they would lose business that goes to the western points as well as to the points east of Chicago.

Q. They would lose it to whom—to what company?

A. They would lose it to the Santa Fe, some of it, and the Western Pacific.

Q. I will get at that in another way: There is a large volume of business that moves eastbound and also westbound that goes to and comes from all of the territory that the Sunset is not a competitor of the Santa Fe for at all. The Southern Pacific is its only competitor, and the Western Pacific now. That business perhaps is greater, considerably, than the business in the Seaboard territory that the Sunset is a competitor for. Is not the volume of business that passes over the Central Pacific and connections many times larger than the business that may be competed for by the Sunset line with that line?

A. It is.

Mr. McCLENNEN. Petitioner objects to the question as leading and as calling for facts of which the witness, in the nature of things, can not have knowledge, and which would be better shown by witnesses who have knowledge of the facts and are in the employ of the defendant company.

1969

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. I will ask you: Do you know whether or not the business which may be competed for by the Sunset line is at all equal to the other business that is noncompetitive which is served by the Southern Pacific line and connections?

Mr. McCLENNEN. Petitioner objects to the question as leading and as calling for facts of which the witness, in the nature of things, can not have knowledge, and which would be better shown by witnesses who have knowledge of the facts and are in the employ of the defendant company.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. I will ask you if you know.

A. I do; yes, sir.

Q. What do you say as to that?

A. I would say as to the noncompetitive business between the Central Pacific and the Southern Pacific and that between the Central Pacific and the Sunset Route the much greater volume is on the Central Pacific.

1970 Q. Then, to get the volume of noncompetitive busines new business possible to be competed for by the Sunset, Central Pacific line should be kept up to a high standard?

A. Yes; what I mean by "noncompetitive business" is bus that originates on the Central Pacific line and terminates on line; and then the business, such as perishable traffic that will stand transfer en route and the bulk freight in both directions.

Q. And does that fact, of the volume of business, noncompeti served by the Central Pacific line, being much larger than the petitive traffic with the Sunset, make it to the interest of the Sout Pacific Company to keep the Central Pacific line up to a high of efficiency?

A. I would say that it does.

Mr. McCLENNEN. The petitioner objects to the question as lea

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. In your evidence you have generally considered, as I u stand it, freight business. Now, what observations have you to as to passenger business, which is different from freight, and competition? Is the Sunset Route a practicable compe 1971 with the Central Pacific route and connections as to passe business?

A. The preferred route is the Central Pacific on the passe business and has always been the Central Pacific and Union P lines.

Q. Preferred by the company or by the public?

A. Preferred by the company and by the public.

Q. And by the public?

A. I would say so.

Q. The Sunset line is not a competitor to such an extent, passenger business, as it is to freight, as I understand you?

A. No, sir.

Q. What are the advantages as to the Sunset line as to passe business, if you could mention them, as compared with the Ce Pacific line?

A. Compared with the territory you would go through if would reach New York by New Orleans and the length of ti will take you.

Q. The distance is much longer, is it not?

A. The distance is much longer.

Q. And how about the temperature in the summer season?

A. It is very hot, to say the least.

1972 Q. It is a little more comfortable on the Central line?

A. Much more.

Q. Are there any classes of shipments for which the Sunset-Gulf route could not compete and do not compete?

A. I think I mentioned before that the Sunset Route can not handle perishable traffic; that is, traffic that is shipped under ventilation or refrigeration, in either direction, and that it can not handle the bulk traffic, and that it can not handle traffic that there is any serious damage to by transfer, such as agricultural implements and vehicles and automobiles, and things of that character.

Q. As to perishable traffic or freight, you include within that what particular shipments?

A. I would include all of the fresh fruit out of California.

Q. Citrus fruit?

A. Citrus fruit; yes, sir; and all the vegetables. I would include anything that moves under refrigeration, like fish or meat.

Q. Oysters?

A. Oysters; and then the packing-house products and the dairy products.

1973 Q. The bulk traffic you refer to is coal and coke and grain?

A. Coal and coke and liquids.

Q. How about live stock?

A. Live stock is another class of traffic that the Sunset can not handle.

Q. That you can not handle on the Sunset-Gulf line?

A. Yes; that you can not handle.

Q. How about immigrants' movables?

A. That would be included in live stock, because they usually have some live stock with them.

Q. What would you say as to sash, doors, and blinds?

A. All of the forest products are excluded from the Sunset movement.

Q. How about locomotives?

A. They could not be handled by the Sunset Route.

Q. And passenger and freight cars?

A. Passenger and freight cars do not move by the Sunset Route.

Q. Do they carry high explosives?

A. They do not.

Q. Or silk or tea?

1974 A. Silk and tea, that movement usually makes passenger-train time.

Q. And for that reason it takes the central or northern route?

A. It takes the all-rail route.

Q. And furniture?

A. Furniture is also excluded from the Sunset line.

Q. I believe you mentioned automobiles and other vehicles?

A. Yes.

Mr. HERRIN. You may take the witness.

Cross-examination by Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. When you first went to California the only railroads to Ca fornia north of Tehachapi Pass were the Central Pacific and t Southern Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. It has appeared in the record that the Santa Fe got into S Francisco May 10, 1899. Would that accord, about, with your sta ment of the date?

A. The lines were connected up July 1, 1899.

Q. July 1, 1899?

1975 A. Yes, sir. The San Francisco and San Joaquin route w connected by the general arrangement with the lines eas Mojave.

Q. There is some seventy miles through the Tehachapi that y run over the tracks of the Southern Pacific Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the thing which completed the Atchison service from t East to San Francisco was the making of the arrangement for the of those tracks to connect the Atchison with lines which you had quired north of that stretch?

Mr. BLAIR. You mean the service on its own rails?

Mr. McCLENNEN. Yes; I suppose that is better.

The WITNESS. Yes.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. Up to the completion of that arrangement the Atchison, for points north of Tehachapi, was dependent upon the forwarding b the Southern Pacific Company?

A. Yes; it was operated under a traffic contract with the South Pacific Company?

Q. Up to July 1, 1899, the Southern Pacific and the Central Pa cific, together, held an absolute monopoly of the California tra continental rails?

1976 A. North of Mojave.

Q. North of Mojave?

A. Practically so; yes, sir.

Q. What have you in mind when you use the term "practically"

A. The Santa Fe acquired the San Joaquin Valley road bef that time; probably had it about a year, and operated it as a lo They did not take any through business in there, because they h not any connection with it. That is, that applies as to the rail. T Santa Fe were in northern California to do business—to secure bu ness there and to deliver business there—under a contract wit outhern Pacific Company which gave them certain rights on the outhern Pacific rails in northern California. They began in 1884 ith the joint traffic arrangement.

Q. Was that a contract for the use of the rails of the Southern acific, or the Central Pacific, or was it some contract with reference the divisions on business that was handled over the joint rails?

A. It carried the right to do business. It carried the right for the Santa Fe to operate with its own engines over the tracks, as I 977 understand it; or they could do their business through the Southern Pacific, by paying the Southern Pacific a certain roportion of the joint rate; and it gave the right to the Santa Fe carry a supply of its cars at different points in northern California, o that they would be convenient for distribution to any shippers hat might want them on the Southern Pacific tracks.

Q. Did the Atchison engines use to travel north of Bakersfield?

A. They did not. We never exercised the right to run our own rains. We did the business always through the Southern Pacific, nd allowed them the proportion of their joint rate for the haul to r from Mojave, as the case might be.

Q. Was the operation from 1884 to 1899 under a single contract, r was it changed in its terms from time to time?

A. Under a single contract.

Q. And did that fix the proportions of the joint rates from all outhern Pacific points to Atchison points in the East?

A. The proportion of the rate that the Southern Pacific was to eceive?

Q. Yes.

978 A. It did.

Q. That is, take it as——

A. As a fixed division of the joint rate for the Southern Pacific.

Q. To make it specific, was the arrangement such that the Atchison ould solicit and take and bill a shipment from Redding, California, ver the Atchison to Cincinnati, and have the proportion of the rate etermined by the contract between the two companies?

A. The proportion was fixed, I think, on Sacramento for the points orth of Sacramento. I think Sacramento was the point where we arried the supply of cars, and I think Sacramento was at that time, nd is yet, known as a terminal point, and I think the division of the ate was based on the haul from the terminal. I do not recollect all f the details.

Q. Did the Atchison under that arrangement use to issue through ills for eastbound freight from exclusive Central Pacific points in orthern California to competitive points in the East?

A. The Atchison issued its own bills of lading for the shipments ere routed by its line from points on the Central Pacific

1979 and the Southern Pacific which were included in the arra ment. The way bill was made by the Central Pacific ag and it was made through to the destination.

Q. Was it a Southern Pacific way bill or an Atchison way bill

A. It was a joint way bill. The routing east of the junction poi that is, Mojave—with the Southern Pacific was directed by Atchison Company.

Q. Do you mean joint in the sense that it called for a service o two lines to reach destination? It was not issued as a joint obli tion, was it, by the agent?

A. Yes; it was issued—the Central Pacific and the Santa Fe w parties to the rate, to the rate as published. The Southern Pac agent made the way bill, routing it Southern Pacific to Mojave Santa Fe on from Mojave. That was a joint way bill, and it made largely under the direction of the Santa Fe. Now, the So ern Pacific, for performing the service at the station—that is, m ing the way bill and doing the other things that are necessary in ceiving the freight and billing that freight at Mojave—were allo a certain proportion out of the joint through rate. That proport was fixed in the contract.

Q. And the solicitors of the Atchison were at work 1980 northern California during the period from 1884 to 1899?

A. Yes, sir. We had an office in each of the larger cities California, a separate office.

Q. What determined the question when a shipper at one of th northern California places was going to send goods to Pittsbur whether he should send it in part over the Atchison or not?

A. The shipper's directions determined. The directions that shipper gave to the receiving agent of the Southern Pacific at t terminal as to how the goods should move determined.

Q. And the effort of the solicitors among the shippers was to g them to route via the Atchison?

A. The solicitors in California and whatever influence there w in getting the consignee, the purchaser of the goods, to direct t shipper how to route. It is my recollection, and in fact I know th the business of the Santa Fe from points on the Southern Pac rails was largely secured through the influence of the receiver; th is, the consignee.

Q. That is, the receiver who was in——

A. In the East.

1981 Q. In Atchison territory, practically?

A. Whatever coöperation we could get from the line, pe haps, that the consignee was located upon in the eastern territory.

Q. To what extent, from 1885 to 1899, did you carry over Atchison freight which originated in Central Pacific or So

Pacific territory and was destined to eastern points that were not served peculiarly by the Santa Fe or its particular connections, like the Erie? I mean points where, so far as terminus was concerned, the field was equally open to the Southern and the Atchison.

A. On the eastbound traffic my recollection is that right from the beginning the California products largely divided on the basis of the population. That is, there was a time when seventy-five per cent or seventy per cent of the population was in the territory east of Chicago, and many times, in going over, our traffic moved out of California; to see just where it was going to it would always come close in its distribution to the distribution of the population. In other words, there would be seventy per cent of what we would haul, then, out of the Southern Pacific territory north of Tehachapi which 1982 would go to destinations east of Chicago or the Mississippi River and thirty per cent would remain in the western territory. We were stronger, of course, in the western territory than we were in the eastern territory.

Q. And you are using "western territory" to define Chicago and points west?

A. Yes; that is the way I speak of western and eastern territory.

Q. If I understand your answer, then, it is that of the freight you got which originated north of Tehachapi, about seventy-five per cent, was it, that you said?

A. Seventy to seventy-five per cent.

Q. Seventy to seventy-five per cent was destined to Chicago or points east?

A. Destined east of Chicago.

Q. Was destined east of Chicago?

A. Was destined east of Chicago.

Q. And from twenty-five to thirty per cent was destined to Chicago or west thereof?

A. Yes.

1983 Q. Do you know how the proportion of the total amount which you got north of Tehachapi compared with the total amount traveling from the territory north of Tehachapi?

A. No; I do not. We did not get any great bulk of it; I know that. There never was much.

Q. It was pretty small, was it not?

A. No; it was considerable. There was a large volume of it there. We had a large volume of business from points on the Southern Pacific rails.

Q. And what you did get was largely that which was influenced through the strength of your position in your own central western and eastern territory?

A. Our service and the help that we got from our connection which was not any small matter, and the solicitation of our men California. Of course, we got some business from the shippers California.

Q. But the chief effort, so far as eastbound business was concerned was through the consignees?

A. I think that is correct as to our traffic from points on t Southern Pacific rails.

(Whereupon a recess was taken until two o'clock p. m.)

1984 AFTER RECESS.

EDWARD CHAMBERS, the witness under examination at the taking recess, resumed the stand and testified further, as follows:

Cross-examination (continued) by Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. When was it, Mr. Chambers, that you made the arrangeme which provided for the through shipment of freight from New Yo to California? You referred to some arrangement with the Er Railroad, I think, before the recess.

A. It was after 1887; probably in 1888 or 1889, or somewhe along there.

Q. That was the first time that there had been, from the shipper standpoint, a through line from New York to California?

A. That was the first time there was any effective competition fro the Atlantic seaboard against the Sunset Route.

Q. And that was made by the fact that these lines, the Erie an the Atchison, had entered into this arrangement for through servic

A. Yes, sir. It took some years to work it up to a 1985 considerable volume of business. It was rather a slow proces because the Atchison line at that time was not in very goo physical condition, and as it improved the service improved and th volume of business increased.

Q. The great improvement in the Atchison came after the reor ganization, did it not?

A. After 1895.

Q. Prior to this through arrangement which you made with th Erie it had been customary to send carload lots through in the ori inal car, had it not?

A. Yes.

Q. This arrangement that you speak of provided for package car as well, did it not?

A. It did; yes; to a certain extent. Of course, all of the traffic di not move in through cars, but we had arrangements so that the Eri switched the car directly to the Santa Fe station at Chicago; that i made a special effort to get it to the Santa Fe station and take the California freight and put it in with freight that had originated at Chicago and was being loaded out the same day.

Q. Did the Erie have any similar arrangement with any of the other roads reaching California?

1986 A. They did not at that time.

Q. What is the first time at which any similar through arrangement was made for any other rail lines from coast to coast?

A. At that time the Santa Fe was the only line into southern California outside of the Southern Pacific, and they were the only ones, really, that could compete with the Southern Pacific, and this competition with the Sunset Route in the beginning was just for the southern California business. We did not reach it to any extent in northern California.

Q. As you use the term "northern California" as distinguished from "southern California" you divide practically at the Tehachapi Range?

A. At the Tehachapi Range; yes, sir.

Q. What was the first of there being through billing arrangements from coast to coast through Ogden?

A. I could not say as to that, but it followed along after that time. The Santa Fe did not make very much of an effort to compete with the Sunset Route from New York on the northern California business until after it got its own rails into northern California; that is, after 1900, really.

1987 Q. It was not up to that time in a position to compete effectively, was it?

A. It was not on that class of traffic.

Q. In the nature of things the terminal lines, either initial or final, are in very much better position to compete than any intermediate carrier, are they not?

A. That is, they are in a better position to secure the routing of the traffic?

Q. Yes.

A. I would say they were; yes. The line upon which the industry is located usually has the preference, everything being equal. That is rather natural.

Q. Up to July 1, 1899, did any freight move in or out of California from or to east of the Missouri river except over the Central Pacific or over the Sunset line or by the Panama routes or around the Horn?

A. And via the Santa Fe from Mojave.

Q. And via the Santa Fe from Mojave. Those were the only routes?

A. Those were the routes; yes.

Q. Did the Canadian Pacific, the Great Northern, or the Northern Pacific have any effect on California?

1988 A. The Canadian Pacific did, to a certain extent, but they were not a serious competitor. They came in via Vancouver with the water service from Vancouver to San Francisco, and I think that perhaps the Great Northern, via Seattle, engaged in the California business—that is, the steamer line from Seattle down—but in the service the time was so much longer than the other routes that they were never very serious competitors.

Q. How about the route over the Union Pacific and the Oregon Short Line through Portland and down by boat to California?

A. That was not a serious competitor with the lines running directly to California.

Q. Do you know whether any freight moved that way?

A. I could not say. It is likely some freight did move that way but not any great volume of freight.

Q. Except for the gradual improvement in service over the Atchison, there was no change in the competitive condition, so far as California was concerned, between 1885 and the Atchison's getting into San Francisco in 1899, was there?

A. No; except in so far as the service by water was concerned.

1989 That always was a changeable quantity. Sometimes there would be a number of ships in the service, and then, again, there would only be a few.

Q. That is, via Panama or around the Horn?

A. Yes.

Q. The next change in the situation, after the Atchison's getting into San Francisco, was the opening of the San Pedro route, in 1901, connecting the Union Pacific with Los Angeles?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the next change was the opening of the Western Pacific from Salt Lake to San Francisco Bay in 1910?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Western Pacific has never become much of a factor in the competition, has it?

A. It has not. That is, it has not up to this time carried any large volume of tonnage.

Q. The influence of the San Pedro route on California is confined to the portion of California south of Bakersfield?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is any business done over that route and by water from San Pedro to San Francisco, in the carriage of transcontinental freight?

1990 A. No freight business.

Q. When you were at Pueblo, from 1879 to 1885, did you have more or less of a general knowledge of freight conditions in California, or was that beyond your range?

A. I had a general knowledge of the freight conditions in California, in so far as the traffic moved through Pueblo. I handled the waybills and revised the billing on California traffic that moved through Pueblo from along about 1883 until 1885.

Q. That was traffic which came over the Atchison from Deming?

A. It was the California traffic that moved via Deming; yes; and the Atchison into Colorado, and the westbound traffic that moved over the Atchison from Kansas City and was delivered to the Denver & Rio Grande at Pueblo and moved on through Ogden to a connection with the Central Pacific at Ogden and thence on to California.

Q. How far north, in your opinion, would it be reasonable to extend feeders in California for the Central Pacific Railroad north of its main line?

A. I would say up to the Siskiyou Mountains; up to the Oregon line.

1991 Q. That would be about the limit from which it could reasonably expect to draw?

A. I would think so.

Q. Now, in a southerly direction, how far?

A. For the Central Pacific?

Q. For the Central Pacific.

A. Under the present conditions, I would say the Tehachapi Mountains. Originally the Central Pacific drew a very considerable business in and out of southern California via Sacramento and Ogden in competition with the Santa Fe.

Q. How late did that competition keep up?

A. Well, it kept up in more or less degree until after the entrance of the San Pedro line into southern California, and after that time it was shut out entirely, or practically entirely.

Q. You mean because the San Pedro was in so much better position to handle that better?

A. To handle that traffic. But they handled the traffic that really, necessarily, had to move via the Ogden route. You see, there was considerable traffic in southern California, especially citrus fruits, that it was very desirable to put on the Union Pacific or Cen-

1992 tral Pacific-Union Pacific line to reach the market, say, at Omaha, and to the points north, where they could easily be diverted. That business moved, before the entrance of the San Pedro line into southern California, north over the Southern Pacific via Sacramento, Central Pacific and Union Pacific; and with that traffic they carried some traffic—a very considerable amount of [illegible]—going to Chicago and points east of Chicago.

Q. You have spoken of it being the natural businesslike thing t the Southern Pacific to extend its line through Arizona, New Mexi and Texas to New Orleans. I take it that you meant that was t natural businesslike thing to do for the creation of a transcontinent line across that part of the country?

A. Yes; and to secure the traffic that was moving between t seaboard territory and California at that time.

Q. That is, the Atlantic seaboard territory?

A. Yes.

Q. That was a development which would bear no relation to t line between San Francisco and Ogden? By that I mean a railro having a line down in southern California would just as natural seek to extend it to New Orleans and connect for the Atlan 1993 coast, whether it did or did not own another line runni from San Francisco to Ogden?

A. I would not say that at that time it would be a very attracti thing for a line that just served southern California to extend i line over into Arizona. I would not say that, because the gre volume of business in California, when those lines were first bui was in northern California. The California products, the popul tion, the business of California, was really, in 1883, I think, ve largely north of the Tehachapi. The citrus business was very lig at that time; just starting in.

Q. That southern development was for through business, and n as a feeder to the Central Pacific throughout?

A. Well, of course, as a local line—as a local business to be s cured—perhaps that was the most desirable line to build throug Arizona. I think if I was going to build a line through Arizo from southern California I would have taken about the same cour that the Southern Pacific did. That is through the most productiv part of Arizona, the most profitable part of Arizona, at that time.

Q. Any extension of that line would not be undertaken as th extension of a feeder to the Central Pacific line in any sens would it?

1994 A. No; it would not.

Q. You think there was a time when the Sunset line wa carrying from eighty to ninety per cent of the total California trans continental business?

A. Yes. That is, not of the total; I did not say the total Califor nia transcontinental business in both directions. I say they wer carrying that proportion of the business to the Atlantic seaboard territory.

Q. I see.

A. Of the business that could be moved via the Sunset Route, tha it was possible to move that way.

Q. That is, you mean eighty to ninety per cent of the competitive business; not eighty to ninety per cent of the total business?

A. I mean eighty to ninety per cent of the California Atlantic seaboard traffic; that is, traffic that was right on the Atlantic seaboard, or close to the Atlantic seaboard; in what is known as Atlantic seaboard territory; that could be moved conveniently via the Sunset Route; in other words, freight that would stand transfer, package freight and dried fruits and canned goods; and the wines—the principal commodities eastbound, and miscellaneous articles 1995 which were at that time almost exclusively manufactured in the Atlantic seaboard territory.

Q. And that has reference to all parts of California?

A. Yes.

Q. How long did the large proportion that you have mentioned, the large percentage that you have mentioned, continue?

A. It began to diminish as the Santa Fe built up its trade; after 1888 I should say. The Santa Fe reached Chicago in 1888, and then it began to actively solicit and go after the California seaboard business, and as the service improved, as we got into the business, the Sunset's proportion decreased. Of course the other lines through the Omaha gateway went after the business in the same way, but they could not, in the beginning—their competition was not as effective as ours because we had only the one transfer, if a transfer had to be made, and that was at Chicago, while via the Omaha gateway there was one at Chicago and another one at Omaha.

Q. Since you have blazed the way with the Atchison, the other lines have found it possible to do somewhat the same thing through Ogden, have they not?

1996 A. They have; but I think that to-day the Atchison is the principal competitor of the Sunset Route, especially for the westbound business from the Atlantic seaboard territory to California. Next to that, I guess, their's is the largest volume.

Q. You have found it possible, as a practical matter in railroading, to overcome virtually all difficulty incident to the use of a connection to make your through line to the Atlantic?

A. Yes. That is nearly correct, I will say that, for almost all of the traffic to California at the present time. That is one of the great obstacles in competing against the Sunset Route, whether under a single management or if these interchanges are necessary between the different parts of the through route, between California and New York.

Q. Up to the time that the competition of the Atchison made it necessary, do you know what, if any, efforts the Southern Pacific made to make its service through Ogden equal to or preferable to that [illegible] Sunset Line?

A. I do not.

Q. Did you ever hear of their making any?

A. I do not know that I did. I do not recollect.

1997 Q. Do you know whether one of the things which led to the large proportion going over the Sunset Route was that if any of the agents on that line chanced to misread the tariffs he did not have to explain his error to any connecting road?

A. No; I did not know of anything of that kind. We always tried to keep the rates via the Santa Fe route the same as via the Sunset Route.

Q. Has the Interstate Commerce Commission, as far as you know, ever taken any part in the reduction or fixing of the transcontinental rates, ordinarily, of the railroads, excepting, of course, this pending matter of permission to make a lower rate for the long haul and for some of the shorter hauls in order to meet the water competition?

A. They have fixed the rates on various commodities. They fixed the class rates practically. Of course, the rates to the terminal points that were compelled, by the water competition, to be recognized as being below reasonable rates, they never dealt with at all, excepting so far as to prescribe under the fourth section of the act the long and short haul clause.

Q. With the exception you have just mentioned, the railroads themselves, and the competitive influences, have deter-

1998 mined the rates, rather than any Government authority?

A. Westbound rates to the terminal points.

Q. That is true?

A. Yes; but then there is a large volume of traffic that moves under rates that are reasonable rates in and of themselves, where the traffic is really not subject to competition of the water carriers, and as to a lot of that the commission did fix the rates.

Q. What influence did the Southern Pacific Company have on the California rate situation up to the time that the Atchison got into San Francisco? Did it have practical control of that?

A. In northern California the Southern Pacific, being either the delivering line or the originating line, no rates could be made without their concurrence—no through rates, joint rates.

Q. They were practically masters of the situation as to freight rates?

A. On all the rates which were known as joint rates, less than the combination of the local rates.

Q. In the development of years it has been the effort of the 1999 railroad men to keep the rates uniform over the different roads for the same service, has it not?

A. Yes.

Q. And, barring particular occasions, they do not in that sense compete as to rates?

A. That is true.

Q. The presence of one or more railroads, or of more than one railroad, capable of performing a given service, does have the effect of lowering the rates over a long period of time, does it not?

A. Yes; it may have that effect to a considerable extent, I would say. Generally they aid to keep the rates uniform, and the conditions as to the necessity for the rates are usually pretty well known to all of the carriers that are competing for the traffic.

Q. Service is very much influenced by competition, is it not?

A. It is.

Q. If you have four railroads in position to do the same business, the chances are that you will get better service over them than if you have two?

A. That is all there is in competition to-day, under the conditions to-day—competition in service.

2000 Q. You have spoken of certain kinds of business that would not move over the Sunset Route, but which would move over the Atchison or would move through Ogden. Is there any converse to that? Is there anything moving between California and points east of the Missouri River and, say, north of St. Louis and including St. Louis, which does move over the Sunset Route, which could not move as readily or more readily through Ogden or over the Atchison?

A. Just name that territory again, will you?

The WITNESS. I do not know of any volume of traffic, or, in fact, of any traffic that moves via the Sunset Route into the territory you have mentioned; that is, moving via the Southern Pacific lines through Texas, up to St. Louis. There may be some business moving back there.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. That is as to all the traffic between the territories which I mentioned, all that the Sunset Route carries can be carried equally well by the Atchison through Ogden?

A. Into that territory?

Q. Yes.

2001 A. Yes; I should say it could, except from southern California up there. Of course the Ogden route, the Central Pacific route, is practically out of the traffic now going up from southern California into that territory. Under the Southern Pacific tariff they move eastbound via El Paso or their connection with the Rock Island, or with their other connections; say, from northern California my answer would go.

Q. Would this be correct, then: That all the freight between southwestern Oregon and California north of Bakersfield on the one hand and north of St. Louis and including St. Louis and east of the Missouri on the other hand, is naturally competitive as between the Ogden route and the Sunset Route, except those particular kinds of freight which you have mentioned, which, from their nature, can not be moved by a split rail and water movement?

A. What you intend to cover is what is known as the Middle West territory—the territory practically west of Chicago and east of the Rocky Mountains, except the southern territory?

Q. No; I mean east of the Missouri River.

A. Or east of the Missouri River.

Q. East of the Missouri River to the Atlantic Ocean?

2002 A. The Sunset Route is not a desirable route for that traffic from northern California. The competition for that traffic out of northern California is between the Atchison, the Western Pacific, and the Central Pacific. I have never heard of any considerable volume of business moving out of northern California down through Los Angeles and via El Paso to that territory or through the Texas points.

Q. By "that territory" you mean what you call the Middle West territory?

A. What you described—north of St. Louis and east of the Missouri River, which would take in, as I understand it, Chicago, Wisconsin, and so on.

Q. I think I perhaps did not make myself fully clear. When I said "east of the Missouri River" I meant east all the way to the Atlantic Ocean.

A. Oh!

Q. That would change your answer, would it?

A. Yes; that would change it. It would change it in so far as the seaboard territory is concerned.

Q. To see that I clearly understand you, let me put it in this way:
Take the territory which you have last defined, the so-called 2003 Atlantic seaboard territory as the eastern territory, and take California north of the Tehachapi Mountains and southwestern Oregon; are the route through Ogden and the Sunset Route, so called, naturally competitive as to all commodities except those which you have mentioned which can not take a split rail and water haul?

A. I would say for that traffic, from northern California through to the Atlantic seaboard, the competition is between the Sunset Route and the Central Pacific and its connections and the Atchison and the Western Pacific, and the service is practically on a parity to-day at is, perhaps the Western Pacific service is not so good as the hers, but the Atchison and the Central and Union Pacific, the orth Western and its connections beyond Chicago, are equal to the nset Route.

Q. Between those territories and in those classes of freight you are ware of the fact that the effort of the Southern Pacific Company to get freight as far as possible via the Sunset Route, are you not?

A. That has always been its position, as I understand it, where they uld handle the business through the Sunset.

Q. And its chief competitor in that effort to-day is the Atchison?

004 A. The Atchison and the Central and Union Pacific routes.

Q. The Central——

A. Let me explain that to you. The Central Pacific line via gden has always been a competitor with the Sunset Route for the aboard business.

The Union Pacific have their solicitors in the field working the siness for that route and always have had. So has every con- ection of the Southern Pacific, in turn, east from Ogden, until you t clear through to the Atlantic seaboard.

Take, for example, the New York Central or the Pennsylvania; the longer haul is via the Chicago gateway and the industry, the ceiver of the freight, is located on their rails in the interior, along eir rails somewhere, say, removed from the Atlantic seaboard, all e influence they have will be to work that business through the hicago gateway. They would either work it over the Central acific-Union Pacific route or over the Atchison. That extends ear along through. The closer you get to the Atlantic seaboard, e more active the eastern lines which are after the business via the Chicago gateway, because the longer their haul. The main 005 support the Atchison gets in that territory is from the delivering lines in that territory, on the eastbound business.

Q. That is to say, is it not, that between these territories, the outhern Pacific tries to get the freight to go by the Sunset line; e Atchison tries to get it to go by its line; the Western Pacific and s Gould line connections, so called, try to get it by their lines; the ailroads such as the New York Central and the Pennsylvania try get it to go either by the Atchison or by the Ogden line; the Iowa nes, such as the Chicago & North Western, try to get it to go via the gden line; the Union Pacific tries to get it to go via the Ogden line. s that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that is practically, in the rough, a complete statement of hat the competitive efforts are, is it not?

A. Yes. The Sunset works the seaboard business alone. They have no supporters at all; they are alone; they are against all the others in working that business. Against them are the Atchison with its solicitors out there in the field, and all the influence that the Atchison can get from its connections beyond Chicago; the 2006 same way with the route via Ogden, the Central Pacific Union Pacific route; the Union Pacific are after that business and they, of course, bring to bear all the influence they can get from their connections.

So, for the seaboard business out of California—and that is true as to the Western Pacific, what I say about the Central Pacific-Union Pacific—but for the seaboard business out of California the three routes—the Atchison, the Central Pacific-Union Pacific route, and the Western Pacific route and its connections—are against, or opposed to, or in competition with, the Sunset Route.

Q. The situation during the period of the Union Pacific merger, so called, was the same, was it not?

A. Practically the same.

Q. During that period the Southern Pacific, even when the Union Pacific controlled it, tried to get the seaboard business via the Sunset line?

A. They did.

Q. The Union Pacific during that period tried to get all that it could over the Union Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Central Pacific would be in a much more powerful 2007 position to affect the routing of freight between California and the Atlantic seaboard than the Union Pacific or the Chicago & North Western are, would it not?

A. It would, so far as the traffic originated or had destination on its lines—whatever influence goes with serving the shipper at the point of origin or at the point of destination.

Q. If it were not controlled by the same interest that the Sunset line is controlled by, it would undoubtedly put forth that effort to get as much to go as possible via the all-rail line through Ogden, would it not?

A. It likely would; but I do not think the Central Pacific by itself with just its present rails, would hardly get as much traffic, if it were separated by itself, as it could in with the Southern Pacific as one line.

Q. Where do you think the traffic originating on the Southern Pacific rails which now moves through Ogden would go, in case of the separation?

A. I would say this for that traffic, so far as going over the Central Pacific to the territory Chicago and west is concerned: That outhern Pacific work that business now all over the Central Pacific from northern California. They are compelled to do that, 008 really, for no other purpose than to meet the competition of the Atchison out in northern California.

Q. Do you know what the explanation is of the amount of tonnage hich does, in fact, according to their figures, travel from northern alifornia through El Paso on its way to Atlantic seaboard ter-itory?

A. The volume?

Q. Yes.

A. I do not know, except in a general way.

Q. You know that it is a very substantial volume?

A. It always has been; yes, sir.

Q. That volume would be rather apt to go through Ogden, would t not, if the Central Pacific was seeking it?

A. I would not say so. I do not know that there would be any aterial change in that. As I say, the service, of course, is the ain factor, and so long as your service is equal the business would ivide up, likely. Of course it might be that the Central Pacific ould have a little more influence in securing the routing with usiness that originated on the Central Pacific rails and was going into that territory.

009 Q. At the present time your railroad has in California one life-size competitor, has it not, and that is about all?

A. The Southern Pacific?

Q. The Southern Pacific.

A. We have the two routes—the Ogden route and the Sunset oute—and the San Pedro line.

Q. That is, the San Pedro line you have in southern California?

A. Yes.

Q. Only?

A. That is all.

Q. North of the Tehachapi you have the Southern Pacific only?

A. Yes, sir; and the Western Pacific, of course, is a competitor or the western business with us, and does a considerable business rom San Francisco and Stockton; those two points are where they ompete with us.

Q. It is pretty small, as compared with——

A. It is not a very large volume; as compared with the business f the Atchison and the Southern Pacific it is small. Still they are fter the business all the time. They can not handle very much; their plant is not in shape to handle any very large amount of it.

010 Q. Disregarding the Western Pacific, but, of course, keeping in mind the amount that you attribute to it; if the Southern Pacific and the Central Pacific were divided, your road would have two vigorous competitors in the territory north of the Tehachapi Mountains?

A. I think we have two now. I do not see how there could be any more competition than what there is right to-day. We are in the same position——

Q. You are admitting that you would have two, then?

A. We are in the same position with respect to the business at Chicago. For example, that the Sunset Route is on business to the Atlantic seaboard. The field is against us on the Chicago business. We have not any support. We have no support from the lines running west of Chicago on the California traffic; none whatever. We go it alone on that.

Q. Again disregarding, for the moment, the Western Pacific, the "field" as you term it, north of the Tehachapi Mountains, is the Southern Pacific Company—one company—is it not?

A. They are the company that has the rails in that territory.

2011 Q. If the two roads were divided, there would be two companies in that field competing with you, would there not?

A. There would be, yes.

Q. There is now one general traffic manager in that territory competing with your general traffic manager, is there not?

A. It is not the one traffic manager that makes the trouble in competition, whatever trouble the shipper makes; it is the fellow who solicits from the man that is right at his station; and those station agents would be just the same; there would be no change in them. The influence on the shipper would be just the same, just as much as under the one as under the two. You could not change that.

Q. That is, you mean, in the natural course of things, some arrangement would be made by which those terminals would be jointly operated?

A. No; I mean if you should separate the Central and the Southern Pacific, the agent would remain at the station just the same, whether it was called the Southern Pacific or the Central Pacific. He would be there; the solicitor would be there, and the industry would be located on the same tracks, and whatever influence you could bring to bear on the shipper, what naturally goes where 2012 the shipper is located on your rails, would be still there against the Atchison, and would not be worked any harder, I believe, than it is to-day.

Q. I am a little afraid I have got unhitched from my moorings. Let us take one place—Sacramento: If these two roads were divided, there would be an agent there, would there not?

A. There would be separate agents.

Q. Would there be two agents there?

A. It would depend altogether on how they arranged that matter when they separated. There would be two soliciting agents, undoubtedly, there, if the lines were operated separately.

Q. And they would be competing with each other, naturally, would they not?

A. Yes.

Q. And the Atchison would have a soliciting agent in Sacramento, would it not?

A. Yes.

Q. And that man would be kept busy trying to counteract the work of two men, where now he is trying to counteract the work of one man, would he not?

2013 A. It would altogether depend upon the force. Naturally, if the business were divided—that is, if the lines were separated—the Southern Pacific would not need as large a force of solicitors as they have to-day. They probably would reduce the number; their business would not be so large; it would be just a question of whether you would have more soliciting against us under the single ownership than there would be under the joint ownership. There might be some more; I naturally would expect there would be some more, but not anything to make any more competition for us in a serious way than what we have now.

Q. You would rather expect that there would be some more at all those points where both rails reach, would you not—both the Southern and the Central rails?

A. Well, taking the larger points, I think I would prefer to have the Atchison compete against two—divide the thing up and divide the facilities up—than against the one, because the influence then would be more nearly equalized.

Q. That is, if you consulted your own wishes, you would have the Central and the Southern divided into two railroads, would you?

A. From the Atchison standpoint I think that it would be better for the Atchison to have them divided.

2014 Q. To have them divided?

A. I think that we would have a better chance to compete with the two than we would with the one; that is, our influence would be nearer equal to theirs.

Q. You mean, taking it, for instance, in San Francisco, that you think the Atchison would get more business out of San Francisco if the Central independently was trying to get it, and the Southern independently was trying to get it, than it gets now when the Southern alone is trying to get it, do you?

A. Here is what I have in mind—it is not the man who goes and solicits the freight; that is not the way the bulk of the freight is secured. Of course you have got to have the solicitor, and he h to go around and see your patrons, and has to find out all t troubles; but there is something else: If an industry is located your rails, and you are serving all of California with your trac that industry can ship anywhere in California over your rails; does not have to switch the car to some other line, and you hav very considerable influence on that industry. If there are any n industries to be located, they are likely to choose the line w 2015 the greatest mileage. It is better for them to be located the line that has the greatest mileage, that serves the m points. That is what we ran up against in California, and it w a very difficult thing for us to overcome, especially in the San J quin Valley, in trying to get industries located upon our tra there, because the Southern Pacific Company serves all of Califor while we only serve part of it.

Q. Would you generalize to the point of saying that gener you would prefer to have two solicitors competing against your for the business, rather than having one competing against your o

A. I would not say that generally. It depends altogether on j the traffic involved, and just the influence of the man. If the tra was free, where it could go to one just as conveniently and jus cheaply to the other, the solicitor would probably have some in ence in securing the routing; and maybe if you had two, getti around more frequently than one could, it might secure additio business in that way; but the great big, large business of the car is from the manufacturing institutions that are located on th rails.

2016 Q. If the Central Pacific were separate from the South it would greatly increase its disposition to throw out rails to reach new business, would it not?

A. It might; yes.

Q. You would expect that it would, would you not?

A. I should think so; yes.

Q. That would tend to increase competition by that much?

A. Well, it might.

Q. Don't you think it would?

A. It perhaps would, to a certain extent; but not in any seri way, so long as the lines that are there to-day are actively compet and have a capacity to carry all the business and carry it satisfa torily; then, I do not think the building of any additional lin going to increase competition to any extent, where the shipper going to be benefited or where the public is going to be benefited.
do not see how anything would come out of that.

Q. The presence of the Atchison in San Francisco has not only in what it has given itself but in the effect upon competition tremendously increased the service to the public of the railroads in California, has it not?

A. It has helped.

2017 Q. In all probability it not only has given the better service that it has given itself, but also has been influential in causing the Southern Pacific to give equally better service?

A. Well, that may be. The Southern Pacific always gave very good service over their Central Pacific line. Their passenger service I judge them by more than anything else. That is my recollection.

Here is what I have in my mind, however, about the competition: That the Atchison can furnish good service, and has furnished first-class service, and the Southern Pacific have got to furnish equally as good service to compete successfully against them.

Now, both of them together have not got, neither one of them has got, all the business they can handle. They could handle considerably more and give just as good service on it. I say putting another line in, or adding new feeders, new rails to reach these same points, where the volume of business from those points is not sufficient to supply up to a reasonable capacity, the rails that are already there, would not get any new industries. The industries are pretty well developed in there, until the State grows a little more in production.

2018 Q. The Atchison has practically no feeders or branches north of Bakersfield, has it?

A. Yes; it has a line from Crocker around through Tulare and Visalia.

Q. Has it any other?

A. Its rails reach the very best part of the San Joaquin Valley. I do not know of anywhere else in the valley that I would recommend the Atchison to go to-day with its rails.

Q. Don't you see you have not quite answered my question, Mr. Chambers? I simply asked—not whether it was wise for it to have any new feeders, or many of the other questions that might arise, but the simple question whether, with that one exception, it has any branches.

A. Yes; it has one out from Reedley, which leads up to Piedra. It has a branch line from Cutler down through Exeter, and is building from Exeter to Lindsay now.

Q. Has it any others?

A. That is all; except its joint ownership of the Sunset Route running from Bakersfield west.

Q. You do not mean "joint ownership", do you? You mean joint operating arrangement, do you not?

2019 A. No; joint ownership of the Sunset Route—joint own ship with the Southern Pacific of the line that runs out i the oil fields from Bakersfield.

Q. Oh, I beg your pardon.

A. There is another one leading out from Laton to Lanare. It only a short line.

Q. With the exception of the branch lines that you have m tioned, and those points which are reached by the Atchison's o rails, the Atchison does not get much transcontinental freight cept that which it can influence from the east through the consign there, does it?

A. You mean off the Southern Pacific rails?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, we get a considerable amount of business from poi exclusively on the Southern Pacific line right along, to various de nations; some to western points, some to the eastern points.

As I said before, that business we get principally through consignees. We get some through the consignors, but the princi part of it, the majority of that business, we work through the c signees and through our connections.

Q. With the exception of those places in Califor 2020 which you touch, and what you can influence through the e ern consignees, everything north of the Tehachapi which going to the eastern part of the country is going to go over eit the Sunset Route or over the Ogden route, is it not?

A. Yes. We have connections independent of the Southern Pac in northern California. We have the Central California Tracti Company, running from Stockton to Sacramento; we have the O land & Antioch Electric line, running from Oakland to Sacrame crossing the river near Bay Point; we have the Northern Elect Railroad, running north from Sacramento, that connects with Central California Traction Company at Sacramento.

Q. How far up does that go?

A. It runs up to Chico, the Marysville territory, and runs over Hamilton. Of course we have the half ownership in the Northwe ern Pacific, which runs from San Francisco up to Eureka.

Q. This competition of the Atchison has been present since Ju 1899?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When the Union Pacific acquired control of the South 2021 Pacific, the presence of the Atchison competition just as m necessitated the keeping up of good service over the Cent and Union Pacific as it does now?

A. It did; yes.

Q. So that all you have said about the effect of the Southern controlling the Central, or of a division between them, was equally applicable to the so-called merger between the Union and the Southern?

A. In so far as keeping up the service to compete with the Atchison was concerned; yes, that is true. In fact, it is necessary for the line clear through from California to Chicago. The different lines that form the through route all keep their service up to the standard so as to make as good time as the Atchison does.

Q. That is, so far as the effect upon the benefits to the community, so far as the effect upon the competition is concerned, you would make no distinction between the joint control of the Union and the Sunset and the joint control of the Central and the Sunset?

A. No; I would make no distinction.

Q. Except that, of course, the Central is in a more powerful position than the Union to influence California business?

2022 A. Yes, sir; it is.

Q. Going back to the ancient contract that the Atchison had with the Southern for division of rates north of Mojave before 1899, just what did you mean by the expression that you thought Sacramento was the terminal or was a terminal under that arrangement?

A. Well, originally the joint rates applied from certain specified points in California. They were known as terminals. As to the business that originated beyond the terminal the rate was made by adding the local rate, say to the terminal point, and then the joint rate from the terminal point on. I think that is what is referred to in the contract as the rate from the terminal point.

Q. That is what you had reference to?

A. Yes.

Q. You spoke of sending your cars up as far Sacramento. Did you mean that that was a distributing center for the cars that were going to be filled on the Southern Pacific lines and delivered to you?

A. The contract provided that the Southern Pacific should keep a supply of Atchison cars at Sacramento, San Jose, Fresno, and 2023 several other important loading points, San Francisco, so they might be furnished to shippers desiring to use the Atchison route conveniently and within a short time.

Q. The haulage was all done above Mojave by the Southern Pacific?

A. By the Southern Pacific. They either made up that supply of cars from what Atchison cars were on their own tracks or the Atchison delivered the empty cars to the Southern Pacific at Mojave and they moved them up north; sent them to these different stations.

Q. What was the name of the line north of Bakersfield which the Atchison obtained in 1898?

A. The San Francisco & San Joaquin Valley Railway.

Q. On obtaining that line the Atchison undertook at once a sideration of building a line to connect its own line at Mojave that line?

A. It did.

Q. And it was the fact that it was going to put through a li its own which led to the making of the arrangement with the S ern Pacific for the joint use of tracks instead?

A. I think, as well as I can recollect, that arrangement 2024 out of a suggestion of Mr. Ripley, president of the Sant road, to Mr. H. E. Huntington, I think. We had survey line over the mountain from Mojave, via what is known as the T Pass, and the estimated cost was something like five million do
There was no traffic on it whatever, and none to be secured. It right through the rocks, the mountains, and there was very traffic on the Southern Pacific line between Mojave and Bakers

Mr. Ripley made the suggestion that that line could serve us that it was practically a bridge, anyhow, and that by strengthe it, and by building some more side tracks, it could be put in sha handle the business satisfactorily of both companies, and we w save the investment, or more than half of the investment, at that would be necessary to build our own line through there.

Q. And Mr. Ripley called that contemplated surveyed line to attention of the Southern Pacific?

A. I think they knew about it; yes. The surveyors were in field there for quite a long time, so they knew it. That is my r lection of how it came about.

Q. The company was incorporated for the construction of that

A. It was; yes.

2025 Q. If the Central Pacific and the Southern Pacific were o ated separately, the natural, business-like thing to do woul for them to arrange for some joint use of the terminals at com points and for the use of those pieces of track essential to t through routings, would it not?

A. It would; yes.

Q. It is the kind of thing that is done more or less by railroads arately owned, is it not?

A. That would be a little bit different, perhaps, from any of arrangements with which I am familiar. It is usual for qui length, where joint operations are put into effect.

Q. You mean for quite a length of track?

A. Yes. Of course, in the terminals it is frequently done; that terminals are operated by two companies, or more, that are o peting under a joint management.

Q. If these present terminals were jointly operated, would they be adequate for the business to be expected over the two roads as they now are?

A. I think practically they would be. There perhaps would be some additional cost to provide things that might be necessary 2026 where two competing lines are together in a terminal.

Q. The difficulty, so far as intrastate business is concerned, of a split haul, would be the same difficulty that is experienced to-day when a shipper is shipping from a point on the Central Pacific in California to a point on the Atchison in California, or vice versa?

A. That is correct.

Q. In those places that the Atchison touches it is not possible that a division between the Central and the Southern Pacific would have the effect of increasing the rate at present prevailing, is it?

A. That might be perhaps true as to traffic that the Atchison would serve both the point of origin and the point of destination; in other words, have the through rate published.

Q. And the same would be true of those points where the Western Pacific serves both?

A. Yes.

Q. Or where the Atchison and the Western Pacific together serve both?

A. That is true. There is no general system of joint rates 2027 between the Atchison and the Southern Pacific in California. There is to some points where there is a long haul for one or the other; but you take the general local business and it is largely governed by the combinations—that is, the rate of each carrier.

Q. You mean a combination of the locals?

A. A combination of the local rates. I can not see how a different rule could be applied to the Central and Southern Pacific than is applied now to the Atchison and Southern Pacific on similar business; where we haul a short distance the rate per ton per mile is very much greater than it is for the longer distance. You add two short hauls together, of two separate carriers, and the total rate is very much greater than the same mileage on a single line.

Q. If the Atchison and the Southern Pacific should enter into joint operation, it would have the effect, I take it, then, to materially reduce the local rates in California, would it not, between points at least that require the two services?

A. No; the rates in California, in northern California especially, particularly in the San Joaquin Valley, have all been fixed by the California State commission, and they fix a basis for a two-2028 line haul and for a single-line haul. We are entitled to receive those rates, whether the publication is a joint rate or whether it is just on the combination of the local rates over the junc point.

Q. Perhaps I did not make quite clear what I had in mind. I supposing that the Atchison and the Southern Pacific should am gamate, so that all the Atchison and Southern Pacific lines were erated by one company; then, according to the system which suggest, the California commission would fix the rate in accorda with the single-line haul scheme, and that, if your theory was ried out, would greatly reduce the local rates in California betw points on the Atchison and points on the Southern Pacific?

A. It would reduce the rate wherever that consolidation mad continuous haul over the single line, where to-day it is a combinati over the junction point of the two lines.

Q. And that same principle applied to transcontinental ra would result that if all railroads in the country were operated one concern it would correspondingly reduce the rates?

A. No. The long-haul rates are all made on a different ba They are much lower than the combination of the local ra 2029 or the combination of the rates of any single carrier in t through line.

Q. You do not think it would make to such economy of operati as to lead to the reduction of rates if all railroads were one?

A. I think perhaps consolidation to a certain extent would redu the cost. The question is how far you should go for efficiency.

Q. That is, there comes a point in the making or permitting combinations where there are some other elements that come into t equation that counteract the economies in rates and expenses of th combination?

A. I think so.

Q. Were you familiar with the condition of the Central Paci Railroad prior to the merger with the Union Pacific in 1901?

A. I was in a general way.

Q. After that merger the condition of the Central Pacific was ve much improved, was it not?

A. The physical condition of the Central Pacific has been improv ing right along for years. I do not know whether it was more or le after that time.

Q. Do you remember any marked improvement betwe 2030 1890 and 1901 in the physical condition of the Central Paci Railroad?

A. I know it was improved considerably, but I could not say just t what extent.

Q. What do you recall by way of improvement during that period

A. I would say the condition of the track. That is what we judg it by—the condition of the roadbed and the rails.

Q. How about the equipment during that period?

A. I do not know as I could say as to that. They have been getting new equipment right along. I know the Central Pacific-Union Pacific route has been improving right along up to to-day.

Q. Was not your attention drawn to some rather marked improvements that were made after 1901?

A. Well, perhaps the work on the line was more extensive than it had been before. I think that is correct.

Q. Prior to 1901, or prior to 1899 anyway, the great energies of the Southern Pacific Company had been directed towards the development of the Sunset line, had they not?

031 A. I would not say that their roadbed east of Los Angeles via El Paso was ever in better condition than around by Ogden and Sacramento. My observation and recollection is that it was just about the same. If anything, I should say the Central Pacific was a little better. It had, perhaps, more need of a better roadbed than any other line, on account of the large passenger business it did.

Q. Did you know of the special equipment which was furnished for use over the Sunset line exclusively in the matter of rolling stock?

A. No.

Q. You never had that called to your attention?

A. No.

Q. You did know that the freight service over that line was very much better than over any other?

A. The freight service over which line?

Q. The Sunset line.

A. To New York it was better than any other.

Q. And that continued up to a period after 1901?

A. Yes. It continued until the all-rail lines had arranged their service so as to make it equal with the Sunset Route service.

032 Q. Do you know which of the all-rail lines initiated the effort to bring the Ogden route up to the level of the Sunset route in service?

A. Well, I think all of the lines; that is, the principal lines between the Atlantic seaboard and Chicago engaged in that business and improved their service. In fact, they had a very good service to Chicago. Their service was always very much better for the distance hauled, as long as I can recollect it, to Chicago than it was west of Chicago, and it is to-day.

Q. Was Mr. Stubbs one of the instigators of that improvement after 1901?

A. I do not know as he was.

Q. Can you think of any particular individuals in the railroad business that took a prominent part in that effort to make that through all-rail service as good as the Southern Pacific had made it Sunset service?

A. As I said, the lines leading from here to Chicago, the Pennsylvania, the New York Central particularly, and the Erie, have an expedited merchandise service, a fast service; they have had that for years. They had that in at the time that we first began to make an effort to get seaboard business. They did not have to improve their service very much. The improvement had to be west of Chicago. They had made no great effort to secure the California traffic as against the Sunset Route, because the service could not be equalled under the arrangements they had with the western lines; but in the beginning, of course, it was not any very effective competition, because the western lines were not in condition to equal the service of the Sunset Route; but they gradually got better and improved their roadbed and improved their plant generally, and got into a position to render good service; and with that was the improvement in billing, the making of the through way bills and the prompt settlement of claims and avoiding transfers.

Q. In what sort of shape are the Iowa lines?

A. The Iowa lines—most of the Iowa lines—are in very good shape; the trunk lines crossing Iowa, the North Western, the Milwaukee & St. Paul, and the Burlington.

Q. How long has that been so?

A. The North Western for a great many years and the Burlington has always been up in pretty good shape. The Milwaukee & St. Paul came on later.

Q. You mean a matter of twenty years or twenty-five years?

A. I should say that the North Western has been up in fairly good shape, comparatively, for twenty-five years. Of course it is in much better condition to-day than it was twenty-five years ago, compared with the condition of lines generally during the time.

Q. The difficulties in bringing up the all-rail service into shape equal to the Sunset service were with the lines west of Omaha particularly?

A. West of Chicago. Well, west of Chicago, I would say.

Q. And that made it largely west of Omaha, did it not?

A. Yes; west of Omaha and west of the Colorado junctions; some of the lines connected through Colorado with the Denver & Rio Grande.

Q. How long has the Union Pacific been in good condition?

A. I could not say as to that. As long as I remember.

Q. Was the Union Pacific a first-rate road in 1887?

A. It was in very much better condition than the Atchison—that is what I judge it by—and the Atchison really had to be built up to the Union Pacific standard, and the Central Pacific.

Q. Take it from 1887 on, the Union Pacific, for its time, has always been a first-class road, has it not?

A. It has. The Ogden route has always given very good service. That has been my experience.

Q. Have you any idea what proportion of the Sunset freight between California and the Atlantic seaboard originates or is destined north of Tehachapi?

A. I have not; except, from my general knowledge, I would say the greater volume is north of Tehachapi.

Q. The reason that locomotives and freight cars and passenger cars can not move over the Sunset Route is because they require an all-rail route. Is that correct?

A. Locomotives usually move on their own wheels. It would be rather an odd matter to swing a locomotive onto the boat and then from the boat onto the rails again.

Q. And the same is true of the cars?

A. The cars are not readily transferred. There is great danger of damage if you transfer them. I should say that to bring them onto the boat and take them off again would be to go to much risk. They are bulky, besides, and I doubt whether the boats could handle them, on that account.

Q. And all the different classes of freight which you have mentioned as classes that can not be moved by the Sunset Route are those which it is either dangerous or impracticable to tranship from rail to boat or vice versa?

A. That is correct.

Q. And that is the only thing, barring perhaps some things that can not stand the heat of the South, that stands in the way of moving through freight over the Sunset Route?

A. That is correct.

Q. Do you happen to know whether there is any very heavy movement of explosives from the Pacific coast to the Atlantic?

A. There is not.

Q. How about the other way?

A. There is not a very heavy movement in either direction.

Redirect examination by Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Mr. Chambers, you were asked in cross-examination concerning the arrangement between the Atchison and the Southern Pacific by which there was joint use of the Southern Pacific track between Bakersfield and Mojave; and it was suggested that similar arrangements might be made between the Central Pacific and the Southern Pacific in case of separation of those lines. Do you think the joint arrangement of the track between Mojave and Bakers-field presents any such case as would be presented by the separa of the Central Pacific from the Southern?

A. No; it does not. There is practically no traffic on that line b tween Bakersfield and Mojave; that is, there is none that origina there to speak of except at Tehachapi, where there is some line.

Q. You used the illustration that it was practically a bridge acr the mountain?

A. Yes.

Q. With but little, if any, local traffic between the two poi Bakersfield and Mojave?

A. Yes; I had that in mind; that for a distance of 40 or 50 mi if there is anything of that kind in there, the two lines might use it.

Q. Is that anything like the condition that would be met in t case of the separation of the Central Pacific from the Southern a making joint arrangements?

A. No, sir; it is not.

Q. In all your experience do you know of any case similar to t separation proposed, of the Central Pacific from the South 2038 which has been accommodated by joint traffic arrangem between the two companies?

A. No; I do not.

Q. You know that there are through passenger and freight tra operated over these lines that pass from the Southern Pacific to t Central, and from the Central to the Southern, both between S Francisco and Portland and between San Francisco and Los Ange do you not?

A. Yes.

Q. You also know there are a number of Southern Pacific bra lines that are not connected with any line except the Central Pac line?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you think it is practicable to make a joint arrangement f the operation of those lines under separate ownership by the two co panies which would maintain anything like the present service, wh is effected by the Southern Pacific Company operating the li itself?

A. As a whole, I would say it is not.

Q. It is not practicable?

A. No, sir.

Q. These joint arrangements are generally made concerni 2039 a single piece of track, are they not? Or do they combine main line with all the branches, such as we have here?

A. They are usually made with a single piece of track, and for considerable distance—enough distance to justify it on the basis o saving in capital account.

Q. You said the Ogden route had always given good service. By hat you included the Central Pacific as a part of the Ogden route?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. As a matter of fact, as far as you know, has not the Central acific been maintained pari passu with the Union Pacific, and subantially in the same condition, as to efficiency, from the beginning?

A. That is my understanding, and that is my experience. I never eard of any difference between them.

Q. Has not generally the traffic over the Central Pacific and Union acific been of greater volume than the traffic over the Sunset line?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Always, has it not?

A. Yes, sir.

040 Q. And has not the Central Pacific and Union Pacific track been maintained at a higher standard, as a rule, than the racks of the Sunset Route—heavier rail and otherwise better adapted or good service?

A. I would say yes; that is my general understanding, although I ave never heard much objection to either one.

Q. But, other things being equal, the care of maintenance is in proortion to the amount of traffic you have to handle over a line?

Mr. McClennen. The petitioner objects to that as leading and calling for an opinion and a multitude of figures that the witness can ot possibly have knowledge of, and which had better be shown from he accounts of the defendant.

(By request, the pending question was repeated by the reporter as bove recorded.)

The Witness. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Herrin:

Q. That is, your main lines are always maintained, or usually naintained, at a higher standard than the branch lines?

A. Yes, sir. The needs of a passenger service largely control in the building up of the roadbed and tracks; that is, the business 041 that is sensitive to the condition of the roadbed and the tracks. That is what I judge the Central and Union Pacific route by. That has always been the principal passenger route of the Southern Pacific Company.

Q. And it always has been the principal passenger route transcontinentally, really, leaving out, of course, the Atchison as a very formidable competitor?

A. Not very effective yet as to northern California.

Q. There is no doubt of the position and prestige of the Central-Union Pacific line as a passenger line—transcontinental?

A. No.

Q. You spoke of using the Northern Electric and the Califo Transportation Company and the Oakland, Antioch & Eastern connections. I suppose you mean you have traffic arrangements w those lines for the interchange of freight?

A. Yes; we have joint rates in effect.

Q. You have joint rates in effect which gives you those lines purposes of securing freight from the points reached by them?

A. From the points reached by them and in competition with Southern Pacific.

Q. In competition with the Southern Pacific?

2042 A. Yes; as to points reached by the Southern Pacific and electric lines.

Q. The Sunset line has always had, from its beginning, a consi able local business, has it not?

A. Yes.

Q. I mean a business reaching to the mines of Arizona, New M ico, and other local business originating in that territory, and also Texas?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So that the projectors of that line probably had in view th local business as a part of the inducement to their building a li and did not confine themselves entirely to securing a line to re transcontinental business?

Mr. McCLENNEN. The petitioner objects to the question as leadi and as calling for the opinion of this witness as to the attitude the projectors of this road.

The WITNESS. I do not know what they had in mind, but it is fact that the line does have that business, and it is increasing.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. You know that at the time they built this line into Ar

2043 zona, Arizona was quite an active mining territory; there w exploration, and a good many mines were being operated that territory?

A. Yes. Southern Arizona was quite a mining territory. The was a good deal of mining in the territory.

Q. And therefore it furnished a market, naturally, for the pro ucts, the machinery, and other supplies, which could be supplie from California?

A. Lumber was the principal thing that came from there—mini timbers.

Q. It was a very important outlet then, giving a market for Ca fornia for these supplies that were being used largely in Arizona?

A. It helped California in that respect. What Arizona produc at that time—and afterwards, very largely, the bullion—went to th Atlantic seaboard to market.

Q. Yes.

A. And that has kept up until to-day.

Q. A large tonnage of that sort?

A. And an increasing tonnage.

Q. When the Atchison joined the Southern at Deming their business moved freely between those lines; there was an interchange of business, was there not, from the beginning?

2044 A. Yes.

Q. Did the Southern Pacific facilitate that interchange, so far as you know?

A. So far as I know they did; yes, sir.

Q. And before you had your rails in northern California you secured arrangements with the Southern Pacific Company which enabled you to reach the northern California points through traffic arrangements?

A. Yes.

Mr. HERRIN. I think that is all.

Recross-examination by Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. Mr. Chambers, one of the chief lines of the Southern Pacific Railroad which would be of importance for use in connection with the Central Pacific Railroad as an independent railroad is the Benicia cut-off, is it not [indicating on map]?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. One of the most important lines of the Central Pacific Railroad for the use of the Southern Pacific is the line to Tehama, north to the State line?

2045 A. I would say so; yes, sir.

Q. Those lines are both of them longer in extent than the section of the Southern Pacific line over which the Atchison now operates under the trackage arrangement you have?

A. One of them, I think; I have no doubt. The distance from Sacramento to San Francisco I think is perhaps about the same.

Q. Is it not about ninety miles from Sacramento to San Francisco by the Benicia cut-off?

A. Yes; I think it is. Ninety miles is considered the distance between San Francisco and Sacramento.

Q. What occur to you as the chief difficulties in the way of having the Central Pacific operate over the Benicia cut-off under a trackage agreement with the Southern Pacific?

A. Having just the right to run its trains over the track?

Q. Just the right to run its trains over the track, and not participate in the business?

A. Just the right to run its trains over the track?

Q. And not participate in the local business.

A. There is no serious difficulty in doing that, if they can arra about the terminals.

2046 Q. Would there be any difficulty in making the arra ment with the Central to use the line north from Tehama its through business from Oregon to San Francisco?

A. I could not say whether there would be any serious diffic in making the arrangements. So far as running their trains over track is concerned, there would be no difficulty.

Q. Apart from these two lines I have mentioned, the Benicia off and the line north from Tehama, what important piece of tr is there that either road would need belonging to the other to duct through operations with reasonable facility?

A. You mean through operations to certain points?

Q. Well, take, for instance, from San Francisco to all Or points, the line from Tehama to the north boundary of the St is the only line of the Central Pacific that the Southern Pacific wo need?

A. That is all they would need, under the conditions that say.

Q. Now, take it from San Francisco to Los Angeles, either d the coast line or down the valley line. The Southern Pac 2047 would need no rails of the Central Pacific, would it?

A. No; they could reach over there through Los Angeles.

Q. There are certain branches belonging to the Southern Pac off-shooting from the Central Pacific in the San Joaquin Val You see them noted here on the map in red. The Central Pacific shown by the darker lines. Those branches are all of them relati short branches, are they not?

A. Yes.

Q. In the natural order of things, it would be a reasonable busi arrangement to have those branches either transferred to the Cent Pacific or operated directly by the Central Pacific under some app priate arrangement, would it not?

A. I do not know whether I just get what you are after. T difficulty of separating those two and the objection that I se separating them in the San Joaquin Valley is that you would arrange their train service. Whereas it is now through service fr Bakersfield; you would go around on what you might call bra lines, going around through Portersville and up to Fresno, wh you now perform the local service with through trains. T

2048 trains are routed so as to run the farthest distance a include just as many stations as is reasonably possible, s when you disarrange that service it is pretty hard to figure out j what you have got to do to give service from one part of the va

o the other. I could not tell without going in and analyzing. They have service between San Francisco and Fresno that comes down he east side line; and then they have service from Fresno and Bakersfield, that goes down the west side line or the east side line; nd they have a complete service, through route and complete serv-ce. You see that serves all these branch lines up through here [indicating on map]. Starting down at Bakersfield, they can run a train that will serve the east and west side lines there between Fresno and San Francisco.

Q. The train you have described coming around the west side, around through Bakersfield, travels all the way over Southern Pa-cific rails, does it not?

A. Yes. It would help out on this service here from Fresno to San Francisco. It gives you another train from Fresno to San Francisco.

Q. But it is all on Southern Pacific track?

A. Yes; it would be that way. But to-day the most impor-2049 tant service, I think, between northern and southern California is operated over the Central Pacific track.

Mr. HERRIN. That is right.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. From what point to what point?

A. From Lathrop down to Goshen Junction.

Q. So far as through service is concerned, the Southern Pacific has another line all the way from Goshen Junction into San Fran-cisco, has it not; and the only thing that would not be served by that would be local service to the Central Pacific track between Lathrop and Goshen Junction?

A. Well, the Southern Pacific's service between Bakersville and Stockton would be, I think, impaired. They could not make the same time around by this line that they get over this through line.

Q. Between Bakersfield and Stockton?

A. Yes; or between Bakersfield and San Francisco the service would be impaired.

Q. Could they not make the same time between Bakersfield and San Francisco?

A. I think not, because they would have to go around this way [indicating on map].

Q. They could go around—— 2050 A. They would have to go around here. Their important trains do not run around that way—their fast trains.

Q. The only part that they would be excluded from would be from Goshen Junction, from Fresno, Merced, and Lathrop; is not that true?

A. That is their best time in the valley north of Bakersfield.

Q. And they are natural Central Pacific points as the trac laid?

A. Yes; and then these others are built out from there; feed really, to that line, or connecting these east and west side lines those principal towns in the valley.

Q. The line from Tulare to Visalia, to Fresno, and up the side of the valley is a complete line in itself?

A. That is a complete line, but that is not the important line, the Southern Pacific to-day is moving through the San Joa Valley.

Q. That is, you mean that the Central Pacific line enjoys the c shipping points in that valley?

A. So far as it goes, yes; north of Bakersfield.

Q. In making your answer about what was practicable on separation of these roads were you aware of the contr

2051 that was made between the Union Pacific and the Cen Pacific and the Southern Pacific in February, 1913?

A. In a general way I was aware of that.

Q. Did you know what provision was made in that agreement the joint use of the terminals?

A. In a general way; yes.

Q. And for the use of the indispensable lines for through servi

A. As to that, in a general way, I did; yes, sir.

Q. Did you know of anything from a railroad standpoint th was impracticable about such an agreement?

A. Well, I understand there was a great portion of it that to be worked out, that was not complete; all the details had been agreed to.

Q. In the part that was complete, did you know of there be anything that was not practicable as a railroad matter, in the p that they had reached?

A. As to the terminals?

Q. Yes.

A. And the use of lines from Sacramento to San Francisco Benicia?

Q. Yes.

A. It seemed to me that would work out all right.

2052 By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. There is one important matter that differentiates th case from the Tehachapi main line, which is that there is local tra on all these lines of the Central Pacific and Southern Pacific, there not?

A. Yes.

Mr. McCLENNEN. The petitioner objects to the question as leading.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. And one of the things that facilitated your agreement over the Tehachapi was that there was substantially no local traffic?

A. Yes. When I answered as to the line between Sacramento and San Francisco I understood the Central Pacific would simply have running rights for their trains over that line, and that they were not to participate in the traffic that originated on that line.

Q. But if they were to make an agreement to run the trains between California and Oregon over the Central Pacific from, say, Tehama to the Oregon line, you have rather important communities and towns intervening those two points which require railroad service?

2053 A. Yes.

Q. And if you deny them the use of these through trains which pass over that line, you have lessened very much the service that you can give them on the local lines?

A. That is what I say as to the whole proposition.

Q. Yes.

A. That you can not separate those two that have been built up as one, without interrupting the service very seriously, and without increasing the cost of doing the business and without increasing the rates.

Q. Another very important feature of the trains between Los Angeles and San Francisco: The Southern Pacific at present gives a local service to the important points in the San Joaquin Valley, such as Madera and Fresno, by these through trains, does it not?

A. Yes.

Q. If you took the through trains off of that line, you would practically sidetrack those important points and put them on a local line?

A. You would have substituted local service for the through service.

2054 Mr. McCLENNEN. The petitioner objects to the question as leading and as overlooking the fact that the sidetrack might be the Atchison.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. What was the answer?

A. The local service would have to be substituted on these branch lines or those parallel lines on the east and west of the San Joaquin Valley for the through service that had served them locally.

Q. And that would put those towns on practically a local service, an inferior service to what they get now?

A. Some of them.

Q. As compared with what they get now with the through serv
A. Yes.
Q. Then, again, the freight that is moved from the South Pacific line south to Tehama down to Davis, to points in the S Joaquin Valley, the Southern Pacific lines in the San Joaquin Val now readily moves, as you understand, via the Central Pacific int vening lines, but after the separation how could that move with sending it down to Port Costa, ferrying it there and sending it do the Southern Pacific line?
2055 A. It could not.
Mr. McCLENNEN. The petitioner objects to the question the ground that it is leading.
The WITNESS. That is the only way it could be moved, over Southern Pacific rails.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. What would you say about that service as to its being as g as that now given by the use of the Central Pacific lines between th points?
A. I assume that it is a longer route, from my own knowledge, that it would take a little longer time to move the traffic.
Q. If it was longer, would not that be objectionable?
A. Yes; it would.
Mr. HERRIN. That is all.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. Do I understand you to say that these through trains to L
Angeles do all the local business in the valley?
A. Not all. They do a good share of the local business. You c take a train at Los Angeles and go through to almost any point in t San Joaquin Valley on the Southern Pacific lines to-day. Th 2056 is, you can go via Porterville, take out of Bakersfield—that i on the east side line—and go to Fresno and go up the w side line from Fresno or by the other line via Goshen up to Fres and up to Lathrop.
Q. That is to say, one of the local trains now runs from Porterv down to Fresno and up the west side line [indicating on map]?
A. I think that goes up the west side line. That is my recolle tion. I know it does run through Porterville and up to Exeter a up to Fresno.
Q. Anybody wishing to go from Los Angeles to a point on th Central Pacific Railroad would have to leave that train at Fresno some other common point and take the Central Pacific train to th station on the Central Pacific?
A. Yes. The Southern Pacific aims to serve those parallel lines the San Joaquin Valley largely with a through service between L

Angeles and San Francisco, and between Bakersfield and San Francisco; so that they operate the trains, some of them over the west side line and then through Fresno, and they switch onto the east side line and go down to Bakersfield.

Q. Then they run some up the coast line, do they not?

2057 A. Some up the coast line via Santa Barbara to Los Angeles.

Q. Yes.

A. Yes.

Q. And you say they use these through trains for the local service?

A. They use them largely. They have a number of local trains, in addition, as there is a heavy traffic between Los Angeles and lower points in the San Joaquin Valley, up to and including Fresno in both directions.

Q. Is there much traffic from Los Angeles to the points in the San Joaquin Valley above Fresno?

A. No.

Mr. McClennen. That is all.

(Witness excused.)

(Whereupon, an adjournment was taken until to-morrow, Tuesday, April 20, 1915, at eleven o'clock a. m.)

2058 TWENTY-FIFTH DAY.

Room 2506, 165 Broadway,
New York City, Tuesday, April 20, 1915.

The hearing was resumed, pursuant to adjournment, at 11 o'clock a. m., before Frank R. Hanna, special examiner.

Present on behalf of the United States: James W. Orr, Esq., Edward F. McClennen, Esq., and Edward E. Gann, Esq., special assistants to the Attorney General.

Present on behalf of the defendants: W. F. Herrin, Esq., J. P. Blair, Esq., and Garret McEnerney, Esq., for the Southern Pacific Company.

2059 John W. Griggs was called as a witness on behalf of the defendants, and having been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. Herrin:

Q. General Griggs, you were Attorney General of the United States in the year 1899, were you?

A. Yes.

Q. When did you take that office?

A. The latter part of January, 1898. I think my commission is dated January 31, 1898.

Q. Who preceded you?

A. Joseph McKenna, now Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States.

Q. How long did you hold the office of Attorney General?

A. Until April 1, 1901, having been reappointed on March 4, 1901.

Q. And President McKinley was President during your incumbency as Attorney General?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall having anything to do with the settlement of the indebtedness of the Central Pacific Railroad Company to the United States of America during your term of office?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall signing the agreement that was made of date February 1, 1899, between the United States of America, acting by the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of the Interior, and the Attorney General, of the first part, and the Central Pacific Railroad Company, of the second part, and Messrs. Speyer & Company, bankers, of New York, of the third part?

A. I remember that.

Q. Did you sign that agreement as Attorney General?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall the negotiations, if any, which led up to that agreement?

A. Yes; I recall, I think, the main facts connected with the negotiations. Probably a great many of the minor details have escaped my memory.

Q. About how long were those negotiations in progress, as far as you can recall?

A. I should say from a period in 1898, probably the middle of the year, until the agreement of February 1, 1899, was consummated and executed.

Q. You will recall that the provision of law which authorized the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of the Interior, and the Attorney General to act as a commission was in the appropriation bill approved July 7, 1898?

A. Yes.

Q. These negotiations, therefore, began after that time?

A. I am not quite sure about that. I am not quite certain but what there were negotiations before that; because the subject of the enforcement of the Government liens against the Pacific railroads generally, including the Union Pacific, had been in the mind and in the hands of the Department of Justice for a considerable period, even before I came there; and I have some recollection that my first interview with Mr. Speyer antedated the date of that act of July 7, 1898; but that is vague.

Q. With whom did these negotiations occur, so far as you remember? What parties participated in them?

A. Mostly, so far as I took personal part in them, with James Speyer, of Speyer & Company, of New York; and I recall now one occasion when the matter was discussed by Mr. Huntington, 2062 who, I think, was then president of the Southern Pacific Railroad; I think it was Collis P. Huntington.

Q. Yes.

A. At the Cabinet Room, in the presence of Mr. McKinley and myself.

Q. That is President McKinley?

A. President McKinley. But the greater part of the negotiations that I remember were conducted through James Speyer.

Q. Were there many of those interviews?

A. Oh, I can not recall definitely, but the matter extended over a considerable time, and just how many times I conferred with Mr. Speyer or conferred with my associates, the Secretary of the Treasury, or with the President I do not know; I can not say. The matter was one that was deemed of great importance to the Government at that time, and when I first went into the department the President directed me to give immediate attention to the Pacific Railroad debts and to take every means that I thought necessary and spend as much money as I needed and do whatever was necessary to enforce the Government liens.

Q. I call your attention to the fact, which is in evidence in 2063 the case, that in the committee reports of both Houses of Congress, bearing date in the year 1896, these committees had recommended extensions for the payment of this indebtedness on the following terms——

Mr. McCLENNEN. Which one are you reading from, Mr. Herrin?

Mr. HERRIN. I am reading, really, from the answer, which is a correct summary of the reports which were put in evidence, and much briefer than the reports.

Mr. BLAIR. That is the report of 1896.

Mr. HERRIN. That the company (the Central Pacific Railroad) was to pay "$365,000 per annum on account of principal for ten years from 1898 to 1908; $550,000 per annum for ten years from 1908 to 1918; and $750,000 per annum each year thereafter until the entire debt should be extinguished."

Besides those payments they were, of course, to pay interest at two per cent per annum on deferred payments.

In your duties as Attorney General I suppose you were familiar with the reports or had some knowledge of them?

The WITNESS. I remember when the matters were especially put in my personal charge at the department, getting all the reports,

2064 acts of Congress, and other public matters relating to the s ject, both of the Union Pacific and of the Central Pacific a Western Pacific and familiarizing myself with them. I can not t you now what I ascertained, because I have forgotten.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. This act of Congress which authorized this commission which you were one member to settle this debt provided that y should not allow longer than ten years for the payment of t debt. That you recall?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. And that you were also required to collect the full amount the debt without any abatement?

A. Yes.

Q. And that you should exact at least three per cent per ann interest?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall that this act also provided that you were take such security as "to said commission may seem expedient"?

A. Yes.

Q. These negotiations which you have mentioned resulted 2065 the agreement of February 1st, to which I have called your tention?

A. It did. I think I ought to say, Mr. Herrin, referring to th act of July 7, 1898, that I have a strong impression that that s or the provision of the appropriation act, was drawn and passed fit a tentative agreement which was the result of negotiation that h already been had.

Q. Very likely.

A. I have a strong impression to that effect, but I can not be qu sure of it.

Q. Do you know whether or not that agreement was carried out?

A. It was.

Q. Were the bonds of the Central Pacific Railroad Company its successor deposited in the amount required by the agreement wi the Secretary of the Treasury?

A. You mean the four per cent refunding bonds?

Q. Yes.

A. I was informed so by the Secretary of the Treasury at th time, he being the custodian. They were not deposited with me.

Q. Did you thereafter make a report to Congress, as you reca which referred to this subject?

2066 A. I think I did in my annual report, and possibly a spec report, but I do not recall.

Q. Have you a copy of that report with you?

A. No; I have not.

Mr. McCLENNEN. I have a copy of that report here, I think.

Mr. HERRIN. I have the report. I have it before me.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. I call your attention to the report of the Attorney General dated "Department of Justice, Washington, D. C., November 30, 1899," which is signed by John W. Griggs, Attorney General, in the printed volume issued by the Government, and I refer especially to that part of the report which is upon the subject of "Pacific Railroad matters," at page 30, and extending down to the top of page 33.

A. (After examining document.) Yes; I have read it.

Q. That is the report, is it?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. HERRIN. I wish to offer in evidence that part of the report of the Attorney General which is under the head of "Pacific Railroad matters", on page 30, down to the heading "Judicial salaries", 2067 on page 33. I am willing to exclude the part of it that refers to the Union Pacific, but it does not make much difference; it is not very long, and it had just as well all go in, I think; but there is a clause at the end which refers to both.

Mr. McCLENNEN (after examination of report). I think it would be just as convenient to put the whole of it in.

Mr. HERRIN. The reporter may copy the extract from the report, and it may be marked as Exhibit No. 53. The extract to be copied begins on page 30, with the heading "Pacific Railroad matters", and runs down to page 33, ending just above the heading "Judicial salaries". Mr. McClennen, is that the report you have?

Mr. McCLENNEN. No; the one I have is earlier.

The WITNESS. Did I make a special report, or was it the Secretary of the Treasury?

Mr. McCLENNEN. You made a report as commissioner to your authorizing body; not as Attorney General.

The WITNESS. I had forgotten it.

(The extract referred to was marked "Defendants' Exhibit (Griggs) No. 53, April 20, 1915", and will be found in the volume of defendants' exhibits.)

2068 By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. In this report which we have just introduced in evidence it is stated that on October 7, 1899, bonds were delivered to the Treasury Department by the Pacific Railway Company to secure the outstanding notes held by the Treasury in conformity to the terms of the agreement of settlement. That, I suppose, fixes the date when these bonds were received by the Treasury Department?

A. I suppose that is correct.

Q. I call your attention to the form of the bonds that were d posited, and particularly to the guarantee of the Southern Pac Company printed upon those bonds, and ask you if you know an thing about that guarantee.

A. (After examining bond.) That is the form of the guaran that was approved by the commission—I assume approved by the
At any rate, the bonds were accepted with that guaranty.

Q. And you had to do in your negotiations with the form guaranty that should be given to the Southern Pacific Company?

A. I do not remember. I have no doubt I had to approve 2069 but I do not remember. I will say with respect to that th the agreement that we made provided that the bonds deposi as security should be such bonds as were described in the plan readjustment or settlement put out by Speyer & Company, and th plan described those bonds as guaranteed by the Southern Pac Railroad, as I recollect.

Q. You saw that plan of readjustment, did you?

A. Oh, I have no doubt I did.

Q. The agreement of February 1st recites that contracts wh had been made with stockholders and bondholders prior to th time had been furnished to the Government of the United States?

A. Yes.

Q. And thereafter, as those contracts were completed and of la date, were you not furnished with similar contracts?

A. I have no doubt I was, but I can not recall that.

Q. In this negotiation, was it conducted in part or at all b written correspondence?

A. I do not think so.

Q. Generally by personal interviews?

A. By personal interviews.

2070 Q. But if there was any correspondence up that subject where would that correspondence be?

A. If it were from my department, it would be in the Departme of Justice in Washington.

Q. You did not take away with you any of the official corr spondence?

A. Oh, no.

Q. You left your files intact?

A. Yes.

Q. When you left the office?

A. Yes.

Q. In your office in Washington?

A. Yes.

Mr. HERRIN. Take the witness.

Cross-examination by Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. Your recollection places your meeting Mr. Huntington on this matter as on one occasion only?

A. That is all I recall.

Q. Have you any recollection of what took place at that interview?

A. No, except I have a recollection that it related to the sub-2071 ject of the settlement of this Southern Pacific and Western Pacific debt.

Q. You are using "Western Pacific" to describe the old Western Pacific railroad corporation which was one of the bond-aided roads in California?

A. My recollection is that the Central Pacific and the Western Pacific were in some way jointly involved in this; just how I do not recall. You will see that the agreement we made relates to the Central Pacific and Western Pacific.

Q. Could you place at all at what stage of the negotiations your interview with Mr. Huntington took place?

A. No.

Q. In the main, your dealings were with James Speyer exclusively?

A. Yes.

Q. Were they conducted by you alone, or by all the commissioners together?

A. I think mostly by myself, and my recollection is that I, after discussing with him the details, reported them to Mr. Gage. I do not recall that Mr. Bliss, the other commissioner, took any part in it except to agree to what Mr. Gage and myself and the Presi-2072 dent, who took a somewhat active interest in the matter, did.

Q. Did the President, within your knowledge, meet the other parties except on the one occasion that you speak of?

A. I think I saw the President with Mr. Speyer. I have quite a distinct recollection of seeing the President with Mr. Speyer.

Q. Was there anything to indicate that the President ever took any part in the negotiations out of your presence?

A. Only what he said.

Q. Well, if it is not going too far, did he say anything indicating that he had conducted any negotiations?

A. Yes; he spoke of having conferred with Mr. Huntington and having seen him about the matter.

Q. At some time other than the one occasion you saw him?

A. At some time other than the one occasion when I saw him.

Q. Did he inform you as to what had passed between him and Mr. Huntington on that occasion?

A. I do not recall.

Q. Mr. Elihu Root had something to do with this matter?

A. Yes; Mr. Root was employed by me under authority 2073 I had from the President to employ special counsel, to prep a bill of complaint to be filed, to foreclose the Governm lien, and he did prepare such a bill, my recollection is, and submi it to me; but it was never filed, because the settlement interve before we got to that point.

I may also say, if it is of any interest to you, that the commi represented by Speyer & Company refunded to the Government fee that they had paid him as a part of the settlement, which is mentioned in the papers. I got that out of them.

Q. Was the drafting of that foreclosure bill before the passing the act of July 7, 1898?

A. I should think that Mr. Root had been employed before t but whether the bill was actually drafted prior to that, I can tell.

Q. Did Mr. Root take any part in the negotiations or the set ment?

A. No; I do not think he did.

Q. Did he take any part in committing those negotiations to l form?

A. I do not think he did.

Q. By whom was the agreement of February 1, 1899, draft 2074 A. That I do not remember; but I think it was drafted somebody acting for Speyer & Company, and submitted to for approval or emendation.

Q. And did you personally consider the draft?

A. I can only say I must have done so; but I have no recollecti

Q. Can you say that it embodied all the agreements that had b made relative to the settlement?

A. I think it did.

Q. When you stated your recollection of what the agreement ca for with reference to the character of bond to be delivered, you w merely stating your recollection of that written instrument?

A. Yes.

Q. Not intending to state any agreement dehors that instrume

A. That instrument was the embodiment of agreements arrived previously.

Q. And embodied all of them?

A. As far as I know; yes. That is to say, we undoubtedly thou that it carried out the object of the Government in collecting its d or securing its payment, as we had arranged to have it secur 2075 Q. I call your attention to House of Representatives Do ment 238, 55th Congress, third session, entitled "Indebted of the Central Pacific and Western Pacific Railroads. Report of commissioners appointed to settle the indebtedness to the Government growing out of the issue of bonds in aid of the construction of the Central Pacific and Western Pacific Railroads, February 20, 1899. Referred to Committee on Pacific Railroads," and being a report dated February 15, 1899.

Before questioning you on it, I will put it in evidence as petitioner's exhibit No. 77.

(The document referred to was marked "Petitioner's Exhibit (Griggs) No. 77, April 20, 1915", and will be found in the volume of petitioner's exhibits.)

Mr. McCLENNEN. It is stipulated that in copying this exhibit the agreement contained in it need not be recopied, it being a copy of defendants' Exhibit A of the answer.

Following the agreement, however, there should be copied the acknowledgment clause, which is not copied in the answer.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. The particular thing at this moment to which I wished 2076 to call your attention was that this report and the agreement itself contains no reference to the Southern Pacific Company or to any guaranty to be made by the Southern Pacific Company.

Having that called to your attention, is it not the fact that the guaranty of the Southern Pacific Company was not a matter which the Government exacted?

A. I would have to answer that no. I will explain that. My recollection is that the guaranty of the Southern Pacific on those bonds was one of the agreed parts of the negotiation, the Government relying upon that as an additional security or guaranty to see that their debt would be paid, either by the new corporation that was to be formed and to issue these bonds, or by the guarantor, the Southern Pacific Company.

Q. If your recollection were not at fault in that respect, how is it possible that you should have passed, as the final agreement, one which did not, by reference or otherwise, call for any such guaranty, but merely called for first mortgage bonds?

A. I do not think we did. The agreement, as I recall, of February , 1899, provided that we were to receive as collateral security such 2077 bonds as were described in the Speyer prospectus; and in that prospectus, as I understand the agreement, whatever it was, the Southern Pacific had agreed to guarantee those refunding fours.

Q. Will you not look through the agreement itself, seeing that your recollection has played you false with reference to that particular matter, and that the agreement does not contain that provision, but merely provides that the bonds that you shall receive as security shall be first-lien bonds, part of an issue not exceeding one hund million dollars par value?

Mr. HERRIN. I call your attention, Mr. Griggs, to the third fourth paragraphs of the agreement; the fourth especially.

The WITNESS. Yes. The third paragraph of the agreement vides that the payment of the principal and interest of the notes s be secured by the pledge of first refunding mortgage four per gold bonds, issued by the Central Pacific Railroad Company o successor company having title to the aforesaid railroads, such b to be part of an issue hereinafter described, not exceeding one h dred million dollars in all.

Then, on the next page, it describes said bonds are to run

Now, my understanding of that was, Speyer & Company bein party to this agreement, the deposit of the various underlying b and stocks and so forth being recited, the agreement of reorgan tion or scheme or prospectus being in our possession, showing t these bonds were to be guaranteed by the Southern Pacific, th were the bonds that we meant when we described the four per refunding bonds.

I should say our assumption was that the description there rel to the bonds that were described in that agreement, and it was part of the one scheme, which we knew at the time from negotiati with Mr. Huntington and from familiarity with that document, w actually being put through by the efforts and on the responsibi of the Southern Pacific.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. Perhaps I have not made clear to you the distinct 2079 which I have in my mind. It is this, not that you not have known the probability that the Southern Pacific C pany was going to guarantee the bonds which Speyer & Comp were going to put out as part of the reorganization scheme, but t the insistence of the Government upon such a guaranty was n prerequisite to the acceptance by the Government of the bonds.

A. Well, speaking of the matter as it appears in the contract am not prepared to argue whether we would have been entitled reject bonds that were offered as security without the guaranty the Southern Pacific; but, as a matter of fact, that was in the templation of the parties when the agreement was signed; I sho say that nothing short of that would be acceptable.

Q. Having in mind the infirmities of human recollection in the best of us, and the probability that you would see that the contract, before you signed it, contained all the essential agreements that had been made, is it not probable that if the guaranty of the Southern Pacific Company was a part of the Government's or the commission's exactions that you, when seeing that the contract provided for the character of bonds that they should be first-lien bonds, that they 2080 should not exceed one hundred million dollars, that they should have such times and rate of interest, would also have seen that the contract provided that they should be guaranteed bonds if you then had deemed that that guaranty was a part of that upon which you commissioners were insisting?

A. That might be argued from the face of the papers, but as against that I have the very clear recollection that the bonds were to be guaranteed by the Southern Pacific, and that we thought the agreement was efficient to secure that. Whether it would have turned out, on a law suit, to be efficient or not is another matter, but that we thought it was efficient there is no doubt.

Q. I call your attention to the provisions of the fourth paragraph of the instrument, describing the character of bonds, where it says: "The said refunding bonds so to be pledged as security for the payment of the said notes and interest shall be delivered to the Treasurer of the United States within a reasonable time after this settlement becomes binding for obtaining the deposit of securities, the assent of security owners and the carrying out of such plan of reorganization or readjustment as may be necessary to enable

In view of that provision of the agreement, do you not recall that it was the understanding that the plan of readjustment was, and was to remain, so elastic that it could be changed in any respect which did not put it at variance with the essential provisions of this agreement as to the bonds, namely, that they should be a first lien and should not exceed one hundred million dollars in amount?

A. My idea of the object of that clause which you read is that it was to cover that which it should be found necessary to do afterwards in order to put the title of the property into some new company that could make the bonds. That had not been done when the agreement was signed. I think that was specially intended to cover the process by which that condition would be brought about.

If your question is intended to ask me whether I infer that the guaranty of the Southern Pacific might have been taken out of the arrangement, I should say decidedly not. My recollection is 2082 that that was an essential part of the agreement. The a rangement was put through, it was enabled to be put throug by reason of the intervention of Mr. Huntington for the South Pacific Company. We all recognized that at the time, and we understood that we were getting the endorsement of his company these bonds.

Now, whether we put it in the agreement or not may be a matt of difference of legal opinion just now; but that we were to have and that we did get it, is a matter of positive recollection on my pa

Q. Did you understand that Mr. Huntington had any interest this time in the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. I do not remember whether I did or not; but my impressi would be that he did have or that his company had. I am not s about that.

Q. Is it reasonably conceivable, considering your well-known c of legal matters, that you, as Attorney General of the United Stat would have entered into an agreement which did not distinctly c for a guaranty by the Southern Pacific Company on bonds whi were to be deposited as collateral, if you had then been of the unde standing that the bonds must have that characteristic?

A. Well, that calls for a little philosophizing, I sup 2083 pose, and in that line I would say that the Attorney Gener of the United States is a very busy man, no matter who he i
He has a great many matters to deal with, and the possibility of h overlooking a point in an agreement, the possibility of his assumin that it covered something which it did not specifically cover is ver great, and I do not claim any particular immunity from that kin of defect. I should say in this case, however, that inasmuch as th contract may be assumed to have embodied the purpose of the par ties, any difference as to what it actually covered was settled by th interpretation the parties put upon it afterwards by conforming to i I can not conceive that, if it was not a part of the agreement, tha we should get bonds guaranteed by the Southern Pacific; that w should really have gotten them; because I do not believe that Mr Huntington would have volunteered, except as a part of his con tract, to give us his guaranty, if he did not understand he was bound to do so.

Q. You can well see how a corporation interested in the succes of a reorganization scheme should put its guaranty upon bonds, if thereby a point or two would be added to their market value, eve if that company was not under contract to make any such 2084 guaranty, so far as its relations with the United States Gov ernment were concerned, can you not?

A. Yes.

Q. Is it not, perhaps, the fact that what the United States Government was interested in was that they should get the fresh obligations and direct obligations of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, secured by a first mortgage for fifty-eight odd million dollars out of a total first mortgage of one hundred million dollars, in place of the, so to speak, second mortgage lien which they then held upon a part of the road; and that if they could get such first mortgage bonds they were willing to accept them, and if the persons who were furnishing those bonds were minded, as a part of the reorganization, to put a guaranty of the Southern Pacific Company upon them so as to increase their market price that the Government did not object, but that, if the reorganizers had found some other way to put through the reorganization, it was not to be rejected, so far as the Government was concerned if it did have the essential features, namely, a new obligation and a first mortgage lien for fifty-eight million dollars out of a total mortgage of not exceeding one hundred million dollars over the entire road of the Central Pacific 2085 Railroad in place of a second lien upon only a part of that railroad?

A. I think your question leaves out of view the fact that the Government's bargain with these people was that it should have its fifty-eight millions of dollars paid through notes that came due spaced every six months, payments which might be defaulted, in view of the conditions that had existed with reference to the Central Pacific; and in case of default, then we would have to look to the bonds that were put up as collateral, and if those bonds did not have the guaranty of the Southern Pacific, both in the market sense and in every other sense, they would not be the kind of security that the other holders of those bonds were getting, and would not have enabled us to come down on the Southern Pacific for the payment of our money. We were not looking to the collection of the money on those bonds. They were not given as a direct payment. They were only collateral to notes that had to be paid much sooner than the bonds; and if they were not paid, then we had the right to sell those bonds, and the marketability of the bonds, therefore, became important.

Q. If I followed the distinction which you made in the lat-2086 ter part of your answer, you were indicating that it was important to the Government to get as good bonds as the general public was getting in that issue?

A. Yes.

Q. If the bonds issued to the general public in the reorganization, as a part of that issue, were not guaranteed bonds, it follows, of course, that the Government would be getting just as good bonds if it did not get guaranteed bonds?

A. But by the agreement they were to be guaranteed—I mean t reorganization agreement—they were to be guaranteed by the Sou ern Pacific. That was the description of them in the reorganizati agreement; there they were called by the same name—first refundi fours.

Q. Do you recall that at the date of the execution of this agr ment of February 1, 1899, the time of the actual execution of it, reorganization agreement had been signed by any of the reorganizer

A. I do not recall whether it had been signed or not; but this pr pective agreement, or prospectus agreement, the plan put out Speyer, was extant.

Q. Do you recall now that at the time the agreement was sign the plan of reorganization, even in circular form, had not b promulgated?

2087 A. I do not know whether it was promulgated to the pub or not, but it undoubtedly had been furnished to us, the co mission.

Q. In what form, physically, had that been furnished to you?

A. I can not tell you.

Q. Do you bear in mind seeing anything in print of that descri tion before this agreement of February, 1899, was signed?

A. I do not remember now.

Q. Do you recall seeing, in typewriting, any such plan?

A. I do not. I might say I do not recall seeing this agreeme which I signed, as a matter of memory.

Q. Of course, you understand that in the questions I am putti to you, I am suggesting these matters of argument merely to see h they may effect your testimony on the matter.

A. I understand that, certainly. You are trying to see how mu is memory and how much is inference.

Q. Precisely. It appears from the exhibits put in this case that t plan of reorganization is dated February 8, 1899; that t 2088 promulgating circular is dated February 20, 1899, that yo report on the consummation of the agreement is dated Febr ary 15, 1899, and that the agreement bears an acknowledgment February 6, 1899, by the president of the Central Pacific Railro Company at San Francisco. With those dates before you, can yo assist at all in saying on what date the agreement of February 1899, was actually executed?

A. No; I can not.

Q. It was certainly executed by the 15th of February, was it no

A. It must have been, because we reported it then as a thing don

Mr. McENERNEY. There is a statement in the report, as you wi recall, that the president approved it on the 15th of February.

Mr. HERRIN. On the 15th; yes.

Mr. McCLENNEN. Do you want to have this go on the record?

Mr. McENERNEY. Yes.

The WITNESS. It states in the report that the settlement was made as of the first day of February, 1899. It might easily be, as you all know, that an agreement which was dated the first of February 2089 might be delivered and executed subsequent to that day; but whether this was so or not, of course I do not remember. But it was approved by the president on the 15th day of February, according to this.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. Was the approval by the president the last act in the process of execution?

A. I assume so.

Q. That is, it is altogether probable that it had been executed by the company and by the commissioners before it was approved by the president?

A. No doubt of it.

Q. But how many days before, you have no present recollection?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you remember whether, prior to the execution of the agreement, you had had left with you at any time the text of the reorganization plan of Speyer & Company?

A. As a matter of recollection, I do not.

Q. You recall, as one of the essential features of the agreement, that the existing second lien on the part of the road which was the existing security—the immediate security—of the United 2090 States, was not to be impaired until you got the actual delivery of securities described in the agreement of February 1, 1899?

A. I recall a provision on that subject. Exactly what it is I do not now remember.

Q. You recall that the notes were all to become due on default in one?

A. Yes.

Q. You recall that the only thing that the United States was giving up by the agreement was the right immediately to foreclose its second lien on part of the railroad?

A. Why, I think that would be so, except that there might be some doubt whether, after the company had been sold out under the prior lien and reorganized, the agreement to retain the old lien would be very valid.

Q. That sale was not a possibility if the new securities were delivered as provided by the agreement of February 1, 1899, was it? That is, the new securities were to be refunding securities?

A. Yes.

Q. You knew at the time you negotiated this agreement tha there was a default in any one of these notes of the Central 2091 cific Railroad Company you could proceed, by receivership otherwise, to get the entire railroad of the Central Pa Railroad Company, subject only to the new refunding first-mortg bonds?

A. Well, I do not know whether I can say that or not, now. I not think I can say it.

Q. You knew that if any reorganization prevailed it would doubtedly leave some one interested in the junior securities, or s of the new company, dependent for their value upon the extingu ment of the new first lien refunding bonds?

A. Yes.

Q. You realized that if the Government did get the obligatio the Central Pacific Railroad Company plus substantially fifty-e one-hundredths of a first mortgage upon the entire property, it getting a great deal more than it gave up in yielding its second upon a part of the railroad?

A. I am not sure whether those first refunding mortgage bond whether the first refunding mortgage was really a first lien on property or not.

Mr. McCLENNEN. There will be no dispute between us that were to be. The agreement is perfectly clear on that.

2092 Mr. HERRIN. Yes; it was contemplated by the agreem that they should be a first lien.

The WITNESS. Then, what you said would be true.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. As a matter of reasoning, then, apart from recollection, i apparent, is it not, that the Government's position was being bett if it got those bonds, even if they did not bear the guaranty of Southern Pacific Company, provided they were bonds that w equal in character to the other forty-two per cent of the mortgage?

A. I think I can say that that would be so; but I would add t the act of Congress required us to make a settlement that provi for the payment of it within a limited period, shorter than the d of the bonds. It did not authorize us to take bonds to get a p ment of the money.

Q. The act of Congress was broad enough in your opinion at time, was it not, to permit you to take the notes of the compa secured by a first lien?

A. Yes; to take the notes of the company secured by bonds as lateral, but the notes to be paid within a period of ten years.

2093 Q. Yes. The act of Congress did not require that the securities which you should take should necessarily be payable within the ten years?

A. No. The act of Congress allowed us discretion as to taking security for the payment of the notes.

Q. Yes. That is, to put it another way, if the act of Congress had not been broad enough to permit you to take as security—as your only security—the refunding bonds running for a long time without the guarantee of the Southern Pacific Company, it would hardly have been broad enough to permit you to take such bonds with the guarantee?

A. Well, I suppose that is so; but that is arguing as to a condition that did not exist.

Q. Yes. I used that merely to meet your last suggestion as to the scope of the act.

A. Yes.

Q. Now, if it is not unseemly insistent, I am going to ask you, in view of your statement just made, if you will consider again, and bearing in mind, if you will kindly, that I want to draw a distinction between reasoning and recollection, if the fact is not that when you executed this agreement of February 1, 1899, you supposed that 2094 Speyer & Company were going to put through this reorganization in the way that seemed to them the most likely to make it acceptable to the company to be reorganized, and that you supposed that that contemplated, as then under consideration, an issue of bonds which would bear the guaranty of the Southern Pacific Company; but that if the bonds conformed to the requirements of the agreement of February 1, 1899, as written and executed, they would be acceptable to you, however much Speyer & Company or the Central Pacific Railroad Company might change its prospective plan of reorganization?

A. No; I am sure from what I recall of the transaction that the pledge of fifty-eight millions of those first refunding fours substantially issued as they were issued and as set out in the prospectus and guaranteed by the Southern Pacific was an essential part of the agreement, and by inference—almost necessary inference—it was contemplated by the agreement signed by the commissioners.

Q. Why did you make no reference in the agreement itself or in your commissioners' report of February 15, 1899, to the Southern Pacific Company or to any guaranty by it?

A. I can not tell you that.

Q. Is it not probable that if, when the matter was fresh in 2095 your mind, the guaranty had assumed the importance that it does at this length of time, you would have mentioned it either in your report of February 15th or in the agreement?

A. That might be argued, if I had no recollection about the participation of the Southern Pacific—it might very well be argued but I have positive recollection about that.

Q. You have observed that when you made your later report Attorney General and the bonds had been delivered and appeared to have the guaranty of the Southern Pacific, you then mentioned that fact in your report?

A. Let me see the report. [After examining report.] Yes; I did

Q. Does the fact that you did not mention it in the report concerning the agreement and the fact that you did mention it in the report which described the securities which you had actually received, lead you at all to any less certainty as to whether or not your recollection is correct?

A. No.

Q. Did Mr. Root pass at all upon the form or the language of the agreement of February 1st?

A. I do not recall that he had anything to do with it, yet I would not say that he did not.

2096 Q. Did any lawyer representing the United States, other than yourself, pass upon it?

A. Not that I remember.

Q. When, first after 1899, did you have occasion, if at all, before this morning to go over the details of these matters that we have been discussing here?

A. The first that I recall was in January, 1913, when I received a letter from Attorney General Wickersham asking me what my recollection was, or something to that effect, about the matter. I only went over some of it and I answered his letter, and I have here a copy of my answer if you want it.

Q. May I see it?

A. Certainly [handing letter to Mr. McClennen]. The original is undoubtedly in the Department of Justice.

Q. It would be your recollection that the legality of the transaction, so far as it might be affected by the Sherman Antitrust Act, was never considered or discussed with the commission or with the representatives of the Southern Pacific Railroad?

A. Unquestionably that is true. It never was.

Mr. McClennen. That is all.

2097 Redirect examination by Mr. Herrin:

Q. I will detain you but a moment to ask you if President McKinley did not take an active part in this matter, so that he was quite in touch with the progress being made in the settlement of the agreement?

A. He did take an active part in this, so that he kept in touch with the progress of the negotiation.

Q. He probably was about as well advised as any of the commison as to how the matter stood in negotiation?
A. I think he was. I have already stated he regarded it as a very portant subject and had expressed great interest.
Q. You will notice that in your special report made the 15th of ebruary you stated on that day as follows:
"The said agreement was submitted in writing to the President
d approved by him on the 15th day of February, and the said romissory notes have been duly delivered to the Treasurer of the nited States."
That fixes the date when the President signed the agreement or approved it. Is it not likely that the signatures of the com-098 missioners were affixed to the agreement about that date, or not very long prior thereto?
A. Oh, that is not improbable; but I really can not say.
Q. You have no recollection on that subject?
A. No recollection. As lawyers, we all know how those things run er the date of the instrument.
Q. As an act of Congress it had no validity until the approval of e President?
A. No.
Mr. HERRIN. That is all.
(Whereupon, at 12.45 o'clock p. m., a recess was taken until 2 clock p. m.)

099 AFTER RECESS.

LYMAN J. GAGE was called as a witness on behalf of the defendants, nd having been duly sworn testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Mr. Gage, you were Secretary of the United States Treasury uring what time?
A. From March, 1897, to February 1, 1902.
Q. Before that time what had been your business?
A. I had been in the banking business all my life previously.
Q. About how many years?
A. About forty years.
Q. At what point or places?
A. At Chicago for about thirty years. I started in an interior own in New York State.
Q. You were in responsible positions in banks, president and——
A. I went up through the ranks. I was president of the 100 First National Bank after being its practical manager for a number of years. I was president for four or five years.

Q. That was the First National Bank of Chicago?

A. The First National Bank of Chicago.

Q. That is one of the leading banks there?

A. Yes; it was the largest bank there for many years.

Q. You were a member of the commission appointed by Congress to settle the indebtedness of the Central Pacific Railroad Company to the United States Government?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you have anything to do with the negotiations that led to the agreement made by that commission?

A. Very little to do with the negotiations; scarcely anything directly. I was, I think, familiar with what was going on, but I was not up against the parties.

Q. Did you at any time have a conference with President McKinley concerning the matter?

A. Yes; several times.

Q. Was he active in the matter?

A. Yes; I should say he was active. In fact, the first I knew of the negotiation was from his statement of a visit he had from a certain party in connection with it.

2101 Q. From whom?

A. Mr. Huntington.

Q. And did you at any time have any conference with the other members of the commission?

A. With the Attorney General quite frequently.

Q. You quite frequently had conferences with him?

A. When we came in contact with each other, which we did two or a week, the subject was frequently raised as to the progress made.

Q. About how long a period of time did those negotiations cover as you recall?

A. It is hard to remember. I think a number of months.

Q. Do you remember the signing of the agreement by the commissioners—the agreement of February 1, 1899?

A. I do not remember it as an act. I know I did.

Q. But you did sign it?

A. Yes.

Q. Under the act appointing the commission it was the duty of the commission to obtain such security as was expedient in their opinion to accomplish the payment of these deferred payments, was it?

A. Yes, sir.

2102 Q. Do you remember in a general way or particularly what security was to be given by the Central Pacific Railroad Company or its successor to secure the notes that were taken?

Mr. McCLENNEN. The petitioner objects to the question on the ground that the agreement of February 1, 1899, speaks for itself in that respect and that this would be calling upon the witness to state the contents of a written instrument.

The WITNESS. I remember what I understood to be the security, the result of conferences and remarks back and forth between the President and the Attorney General and myself.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. What security was that to be? The agreement itself did not provide fully about the security, or did it?

Mr. McCLENNEN. Petitioner objects to the question on the ground that it calls upon the witness to state the contents of a written instrument which is already in evidence and speaks for itself.

The WITNESS. The agreement to which you refer does not seem to be a full description of the securities that were taken.

1103 By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. What securities were actually taken in executing the agreement?

A. They were part of an issue of one hundred millions of dollars of bonds by the reorganized Central Pacific Railroad, running during certain time in the future—I forget the time—guaranteed by the Southern Pacific Company.

Q. Was the security actually given in accordance with the understanding as you had it in your mind?

Mr. McCLENNEN. The petitioner objects to the question on the ground that it calls upon the witness to draw a conclusion on a question of fact and upon a question of law; and further, that it is leading and that it is immaterial and incompetent.

The WITNESS. The securities, as delivered; that is to say, the bonds that served as collateral to the series of notes given in settlement of the claims of the Government, were in conformity to what I understood was to be the nature of the security.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. It was your duty, as Secretary of the Treasury, to 1104 receive and hold those notes and the collateral security?

A. That was my main duty and the main thought I had in mind.

Q. Would you have accepted the bonds without the guaranty of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company?

Mr. McCLENNEN. The petitioner objects to this question as immaterial and incompetent and irrelevant.

The WITNESS. I am unable to answer that yes or no, because that proposition never came before me.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. But you do say that the bonds, with the guaranty indorse were in accordance with your understanding?

Mr. MCCLENNEN. The petitioner objects to the question as leadi and as immaterial, incompetent, and irrelevant, and as calling up the witness to draw a conclusion as to a question of fact and as t question of law.

The WITNESS. Yes; that is correct.

Mr. HERRIN. Take the witness.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. No cross-examination.

(Witness excused.)

(Whereupon an adjournment was taken until to-morrow, Wedn day, April 21, 1915, at 10.30 o'clock a. m.)

2105 TWENTY-SIXTH DAY.

ROOM 2506, 165 BROADWAY,
New York City, Wednesday, April 21, 1915.

The hearing was resumed, pursuant to adjournment, at 10.30 o'cl a. m., before Frank R. Hanna, special examiner.

Present on behalf of the United States: James W. Orr, Esq., E ward F. McClennen, Esq., and Edward E. Gann, Esq., special assi ants to the Attorney General.

Present on behalf of the defendants: W. F. Herrin, Esq., J. Blair, Esq., and Garret McEnerney, Esq., for the Southern Pac Company.

2106 LEWIS J. SPENCE was called as a witness on behalf of t defendants, and having been duly sworn, testified as follow

Direct examination by Mr. BLAIR:

Q. Mr. Spence, will you give your railroad biography?

A. My service began with the Southern Pacific Company Octo 7, 1885, as stenographer in the office of the general eastern age whose title was subsequently changed to assistant general tra manager with headquarters at New York.

I was consecutively his secretary, chief clerk, and eastern freig agent until March 1, 1902, when I was appointed general east freight agent, and in addition to the duties of that position, w appointed general freight agent of the Atlantic steamship lines the company on February 15, 1906.

After more than twenty-five years of continuous service with t Southern Pacific Company I was appointed assistant director traffic of the Southern Pacific and Union Pacific systems, effec January 1, 1911, with headquarters at Chicago, and became direc of traffic of both systems on January 1, 1912.

1107 Upon the dissolution of the so-called Union Pacific merger my service with the Union Pacific system was severed on January 31, 1913, since which date I have been director of traffic of the Southern Pacific Company with general supervision and control of the traffic affairs of the system.

Q. What was the nature of your duties as chief clerk and eastern freight agent and secretary to the assistant general traffic manager?

A. I handled and was familiar with all of the affairs of his office.

Q. What were they?

A. The solicitation of traffic, consultation with respect to traffic arrangements, and everything pertaining thereto.

Q. What kind of traffic?

A. Freight and passenger traffic.

Q. Passing between what points?

A. As general eastern agent, the jurisdiction of the office was confined to traffic between the Atlantic seaboard territory and the far West and the South and Southwest. As assistant general 1108 traffic manager, the jurisdiction of the office included all territory east of the Mississippi River.

Q. And that related to traffic passing from California to the Atlantic seaboard territory?

A. Yes.

Q. Transcontinental traffic generally?

A. Transcontinental traffic.

Q. And your jurisdiction and duties were equally extensive when you were the general freight agent?

A. Yes; general eastern freight agent and general freight agent of the steamship lines.

Q. And your jurisdiction and duties were still more extensive as traffic director of the two systems?

A. Yes; that covered the entire system.

Q. Are you generally familiar with the history of transcontinental traffic in this country?

A. I am.

Q. How did you acquire such information?

A. From books of reference, such as Poor's Manual, Official Railway Guides, annual reports of railroads, maps, profiles, reports of the Interstate Commerce Commission and of State commissions.

Q. That might be called the historical study?

1109 A. Yes; and from personal observation and experience during a continuous service of nearly thirty years with lines engaged in transcontinental traffic.

Q. Is such knowledge a necessary part of your stock in trade?

A. It is an essential qualification for my position.

Q. Have you prepared a large map on which are conspicuou shown the lines now embraced in the Southern Pacific system?

A. An official map of Rand, McNally & Company has been pr pared and is on the wall, which shows conspicuously all of the li embraced in the Southern Pacific system. Its scale is thirty-five mi to an inch.

Q. Now, will you please explain the meaning of the different c ors? What line is represented by the blue, what line is represe by the orange, and what is represented by the brown?

A. The brown covers the bond-aided Central Pacific lines. T orange covers the Central Pacific lines that were not bond aid The blue covers all of the remaining lines of the Southern Pa system, the solid blue being rail and the broken line being st ship.

2110 Q. Is that map a correct representation of the lines of t Southern Pacific system?

A. It is.

Mr. BLAIR. Defendants offer in evidence the map referred to by t witness.

(The map referred to was thereupon marked "Defendants' E hibit (Spence) No. 54, April 21, 1915".)

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. Have you prepared, Mr. Spence, a small scale reproductio that map for convenient use?

A. I have. This is a Rand-McNally production. It reprodu on a small scale, the large wall map, the difference being only in t fact that it does not show as much detail as the large map.

Q. Has the map to which you now refer different colors, to sh the Central Pacific bond-aided lines, the Central Pacific lines ot than those bond-aided, and then the other lines of the Southern P cific system?

A. The lines are distinguished by the same colors as are shown the wall map.

Q. The only distinction, as I understand, by reason of t

2111 difference in scale, is that it can not show some of the v small cities and some of the very small branches or feeder

A. Yes.

Q. Is that a correct representation of the lines of the system?

A. It is.

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel for defendants put in evidence the small s reproduction of the large map just referred to by the witness.

(The small map referred to was thereupon marked "Defendants' Exhibit (Spence) No. 55, April 21, 1915".)

The WITNESS. The scale of that map is 160 miles to an inch.

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. Now, Mr. Spence, will you describe, in a general way, the Sunset-Gulf route, or the Sunset Route, as it is called in the petition, of the Southern Pacific system?

A. The Sunset Route extends from Portland, Oregon, southward to Roseville and Davis, and from Roseville, Sacramento, Davis, Oakland, and San Francisco to the southeastern boundary of the State of California, defined by the Colorado River; then through the 1112 southern part of Arizona, New Mexico, Texas, and Louisiana to the ports of Galveston and New Orleans; thence by steamship lines from those ports to New York.

Q. Do the lines standing in the name of the Central Pacific Railway Company form a part of this route?

A. They do.

Q. What part in this route is played by the Central Pacific lines from the Oregon-California line to Tehama?

A. That part of the line is 191.5 miles, and forms an essential part of the Sunset Route.

Q. Without that line, would the part of the Sunset Route north of the Oregon-California line have any connection with the other part of the system?

A. It would not.

Q. What part in the Sunset-Gulf route does the line of the Central Pacific from Tehama to Roseville, Brighton, Stockton, and Lathrop play?

A. That line forms the shortest line of the Sunset Route between Oregon and northern California and points south and east, and its use has the effect of putting such points as Roseville, Sacra-1113 mento, and Stockton on the Sunset Route, where they otherwise would not be.

Q. Does it afford also an alternative route for through service?

A. It does.

Q. And what effect has that upon the service, at times?

A. It has the effect of increasing the efficiency of the service and avoiding congestion by the use of alternative routes.

Q. What part in the Sunset-Gulf route does the line of the Central Pacific from Lathrop to Goshen play?

A. That part of the line forms an alternative route from all points north of Lathrop, as well as from Oakland and San Francisco, to all points south and east.

Q. Is it extensively used as a part of the Sunset-Gulf route f transcontinental traffic?

A. Very extensively.

Q. What effect has such use, and the possession of that line, up the service to be afforded by the Sunset-Gulf route?

A. It affords an alternative route which facilitates transportati and avoids congestion. For example, that route was u 2114 almost entirely during the period of the destruction of a t nel on the coast line, a period of about four months, last ye

Q. Has that also the effect of putting certain towns upon Sunset-Gulf route which would not otherwise enjoy that advanta

A. Yes.

Q. What towns?

A. Such towns as Merced, that being the most important point that line.

Q. The most important part of that use of the line, of that pa of the line, is as an alternative route, and it is extensively u having the effect of preventing congestion and improving the servi

A. Yes.

Q. Will you describe the lines standing in the name of the Cen Pacific, in a brief way, generally, so that we may have on the rec just what lines are in the name of the Central Pacific?

A. The lines of the Central Pacific begin on the west at Oakl Redwood, and San Jose, and extend eastward via Lathrop, Stockt
Brighton, and Sacramento to Umbria Junction, Utah, a 2115 from there one line runs via Promontory around the north e of the Salt Lake and the Lucin cut-off, across the lake Ogden; and runs from Roseville northward to the Oregon-Ca fornia boundary, with a small branch from Weed, California, Kirk, Oregon.

A line from Sacramento or Brighton southward—we will from Lathrop southward—to Goshen Junction, California.

A branch line from Wadsworth, or Fernley, which is the point which it really leaves the main line, into Susanville and Westwo which are lumber camps.

A line from Hazen, Nevada, to Mojave, that part of which tween Tonopah Junction and Owenyo, 134 miles, is narrow gauge.

There is a small branch to Mound House—from Churchill Mound House—and a small branch from Hazen to Fallon.

There is a small branch line from Natron, Oregon, to Oakri
Oregon, a distance of about 34 miles.

Q. Of these lines which you have described, which of them the bond-aided lines, the lines that were constructed by the aid onds given by the United States Government under the terms of he Pacific Railroad act?

A. That part of the line from San Jose via Lathrop and Stockton o Brighton.

Q. Would you say via Niles as well?

116 A. Via Niles, Tracy, Lathrop, and Stockton to Brighton, and from Sacramento eastward to Umbria Junction, and round the north end of Great Salt Lake via Promontory to Ogden.

Q. What is the distance from Brighton to Sacramento?

A. Four miles.

Q. What is the distance on the Central Pacific line from Oakland o Ogden via Promontory?

A. 868 miles.

Q. What do you mean, or what do I mean, by "via Promontory"?

A. Via the line that runs around the north end of the Great Salt ake.

Q. Where is the Lucin cut-off?

A. The Lucin cut-off leaves the old line at Umbria Junction and xtends across Salt Lake to Ogden.

Q. What was the purpose of its construction?

A. To secure a more efficient line and improve the service.

Q. That, of course, is not bond aided?

A. That is not bond aided.

Q. What is the distance from Oakland to Ogden via the Lucin cut-off?

117 A. Entirely by the Central Pacific, 825 miles.

Q. What is the distance from Oakland via Benicia to Sacramento, which is the Southern Pacific line, I believe—is that so?

A. Yes.

Q. (Continuing.) And the Central Pacific line thence to Ogden ia the Lucin cut-off?

A. 779 miles.

Q. Is the old line of the Central Pacific, all the way from Oakland o Ogden via Pomontory, in use?

A. It is not in use for any through service.

Q. Why not?

A. It runs up to a summit of between 600 and 700 feet and it has maximum grade of 1.7 per cent. It is 44 miles longer than the ucin cut-off.

Q. What point of the Sunset Route is the same distance from Oakand as Ogden is?

A. Piedra.

Q. What is the distance between Ogden and that point?

A. 540 miles by an air line.

Q. What is the distance from Ogden to New York by line?

2118 A. About 2,000 miles.

Q. And by the shortest railroad connection?

A. By the Union Pacific, Chicago & North Western, and P sylvania lines, which is the short line, it is about 2,397 miles.

Q. What is the distance from Ogden to New Orleans by air

A. 1,395 miles.

Q. And by the shortest railroad line?

A. It is 1,870 miles by the shortest line, which is the Denver Grande, Colorado & Southern, Fort Worth & Denver City, Texas & Pacific.

Q. What part of the Atlantic seaboard territory is directly re by the Sunset Route or the Sunset-Gulf Route?

A. New York Harbor only.

Q. Any other portion of Atlantic seaboard territory re service via connecting lines?

A. Requires service via connecting lines.

Q. Can you give us a general statement of what roads were for transcontinental traffic in 1885? We have had it b 2119 but I want it brought out consecutively in the order testimony.

A. Sailing vessels between New York and San Francisco via Horn, which had been in operation many years.

The Panama route between New York and San Francisco vi Isthmus of Panama, which had been in operation since 1855.

The Union Pacific-Central Pacific route via Ogden, which been in operation since 1869.

The Santa Fe-Southern Pacific route via Deming, which opened in 1881.

The Texas & Pacific-Southern Pacific route via Sierra Blanc El Paso, which was opened in 1882.

The Sunset-Gulf route between New York and California, had been opened February 1, 1883.

The Denver & Rio Grande-Rio Grande Western-Southern P route via Ogden, which was opened in May, 1883.

The Northern Pacific, which formed a junction with the O Railroad & Navigation Company at Wallula, Washington, in tember, 1883; thereby making a through transcontinental li Portland which, in connection with the steamship line of the O Railroad & Navigation Company, reached San Francisco 2120 The Santa Fe route via Needles and Mojave, which completed in October, 1883.

The Union Pacific-Oregon Short Line-Oregon Railroad & N tion Company, which was completed to Portland in 1884, a onnection with the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company's teamship line, afforded a through route to San Francisco.

Q. Were all these lines capable of carrying transcontinental traffic rom California to the Atlantic seaboard territory?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What were the railroads east of the Missouri River which the bove-mentioned rail routes formed connection with, first to Chicago nd to the Mississippi River, and from the Mississippi River to the tlantic coast, in 1885? If you have a list of them you may read rom the list rather than trust to your memory, unless you can give em from memory.

A. The Chicago & North Western between St. Paul and Chicago, nd Council Bluffs and Chicago.

The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul between St. Paul and Chicago, and Council Bluffs and Chicago.

21 The Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific between Council Bluffs and Chicago.

The Chicago, Burlington & Quincy between Council Bluffs and hicago, and between Kansas City and Chicago, and St. Louis.

The Wabash between Council Bluffs and Kansas City on the west, nd St. Louis and Chicago on the east.

The Chicago & Alton between Kansas City and Chicago and St. ouis.

The Missouri Pacific between Kansas City and St. Louis.

What is now the Frisco lines, which ran east to Memphis; the Cotn Belt Route extended east to Cairo.

Q. Now, state the lines east of Chicago and the Mississippi River.

A. Between Chicago and Buffalo——

Q. Well, just mention a few of them, and state whether they are w or numerous.

A. The Grand Trunk Railway; the Michigan Central Railway; e Nickel Plate line; the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern; the g Four Route; the New York Central; the West Shore; the Delare, Lackawanna & Western; the Pennsylvania lines; the Erie; the Baltimore & Ohio.

22 Over into New England, the Boston & Albany; the New York, New Haven & Hartford.

Farther south, the Norfolk & Western.

Q. That will be sufficient. Then there were others?

A. And others.

Q. Will you state, in a general way, the additions to or improvents in the through routes capable of carrying this traffic, which ok place between 1885 and 1901?

A. The Santa Fe reached San Diego in 1885 and Los Angeles rtly thereafter.

The Santa Fe reached Galveston in 1886 and formed connec with the Mallory Steamship Line between Galveston and New
The Santa Fe line between Kansas City and Chicago was op in 1888.

The Santa Fe's through line to San Francisco, by acquisitio
the San Francisco & San Joaquin Valley Railway, was opene July, 1899.

The Canadian Pacific line to Vancouver was completed in and formed a connection with the Pacific Coast Steamship Com operating between Vancouver and San Francisco.

The Soo Line was completed to Portal, North Dakot 2123 1894.

Q. From what place?

A. From St. Paul, and formed a connection at Portal with Canadian Pacific.

Q. The Soo Line formed, at St. Paul, a connection with line?

A. The Chicago & North Western and the Chicago, Milwauk
St. Paul, at first, and subsequently with the Wisconsin Central, w the Canadian Pacific acquired.

Q. Now, the Northern Pacific?

A. The Northern Pacific completed its own line to Tacom
1887 and to Seattle in 1899 and formed connection with the P Coast Steamship Company between Puget Sound ports and Francisco.

Q. Did it not have a line at that time to Portland?

A. Yes; it had its own line to Portland.

Q. And that line from Portland connected with the——

A. It connected with the Oregon Railroad & Navigation C pany's steamship line between Portland and San Francisco.

The Missouri Pacific completed its line west of the Missouri R to Pueblo, Colorado, in 1887, and in 1888 the Colorado 2124 land completed to a connection with the Denver & Grande and Rio Grande Western, which connected with Southern Pacific at Ogden.

Q. At Pueblo the Missouri Pacific connected with what comp coming west?

A. At first with the Santa Fe, and in 1888 what is now the R Island was completed.

Q. Did it not also connect with the Denver & Rio Grande Pueblo?

A. Westward?

Q. Westward.

A. Yes. I misunderstood your question. It connected with Denver & Rio Grande westward, and it connected with the S eastward, and with the Chicago, Kansas & Nebraska Railway, which is now the Rock Island, at Colorado Springs in 1888.

The Great Northern completed its own line to Seattle in 1890 and formed connection with the Pacific Coast Steamship Company between Seattle and San Francisco.

The Chicago, Burlington & Quincy completed its line to a point near Billings, Montana, in 1894, connecting with the Northern Pacific, thence to Seattle, Tacoma, and Portland; and the Pacific 2125 Coast Steamship Company between those ports and San Francisco.

Q. How about the Great Northern?

A. The Great Northern was completed to Seattle in 1890, forming connection with the Pacific Coast Steamship Company between Seattle and San Francisco.

Q. Were all those lines you have mentioned in actual operation, say, on December 31, 1900?

A. They were.

Q. Engaged in transcontinental traffic from coast to coast?

A. They were.

Q. And capable of carrying traffic from California to the Atlantic seaboard territory?

A. Yes.

Q. Would that be true if you put the date back a year or two, say to 1899 or 1898?

A. Every one of the railroad lines enumerated was engaged in the transcontinental business in 1898. The American-Hawaiian Steamship Line did not begin to operate through the Straits of Magellan until October 15, 1900.

Q. Have you a list of their connections east of the Mississippi River and east of Chicago?

2126 A. I have prepared such a list.

Q. How many are on the list of railroads?

A. There are sixteen railroads between the Missouri River and Chicago and the Mississippi River.

Mr. McCLENNEN. This is of what date?

The WITNESS. December 31, 1900.

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. Are they practically the same railroads that you mentioned as forming the eastern connections of these lines in 1885?

A. With a few additions. I did not mention the eastern lines, the lines between Chicago, the Mississippi River, and the East, which number twenty-six. They are shown on the same list.

Q. Have you prepared a map showing graphically the competitive routes which you have mentioned as in existence December 31, 1900?

A. I have.

Q. Will you please produce it?

A. Here it is.

Q. As I understand, this map correctly shows the compe-

2127 tive routes which you have orally described as in existe-December 31, 1900?

A. It does.

Q. I notice two colors are used, green and red. What does the r represent?

A. The red line represents the lines embraced in the Southern P cific system.

Q. And the green lines represent all the others?

A. All other lines.

Q. I understand also from your statement that this map wo correctly represent existing conditions if you shoved back the d two years, with the exception of the American-Hawaiian Line wh is shown on the map?

A. Every railroad on that map was engaged in transcontinen business two years previously.

The American-Hawaiian Line, which is shown here as operati via the Straits of Magellan, did not inaugurate its service u October 15, 1900.

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel for defendants put in evidence the map r ferred to and described by the witness.

(The map referred to was thereupon marked "Defendants' Exhi
No. 56 (Spence), April 21, 1915.")

2128 By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. I see you have here, as from Galveston, the Mall Steamship Company.

A. Yes.

Q. With what line was it affiliated in business?

A. With the Santa Fe, between California and Galveston.

Q. And formed a mixed rail and water line through from poi on the Pacific coast reached by the Santa Fe——

A. And New York.

Mr. ORR. Is this map the same scale as the other small map?

The WITNESS. It is the same map, with these things graphica shown.

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. Now, Mr. Spence, will you go over and describe the additio transcontinental routes which have arisen since December 31, 19 and are capable of carrying traffic from coast to coast and from Ca fornia to the Middle West and to the Atlantic seaboard territory?

A. The Rock Island line from Chicago through Kansas City was completed to Santa Rosa, New Mexico, in 1902, and connected with the El Paso & Southwestern between Santa Rosa and El Paso.

2129 Q. The El Paso & Southwestern is a part of the Rock Island system?

A. It is an affiliated line, yes, connecting at El Paso with the Southern Pacific.

The Rock Island also completed a line from Memphis to Tucumcari, New Mexico, in 1910, forming connection at that junction with the El Paso & Southwestern to El Paso and thence Southern Pacific.

Q. Have you close connections and business arrangements with the Rock Island via El Paso?

A. We have very cordial relations, through rates, and prorating arrangements.

Q. What is the nature and extent of the transcontinental business done by the Rock Island?

A. It is a very substantial business, a large business; a very large business being done by that route, especially to southern California.

Q. Does it do a considerable business from California north of the Tehachapi, both east and west?

A. Yes.

2130 Q. Would it range, say, next to the Santa Fe, among the all-rail lines? I mean next to the Santa Fe, ranking the Santa Fe, in my mind, as next to the Ogden route.

A. Yes.

Q. Now, go on with your description.

A. The San Pedro, Los Angeles & Salt Lake Railroad was completed between Salt Lake City and Los Angeles in 1905.

Q. Does it do a large business?

A. It does.

Q. From what part of California?

A. Especially southern California. The Santa Fe completed its Belen cut-off in 1908, and it not only shortened its own line, but thereby formed connection at Vaughn, New Mexico, with the Rock Island through the El Paso & Southwestern.

Q. What reduction in mileage from California to Galveston was effected in that way?

A. That line did not reduce the mileage. The Coleman cut-off, which was completed later, reduced the Galveston mileage. That line also formed a connection with the St. Louis & San Francisco at Waynoka, Oklahoma, giving them a through transcontinental route.

2131 The Santa Fe's Coleman cut-off was completed in 1914. That shortened the Santa Fe line 367 miles and made the Santa Fe-Mallory Line the shorter of the two Gulf routes between New York and California.

Q. By the other Gulf route you mean the Sunset-Gulf route?

A. The Sunset-Gulf route. The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. P completed its line from Chicago to Seattle in 1909.

The Spokane, Portland & Seattle Railway, jointly owned by t Northern Pacific and the Great Northern, was completed betwe Spokane and Portland in 1908, and formed connection original with the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company's steamships, a now forms connection at Astoria with the steamship line, under t joint ownership of the Northern Pacific and Great Northern, betwe Astoria and San Francisco.

Q. And those steamship lines are in operation in connection wi the rail lines?

A. They are.

Q. When did the Kansas City, Mexico & Orient Railroad come i

A. The Kansas City, Mexico & Orient Railway from Wichit Kansas, was completed to a connection with the Texas & Pacific Sweet Water, Texas, in 1908, and to a connection with the Ga veston, Harrisburg & San Antonio at Alpine, Texas, in 190

2132 Q. Is that in the transcontinental business, actively, fro California?

A. It is; and I should add that north of Wichita it has entran into Chicago by the Rock Island and the Santa Fe, and into S Louis by the Missouri Pacific and the St. Louis & San Francis Railway.

The Western Pacific Railway was first opened for freight busine between Salt Lake City and San Francisco about the close of 190 It was finally opened for passenger business in August, 1910.

Q. And it forms a through route?

A. It forms a through route, connecting with the Denver & Ri Grande at Salt Lake City and the Missouri Pacific system to th Mississippi River and all lines east.

Q. The Missouri Pacific Railway and the Denver & Rio Grand and the Western Pacific are known as what system of lines?

A. The Gould system of lines.

Q. Closely affiliated?

A. Yes; by stocks and bonds.

Q. I suppose it is true that the new roads which you hav

2133 mentioned have practically the same connections at the Mi souri River and at Chicago as you enumerated as existing o December 31, 1900?

A. All of the connections enumerated as in operation December 3 1900, are still in existence as connecting lines and as competitors fo transcontinental business.

I should like to add that the electric lines were opened in Calif nia, the Central California Traction Company between Stockton a Sacramento, the Northern Electric between Sacramento and Marysville and Chico, and the Oakland, Antioch & Eastern between Sacramento and Oakland; and the American-Hawaiian Steamship Line, on January 1, 1907, inaugurated through service between New York and California points via the Tehuantepec Route; that is, the Isthmus of Tehuantepec in connection with the Tehuantepec Railroad.

Mr. McCLENNEN. I do not think that made quite clear when those electric lines were opened.

Mr. BLAIR. I am going to ask about that.

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. What was the effect of the opening of those electric lines?

A. The electric lines have been made parties to joint through 2134 rates and divisions with the transcontinental lines. They supplemented the Santa Fe and the Western Pacific as connections reaching a number of points.

Q. They reach a number of points which, before their construction, were exclusively on the Southern Pacific lines?

A. Yes. The Santa Fe extended as far north as Stockton, and by use of the electric lines north thereof, they were given an independent entrance into Sacramento and Marysville and all points north of Stockton.

Q. Mr. Spence, what has been the policy of the Southern Pacific Company in respect of each transcontinental line which has made a junction with it from time to time?

A. The Southern Pacific has consistently opened each gateway as it has been reached by a transcontinental connection, and joined in the establishment of through rates and divisions.

Q. And have the through rates and divisions which it established been effective to enable the new transcontinental lines thus formed to engage actively in transcontinental business?

A. They have permitted them to engage in all business to and from points reached by the Southern Pacific.

2135 Q. Was this policy adopted and enforced prior to the time when, by amendment to the interstate commerce act, the Interstate Commerce Commission acquired authority to enforce the making of joint rates and fair divisions?

A. The policy was consistently pursued many years prior to the Interstate Commerce Commission having been empowered to establish through routes and joint rates.

Q. At what time was the Panama Canal opened for business?

A. August 15, 1914.

Q. What lines of steamships have been opened through the Panama Canal since that date?

A. The American-Hawaiian Steamship Line.

The Luckenbach Steamship Line.
The Grace Line, operated by W. R. Grace & Company.
The Emery Steamship Company.
A line operated by Swayne & Hoyt.
And a line operated by Sudden & Christiensen.

Q. Those lines are engaged in and compete for what kind of tra continental business generally?

A. They engage in and compete for all transcontinental busin which is of a character that can be handled by any steamsh line.

2136 Q. Yes; but I mean territorially.

A. They actively compete for, and successfully compete f business between all points in Atlantic seaboard territory and points in California.

Q. Have you prepared a map which shows graphically the co petitive routes in existence, say, at the time the map was prepare What date does it bear?

A. October 1, 1914.

Q. And shows the competitive routes for transcontinental tra generally and for transcontinental traffic between California and t Atlantic seaboard territory in particular?

A. It does.

Q. Will you produce it for exhibition to counsel?

A. Here it is.

Q. What do the lines colored red represent?

A. The lines colored red are the lines embraced in the Southe Pacific system.

Q. I see a few lines around about Stockton and Sacramento c ored yellow.

A. Those are the electric lines between Stockton and Sacramen between Sacramento, Marysville, and Chico, and b 2137 tween Sacramento and Oakland.

Q. It appears from this map that there are two steamsh lines in operation from Seattle to San Francisco?

A. Yes.

Q. Are they in actual operation?

A. Yes; Pacific Coast Steamship Company, which I have pr viously described, and the Alaska Pacific Steamship Company.

Q. And two steamship lines from Portland to San Francisco?

A. Yes.

Q. Are they in active operation?

A. Yes; the San Francisco & Portland Steamship Company a the North Pacific Steamship Company.

Q. Are they in operation with these other rail lines engaged i transcontinental traffic?

A. They are.

Q. Between San Francisco and Los Angeles there are how many steamship lines?

A. Nine, I think.

Q. How many steamship lines are engaged in this competitive striving for transcontinental traffic through the Panama Canal?

2138 A. There are six steamship lines between Atlantic ports and California ports.

Q. As of the date of this map, how many steamers were in that trade as part of the American-Hawaiian Line?

A. Twenty-six.

Q. Large steamers?

A. Of an average capacity of about 10,000 tons.

Q. How does that compare with the service they had previously over the Tehuantepec route?

A. They built a number of new ships in anticipation of the opening of the canal, and the service via the Tehuantepec route consumed a time of about twenty-six to thirty days, the route involved a transfer from ship to car on the Atlantic side of the isthmus and from car to ship on the Pacific side, while the service through the Panama Canal involves no transfer between the Atlantic and Pacific ports and the average time is about twenty-two days between New York and San Francisco. They advertise about eighteen days to Los Angeles.

Q. How many boats or steamers has the Luckenbach Steamship Company?

A. Eight.

2139 Q. What kind of steamers are they?

A. They have an average capacity of five or six thousand tons.

Q. Are they successfully engaged in this strife for transcontinental traffic, especially to the Atlantic seaboard territory?

A. They are taking a great deal more than I would like to have them do.

Q. From northern and central California?

A. Yes.

Q. By northern and central California you mean all of California north of what point?

A. North of the Tehachapi Mountains. We usually define it by Mojave and Santa Barbara.

Q. And these other steamship lines which you have mentioned have their boats actively engaged in this traffic and striving for the business?

A. Yes. The aggregate number of steamers in operation by the lines shown on the map, on the date of the map, numbered forty-nine.

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel for the defendants put in evidence 2140 map just referred to by the witness, being headed "Map Competitive Routes, October 1, 1914."

(The map referred to was thereupon marked "Defendants' Exhi (Spence) No. 57, April 21, 1915.")

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. What is the extent or degree of competition now existing traffic between the Pacific and the Atlantic coasts?

A. It is very active and acute.

Q. What is the extent and degree of competition now existing to traffic between northern and central California and the Atla seaboard territory?

A. It is even more acute and intense.

Q. Is that true both as to the number of competitors and fierceness of the competition?

A. Yes.

Q. What degree of success, Mr. Spence, had the Sunset-G route attained, say about 1890, in the securing of transcontine traffic, especially from coast to coast?

A. In 1890 the Sunset-Gulf route had secured the major part, larger percentage of the westbound traffic between the Atlantic board and California, of a character in which it could engr 2141 Q. What factors, in your opinion, account for this suc of the Sunset-Gulf route in securing a major portion of traffic from California to the Atlantic seaboard territory?

A. The Sunset-Gulf route operated through an undeveloped ritory. There was a very small volume of local traffic to interf with the despatch of the through traffic between New Orleans California, and no local traffic to interfere with its transportat between New Orleans and New York. The line was operated un one management, which enabled it to afford service infinitely supe to any that had previously been given on transcontinental traffic.

Q. What do you include by "service"?

A. The time in transit, the method of keeping consignees infor of the whereabouts of freight, and the date upon which its arri might be regularly expected; and the adjustment of claims——

Q. That is sufficient for illustration. Why was there not, ab that time and prior thereto, as good service and as prompt handl of claims over the all-rail routes?

A. The eastern lines at that time were busily engaged in development of their own traffic within their own 2142 ritory. They manifested comparatively little interest in transcontinental traffic, and it had never been possible to br about that coordination of effort between the several lines form the through routes all-rail that was necessary to meet the service and facilities established by the Sunset-Gulf route.

Q. What was the effect of this indifference of the all-rail lines, or a part of them, upon the time taken to affect the movement of freight from San Francisco to Atlantic seaboard territory?

A. The time of the all-rail lines in those days was at least a week or ten days, if not more, longer than the time of the Sunset-Gulf route.

Q. How long was this ascendency of the Sunset-Gulf route over the all-rail lines maintained? I do not mean the exact number of months or years, but about what time?

A. It would be difficult to fix an exact time. The change was a gradual process. The all-rail lines gradually improved their service and coordinated their efforts. The number of them engaged in the transcontinental business had been gradually increasing; the army of soliciting forces correspondingly increased, and they had 2143 caught up with the Sunset Route in modern methods of handling and adjusting claims by a better coordination between them than had previously existed.

Q. And about what year would you give as the date when they caught up with the proportion of traffic handled by the Sunset-Gulf route?

A. The Sunset-Gulf route handled the major part of the traffic until about 1895, and by 1897 the all-rail lines were securing the preponderance of the business.

Q. What was the Sunset-Gulf route doing all that time?

A. The Sunset-Gulf route was struggling to maintain its prestige by an improvement of its service, construction of additional steamers, and everything that it could do to keep up with the procession.

Q. Would it be true to say, in your opinion, that the Sunset-Gulf route applied a continuous competitive spur to the all-rail lines?

A. There is no doubt about the service and methods of the Sunset-Gulf route having stimulated the all-rail lines to an improvement in their service.

Q. And that competition in service and effort to get the business still continues, does it?

2144 A. Very actively.

Q. It has been said here in some part of the Government's testimony that the Santa Fe was not a factor in the transcontinental business, and especially from and to central California, prior to its entrance into San Francisco on its own lines in 1899. What have you to say as to that?

A. The Santa Fe was a factor in two ways—it had its own line into southern California——

Q. From about what date?

A. 1885. The transcontinental rates to southern California w inseparably associated with the transcontinental rates to cen California or to San Francisco.

Q. Just explain what you mean by that.

A. The best way to explain it would be to say that we could have lived with the people in San Francisco if we had underta to maintain a higher rate than the Santa Fe made to Los Angele

Q. That is one way. What is the other way which you had mind?

A. In 1884 the Santa Fe had worked under arrangements w the Southern Pacific whereby it had through rates and d 2145 sions on a pro rate via Mojave and whereby it had acces every point reached by the Southern Pacific system in C fornia and was in a position to actively compete at all points, m tained its own soliciting organizations, and it had the privileg issuing its own through tickets, its own through bills of lading, making its own through way bills.

Q. Were there joint rates and divisions?

A. There were joint rates and divisions.

Q. Do you know anything about the transcontinental ton taken by the Santa Fe in those early days from central Californi

Mr. McCLENNEN. This is between 1884 and 1899 that you speaking of?

Mr. BLAIR. Yes.

The WITNESS. Petitioner's Exhibit No. 22 shows that.

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. What is petitioner's Exhibit No. 22?

A. It is taken from the reports of the committee to Con under the Pacific Railway acts.

Q. If you do not mind, I will ask you about that after I looked at petitioner's Exhibit No. 22. I have not got it here. will pass that for the moment.

Do you know, of your own knowledge, as to whether 2146 Santa Fe was an active competitor for business north of jave prior to 1899?

A. I do. I know of their competition every day—very a competition.

Q. And successful competition?

A. And successful competition.

Q. Has the San Pedro been an active and successful compe with the Southern Pacific lines?

A. It has.

Q. And the Western Pacific?

A. The Western Pacific has been an active competitor.

Q. You have mentioned the electric lines between Sacramento and Oakland.

A. The electric lines.

Q. And what effect did the transfer of the American-Hawaiian service from the Straits of Magellan to the Tehuantepec route, in 1907, have?

A. The effect was to very substantially increase the competition of the steamship lines.

Q. And lessen the takings——

A. And to reduce the takings of the transcontinental carriers.

147 Q. Including the Sunset Route?

A. Including the Sunset Route.

Q. Was it a large sufferer?

A. The Sunset Route was the chief sufferer, because the steamship lines were in a position to compete for the peculiar class of traffic, all of the traffic that the Sunset Route was in a position to physically handle.

Q. And that competition of the water carriers, as I understand, has been considerably increased since the opening of the Panama Canal?

A. Yes. In addition to the lines shown on the map that has been introduced, the Red Star Line have established a regular service, the steamers Finland and Kroonland, between New York and California.

Q. What time will they now make?

A. They take sixteen days between New York and San Francisco.

Q. It may be a melancholy question to ask you, Mr. Spence, but what has become of the ascendancy of the Sunset-Gulf route that has been suggested here?

A. It has entirely disappeared.

148 Q. What is its influence now as compared with its influence in 1910?

A. Its influence has been very substantially lessened by the opening of the Panama Canal.

Q. And what was its influence in 1910 as compared with its influence in 1900 in transcontinental business?

A. Its influence in 1910 had been very materially reduced by the opening of the Tehuantepec route and by the insistent improvement of the service of the other lines.

Q. What was its influence in 1900 as compared with its influence in 1885?

A. In 1900 it had begun to decline—it had declined. It having i previous years taken the major part of the Atlantic seaboard traf by 1900 it was taking the minor part.

Q. Is that progress in the wrong direction of the Sunset-Gulf rou not only with reference to its influence, but with reference to i takings of transcontinental traffic?

A. Its takings of transcontinental traffic have decreased in pr portion to the decrease of its influence.

Q. Are there any general rules or principles in force on the Sout ern Pacific system as to the preferential solicitation or preferenti routing of traffic?

2149 A. Yes.

Q. Are those in writing?

A. No.

Q. How are they made known to your agents?

A. Our traffic forces and field forces are periodically assembl and informed of the general solicitation policy of the company.

Q. What is the reason for making these generally known to yo agents?

A. To coordinate the efforts of the organization. A car of freig may be ordered by a man in San Francisco from a man in Chic for shipment by a man in New York. It is essential to have c ordinated effort between our representatives in San Francisco, Ch cago, and in New York to secure that shipment.

Q. To prevent your agents contemporaneously pulling in di ferent directions?

A. Pulling in different directions.

Q. State what is the policy of the Southern Pacific Compa with reference to preferential solicitation of traffic and the reas therefor.

2150 A. The general policy is to solicit traffic by the long ha or by the best revenue haul, in so far as that practice enab the Southern Pacific to offer service and facilities that will satis its patrons, and not only secure but retain their confidence and th business. It would not be business like or profitable to press t solicitation of business for the long haul in order to secure sporad shipments, if the effect of your inability to give satisfactory serv would be, as it of course would be, to divert the future business that shipper to a competitive line, whereby no haul would be deriv

Q. When the service by your shorter haul would be superior better meet the requirements of the shipper, would it be consist with your policy to seek to route that traffic by the longer haul?

A. No.

Q. And your agents, in obedience to that policy, would not seek o so route it?

A. They would not. The service must be such as to satisfy the hipper and retain his business.

Q. Now, let us apply this policy to the movements to and from Middle West territory, say, and points north of Mojave and 151 Santa Barbara. First, what do you mean by "Middle West territory"?

A. Middle West territory, as we define it here, embraces all points est of the Atlantic seaboard territory, a line drawn from Buffalo hrough Pittsburgh and Wheeling to Bristol, Tennessee; all points orth of the Ohio River and the northern boundaries of Arkansas nd Oklahoma, and on east of the line of the Rock Island Railway xtending northeastwardly to St. Paul.

Q. In explanation of my taking points north of Mojave and Santa arbara, I will ask you: Does the Central Pacific line figure in traffic outh of those points, or in what we have been calling southern alifornia?

A. With the exception of some shipments of citrus fruits from outhern California, which are sent north by the shippers via Sacraento and Ogden for climatic or commercial reasons, the Central acific is not a factor in southern California business.

Q. Why not?

A. It is 400 miles longer than the short line from Chicago.

Q. Would it figure in such traffic if it was separated from the Southern Pacific?

152 A. It would not.

Q. Its inability to figure in traffic from southern California not due in any way, then, to its connection with the Southern acific?

A. No.

Q. The lines which do figure in traffic to and from southern Calirnia, say, and the Middle West territory, are what?

A. The San Pedro, Los Angeles & Salt Lake Railway, in connecon with the Union Pacific and the Denver & Rio Grande; the anta Fe system; the Southern Pacific line via El Paso in connection ith the Rock Island, and Texas & Pacific.

Q. Now, coming back; apply the policy of preferential solicitation routing to traffic between northern and central California and e Middle West territory, and what will be the result?

A. The result is to have a coordinated solicitation of the Southern acific organization of all traffic between Middle West territory, as escribed, and northern and central California, via the Ogden route.

Q. Please state, briefly, the reasons why you solicit that way stead of by your El Paso route.

2153 A. That policy is adopted to enable us to afford the shippe and consignees a service that will fully meet the service direct competitors and secure and retain their traffic.

Q. Does that mean that the Southern Pacific closes these oth routes via El Paso?

A. The Southern Pacific does not close any gateway or rou Its route via El Paso is open, and its connections east of El Pa actively solicit this traffic via the El Paso route.

Q. Will you mention your principal connection via El Paso?

A. The Rock Island.

Q. What is the character and extent of the business which t Rock Island succeeds in moving from northern and central Calif nia to Middle West territory, and the reverse?

A. The Rock Island secures a substantial business between Mid West territory and northern and central California.

Q. And what are your relations with the Rock Island p ple?

2154 A. They are very cordial. We afford them all the facili that could be afforded them to secure and handle this tra satisfactorily.

Q. What difference is there in the solicitation of Middle W territory traffic, if any, from that which existed prior to 1901, the reasons therefor?

A. Prior to 1901, from a small section of what we have descri here as Middle West territory—that is to say, from the section of of a line drawn from Toledo through Indianapolis and Terra Ha to East St. Louis—effort was made to secure business via New leans on the southern route, that territory embracing points t could be routed via Ohio River crossings.

Q. Was that successful to any extent; and if so, what were reasons for the success?

A. It was reasonably successful in that territory, first, bec the service of the direct lines, especially in the earlier nineties, not as efficient as it is to-day; the lines between Cincinnati and Orleans and between Louisville and New Orleans were very hun for traffic and made a specialty of service between Cincinnati New Orleans which connected with the fast service of the South Pacific from New Orleans to California, which was nat

2155 Gulf traffic, and there was not the same stability of rates exists to-day.

Q. Stability of rates is a rather elastic term. May I interpr as including not as strict an observance of tariff rates as now ex

A. I would subscribe to that.

Q. And that was one of the factors in securing business by this roundabout route?

A. Yes.

Q. Or, rather, by a longer route?

A. Yes.

Q. I want to call your attention to an exhibit, petitioner's Exhibit No. 68, which I now show you, in which Mr. Connor gives a list or statement of the carload shipments from Middle West territory. Have you looked over that statement sufficiently to state the number of cars shown by that statement for any one year?

A. (After examining Exhibit No. 68.) The largest year was 5,073 cars, and the average of the years shown was 3,572 cars.

Q. What is an average carload in tons?

A. The average carload of manufactured products on our lines is about eighteen tons.

2156 Q. Is that the kind of business that was moving from that territory?

A. Yes.

Q. Is that of the present time or of that date?

A. Of that date I should say it would have been less than eighteen tons. Of course, the carload loading has been increased from year to year as a matter of efficiency.

Q. Suppose we take it as high as twenty tons; what would be the greatest movement shown in tons, taking 5,073 as the greatest number of cars shown for any year?

A. 101,460 tons.

Q. Now, let us resume our consideration of your rules as to preferential solicitation and routing and apply them to Atlantic seaboard territory. You might define Atlantic seaboard territory so as to have the whole thing at one time.

A. Atlantic seaboard territory embraces all points east of a line drawn from Toronto through Buffalo, Pittsburgh, and Wheeling to Bristol, Tennessee, and north of the line of the Norfolk & Western Railway from Bristol to the Atlantic Ocean.

2157 Q. Do the Central Pacific lines cut any figure in traffic to and from Atlantic seaboard territory from and to southern California?

A. With the exception of the limited amount of citrus fruit which, I have stated, shippers from southern California send by Sacramento and Ogden, for climatic or commercial reasons, some of which reaches Atlantic seaboard territory.

Q. The Central Pacific does not cut any figure in shipments between southern California and Atlantic seaboard territory, for the same reasons as govern its shipments between southern California and Middle West territory?

A. Yes.

Q. Do the Central Pacific lines reach Oregon?

A. They do not, with the exception of a small branch from Weed that just extends over the Oregon boundary to Kirk.

Q. Then we will confine our question to the territory which the Central Pacific lines reach in northern and central California, on the one side, and Atlantic seaboard territory on the other, and apply your policy of solicitation and routing of traffic moving between those two territories, and state what the result is.

A. For such character of traffic as the Sunset-Gulf route is 2158 physically able to handle, the preferential solicitation is in favor of the Sunset-Gulf route, modified only by the necessity of giving the shipper the best service satisfying him and retaining his traffic.

Q. The preference is given to the Sunset-Gulf route, as you describe, over what route?

A. Over all routes; over the Ogden route.

Q. I believe you have already stated what part of the Atlantic seaboard territory is directly reached by the Sunset-Gulf route.

A. New York Harbor only.

Q. Is there any Atlantic seaboard territory business which the Sunset-Gulf route is physically unable or unfit to move?

A. A very large volume of the traffic is of a character that the Sunset-Gulf route is physically unable to handle.

Q. Will you describe what that traffic is?

A. The Sunset-Gulf route is unable to handle any of the perishable freight, citrus fruit, deciduous fruit, or vegetables; anything that moves either under refrigeration or ventilation.

Q. Is the traffic of the character which you describe large in volume?

2159 A. It is large in volume.

Q. Is it important as a revenue producer?

A. It is.

Q. Describe such other traffic as the Sunset-Gulf route can not carry?

A. It is unable to carry such freight as fresh oysters, earthenware and crockery that is shipped in cars packed in straw, pianos which are shipped in cars—what we call "harnessed" in cars, coal and coke, automobiles and other vehicles, furniture. It is unable and unfit to handle any traffic that is not packed for shipment by sea and that does not permit of rehandling en route.

Q. What is the amount of that class of traffic?

A. It is very considerable.

Q. Are you able to give me the number of tons represented by this perishable traffic—vegetables, fruit, and so forth—eastbound, for the year ending June 30, 1914?

Mr. McCLENNEN. Is this the total traffic of the country—of the region?

The WITNESS. This answer will cover the fresh fruit and vegetables from California to Atlantic seaboard territory.

Mr. ORR. All of it?

2160 The WITNESS. No; this is our own traffic. The fresh fruit and vegetables from Atlantic seaboard territory handled by Southern Pacific lines during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1914, aggregated 122,481 tons, which represented 55.8 per cent of the Southern Pacific's total eastbound traffic.

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. What about Asiatic traffic?

A. The Asiatic traffic to and from Atlantic seaboard territory, with origin and destination in Atlantic seaboard territory, is and has been for many years handled by the Suez steamship lines, and will hereafter be handled through the Suez Canal and the Panama Canal. The exception to that is raw silk, which is imported through Pacific ports and is handled by passenger-train service across the continent.

Q. Why is that?

A. On account of the enormous value of the silk. All transcontinental lines handle the business in that way. It is said to be worth about $50,000 a car.

Q. And the passenger service represents about what time across the continent?

A. The short line?

Q. The line by which this Asiatic traffic moves.

2161 A. About five days.

Q. It would be utterly impossible for the Sunset-Gulf route to compete with that time?

A. Utterly impracticable.

Q. Would it be possible for the railway lines to have all their freight move in passenger service?

A. No.

Q. Prior to 1901 did the control or ownership of the Central Pacific lines by the Southern Pacific Company, the preferential solicitation and routing which was described, prevent competition between the Ogden route and the Sunset line or Sunset-Gulf route?

A. It did not.

Q. What was the nature of this competition, potential or active, mild or vigorous?

A. It was very active and vigorous.

Q. Desultory or continuous?

A. Continuous.

Q. What about the competition since the merger?

A. The competition since the merger has been active and vigorous between all of the rail lines, and has been very much aggravated by the opening of the Panama Canal.

2162 Q. I am speaking particularly of the competition between the Ogden route and the Sunset-Gulf route.

A. That has been active and vigorous.

Q. And has the competition for traffic existing between those two routes been confined to those routes, or has the same traffic been actively competed for by the other lines? You have mentioned both the rail lines and water carriers.

A. It has been actively competed for, and a large volume has been secured by other transcontinental lines than that of the Sunset Route or of the Ogden route.

Q. Assuming that a correct definition of "competition" is "the striving by two or more carriers for traffic which each desires to secure for its own lines", state whether there is any such striving for the traffic in question between the Ogden route and the Sunset-Gulf route, and how it is carried on. By "the traffic in question" I mean the traffic between northern and central California, we will say, and Atlantic seaboard territory.

A. The Southern Pacific maintains its own soliciting organizations and ticket offices, and actively strives to secure that traffic via the Sunset-Gulf route in so far as it is physically able to handle it.

2163 It plays a lone hand. It must secure that traffic by the efforts of its own organizations. The all-rail lines, including those operating by Ogden——

Q. Deal especially with those of the Ogden route.

A. The lines actively engaged in the business via the Ogden route maintain their own organizations, both in Atlantic seaboard territory and in California, and have a combined army of solicitors engaged in the effort to secure the traffic via the Ogden route as against the Sunset Route.

Q. In your opinion, would one more solicitor in the field with "C. P." on his cap affect the situation appreciably?

A. No.

Q. Either in respect to competition or any benefit to the public?

A. He would have nothing else to offer to the public.

Q. If the Central Pacific Railway lines were separated from the Southern Pacific system, could solicitors offer any greater inducements to the public to patronize the Ogden route than they now offer?

A. No

Q. Could they offer equal inducements?

2164 A. No; they could not offer equal inducements, because the Ogden route affords the best service, and to some extent its only service, by the use of the Southern Pacific rails.

Q. You mean, then, if the solicitors for the patronage of the public by the Ogden route could not offer to the public that part of the service which is contributed to that route by the lines of the Southern Pacific system other than those owned by the Central Pacific they could not offer as efficient service as they now offer?

A. That is my meaning.

Q. Will you state some of the lines of the Southern Pacific, other than those standing in the name of the Central Pacific, which participate in the Ogden route and contribute to its efficiency?

A. The Benicia line between Sacramento and Oakland.

The Southern Pacific line between Redwood and San Francisco and the entire Southern Pacific terminal facilities in San Francisco, railroad tracks and everything else.

Q. What is the particular advantage and importance of that line from Redwood to San Francisco?

A. It is the only direct entrance by railroad track into San Francisco.

2165 Q. So that without it the Ogden route would not have a rail line into San Francisco, would it?

A. It would not.

Q. And it would depend upon ferry service entirely?

A. It would be dependent upon ferry service.

Q. Is ferry service ever confused, congested, or blocked by any natural causes?

A. Yes; it is naturally limited.

Q. What is that?

A. It is naturally limited.

Q. How about the effects of fog on it?

A. The San Francisco fogs have a reputation. They would certainly affect the service.

Q. How many railroad companies maintain soliciting organizations in California which are striving to route Atlantic seaboard traffic otherwise than over the Sunset-Gulf route?

A. Forty-six.

Q. Have you a list of them?

A. Yes; I have.

Q. Will you please produce it?

A. Here it is [producing paper].

2166 Mr. McCLENNEN. This is a list of those maintaining a soliciting organization in San Francisco?

The WITNESS. In California.

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. By maintaining soliciting agents in California, do you ma at one point or generally throughout California?

A. They cover the entire State.

Q. And there are forty-six of them?

A. Forty-six.

Q. How many maintain soliciting organizations for the same pu pose in Atlantic seaboard territory?

A. Fifty-nine.

Q. Have you a list of them?

A. I have.

Q. And this is in addition to the soliciting organizations that t Panama Canal carries?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the Sunset-Gulf route fights this whole field?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel puts in evidence, first, the list of lines ma taining soliciting organizations in California.

(The list referred to was thereupon marked "Defendan
2167 Exhibit (Spence) No. 58, April 21, 1915", and will be fou in the volume of defendants' exhibits.)

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel for the defendants puts in evidence also t list of lines maintaining soliciting organizations in Atlantic seabo territory.

(The list referred to was thereupon marked "Defendants' Exhi (Spence) No. 59, April 21, 1915", and will be found in the volu of defendants' exhibits.)

(Whereupon, at 12.30 o'clock p. m., a recess was taken until o'clock p. m.)

AFTER RECESS.

(The testimony of James Speyer, taken during the afterno session, will be found at the conclusion of the testimony of Lewis Spence.)

(Whereupon, at 4 o'clock p. m., an adjournment was taken un to-morrow, Thursday, April 22, 1915, at 10.30 o'clock a. m.)

2168 TWENTY-SEVENTH DAY.

ROOM 2506, 165 BROADWAY,
New York City, Thursday, April 22, 1915.

The hearing was resumed, pursuant to adjournment, at 10.30 o'clo a. m., before Frank R. Hanna, special examiner.

Present on behalf of the United States: James W. Orr, Esq., Ed ward F. McClennen, Esq., and Edward E. Gann, Esq., special ass ants to the Attorney General.

Present on behalf of the defendants: W. F. Herrin, Esq., J. P. air, Esq., and Garret McEnerney, Esq., for the Southern Pacific mpany.

69 LEWIS J. SPENCE, the witness under examination at the taking of adjournment, resumed the stand and testified fur-er, as follows:

Direct examination (continued) by Mr. BLAIR:

Q. Mr. Spence, when you were last on the stand you were talking out the number of soliciting organizations out in California; I ould ask you whether in your opinion this multiplicity of solicitors nfers any very appreciable benefit upon the shipping public?

A. No; because the same rates, facilities, and service are available the shipper whether he is solicited or not.

Q. Wherein does the competition between routes which you have ferred to benefit the public?

A. Chiefly in service. Every route finds it necessary to keep the rvice up to its highest efficiency in order to secure its share of the affic.

Q. It is upon service, then, that successful competition depends?

A. Yes.

Q. You have stated that at first the Sunset-Gulf route got 170 ahead of all the all-rail lines and secured the greater part of the traffic, especially the westbound traffic to and from Atlan-c seaboard territory and California; how did the all-rail lines catch p with the Sunset-Gulf route?

A. By gradual coordination of their efforts and improvements of eir service, and an improvement of their facilities, handling claims nd everything else that pertained to the public welfare and con-enience.

Q. That could be embraced in one term, could it not—by an im-rovement in their service?

A. Yes; by an improvement in their service.

Q. Was the service on the Sunset-Gulf route improved itself, mean-me?

A. It was improved very materially.

Q. Will you please give a brief statement indicating the progres-ve improvement in service on the Sunset-Gulf route?

A. As the line was improved the time was shortened on the rail line. ew and faster and larger steamers were added to the fleet. Exten-ve terminals were acquired at Galveston, whereby the through traf-c was handled at Galveston instead of by New Orleans, and a rail haul of 300 miles saved; all of which contributed to shorten 171 the time and improve the through service.

Q. That rail haul was between what points?

A. Between New Orleans and Houston.

Q. Was there any increase in the number of sailings?

A. There was no increase in the frequency of the sailings, b there was an increase in the fleet and in the capacity of the steam so that there was an increase in the available facilities.

Q. And you had sailings from both New Orleans and Galvest

A. From both New Orleans and Galveston.

Q. Is there much difference now between the time occupied transporting freight by the all-rail lines and by the Sunset-G route?

A. No; the average time between New York and San Franci to-day is about equal.

Q. Was the change from New Orleans to Galveston one of t causes of the shortening of the through time?

A. Yes.

Q. What were some of the improvements on the all-rail line, a of the Ogden route, during this period?

Mr. McCLENNEN. What defines "this period"?

2172 By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. By "this period" I mean the whole time when the a rail lines were catching up with and going past the Sunset-G route.

A. Through billing was being established by the several all-r lines, through cars without transfer were being established, t physical condition of the railroads was being improved, and t through passenger service was being correspondingly improved.

Q. Have you in operation on the Ogden route any merchandi cars?

A. Yes. We join the Union Pacific in operating five package c daily from Chicago to San Francisco, five from Chicago to Sac mento daily, three package cars weekly from St. Louis to San Fra cisco, three package cars weekly from St. Louis to Sacramento, a three package cars weekly from Kansas City to Sacramento.

Q. What do you mean by "package cars"?

A. These cars assemble the less-than-carload merchandise traf from all points east of the junctions specified as well as the traf originating at those points. They run through from those points t San Francisco and Sacramento.

2173 Q. What system have you inaugurated, or what system h been inaugurated, for insuring expedited service in oth ways?

A. We have a manifest system in effect, the same by the Ogd route and by the Sunset Route.

Q. Explain that.

A. Whereby each car is manifested, given a manifest number, and pies of that manifest are transmitted to each important division int on our own line and on the Union Pacific, via Ogden, and the ovement of each car is telegraphed by each of those junction points each of the others, so that the movement is constantly watched om point of shipment, and the whereabouts of the car is always own, and the time of its arrival at destination is also known.

Q. Which expedites the traffic and also enables the owner to escer- in the whereabouts of his car?

A. Of his car.

Q. And to ascertain when it may be expected to arrive?

A. Yes.

Q. How about the handling and adjustment of claims?

A. The handling and adjustment of claims, in which the Sunset Route was originally the pioneer, is now uniform on 1174 the Sunset Route and on the Ogden route. In fact, it is uniform, I think, upon all routes in the country, because there is ow in existence an association, of which all important lines are embers. That association is the medium through which adjustents or arrangements for adjustments are made between all the nes of the country, whereby they are facilitated; and the methods f that association have had the informal approval of the Interstate ommerce Commission.

Furthermore, the law has been amended whereby the initial carier, the maker of the bill of lading, is responsible to the shipper for oss or damage en route, no matter whether it occurs on the initial ine or some other part of the line, and he is required to promptly ay the claim and look to his connections for settlements in the vent of their liability.

Q. Will you give us a statement as to the improvement and hanges in the passenger service along both routes? If you have it n the form of a statement, you may produce it and explain the tatement briefly.

A. (Producing statement.) First, by the Sunset Route in Decemer, 1885, one through daily train was in operation between New Orleans and San Francisco. The time from New Orleans to 1175 San Francisco was four days, seventeen hours, and ten minutes.

In December, 1900, one through daily train was in operation beween New Orleans and San Francisco, and the time from New Oreans to San Francisco was four days, one hour, and thirty minutes.

In December, 1914, two through daily trains were in operation beween New Orleans and San Francisco, and the time from New Orleans to San Francisco was, by the Sunset Route, three days six hours and thirty minutes. The eastbound time was correspondingly improved, as shown in the memorandum.

Q. Have you likewise prepared a statement in detail showing the progress and improvement in the service of the Sunset Route?

A. I have.

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel for the defendants puts in evidence the statement referred to by the witness, a part of which has been embraced in his testimony.

(The statement referred to was thereupon marked "Defendants' Exhibit (Spence) No. 60, April 22, 1915", and will be found in the volume of defendants' exhibits.)

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. Have you prepared a similar statement with reference 2176 to the passenger service via the Ogden route?

A. I have.

Q. Give a few of the salient features of that progress in the service and then we will offer in evidence your statement.

A. In December, 1885, there was no through train in operation between Chicago and San Francisco. Direct connections were made daily at Omaha and Ogden.

Q. There was always a through train, so far as the Central Pacific——

A. By Omaha.

Q. (Continuing.) And the Union Pacific was concerned?

A. Yes.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. I do not get that. Does that mean that it was through from Omaha to San Francisco?

The WITNESS. Yes; it was through from Omaha to San Francisco.

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. Proceed.

A. The time from Chicago to San Francisco was four days fifteen hours and ten minutes.

2177 In December, 1900, there were two through trains daily in operation westbound from Chicago to San Francisco and three daily trains eastbound between San Francisco and Chicago. The time from Chicago to San Francisco was three days, two hours and fifteen minutes.

In December, 1914, there were three through daily trains in operation, westbound, and four daily trains eastbound, between Chicago and San Francisco. The time from Chicago to San Francisco by the Overland Limited, was two days, seventeen hours and ten minutes.

A corresponding improvement is shown in the eastbound time.

Q. Have you prepared an exhibit showing, in greater detail, the progress of passenger service improvement over the Ogden route?

A. I have.

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel for defendants puts in evidence the statement just referred to by the witness.

(The statement referred to was thereupon marked "Defendants' Exhibit (Spence) No. 61, April 22, 1915", and will be found in the volume of defendants' exhibits.)

By Mr. BLAIR:

2178 Q. We will interrupt the line of your testimony a moment here, Mr. Spence. In your testimony of yesterday you referred to a certain exhibit of the Government, No. 22, as showing the amount of transcontinental traffic which the Santa Fe secured in the early days, prior to 1899. You referred to Exhibit No. 22, I believe. I did not have it at the time. I now have it, and hand it to you. Will you point out on Exhibit No. 22 what you had reference to?

A. Petitioner's Exhibit No. 22 shows that during a period of fifteen months from October 1, 1884, to December 31, 1885, the Santa Fe handled, by its Mojave route, 20.34 per cent of the through transcontinental business.

Q. That is what you had reference to?

A. Yes.

Q. The exhibit speaks of that route as "Via Southern Pacific and Atlantic & Pacific." Is the Atlantic & Pacific the same as the Santa Fe?

A. Yes; it forms the Santa Fe route via Mojave.

Q. When you testified yesterday in regard to electric lines being opened in California, the Central California Traction Company between Stockton and Sacramento, the Northern Electric between Sacramento and Marysville and Chico, and the Oakland, Antioch 2179 & Eastern between Sacramento and Oakland, Mr. McClennen suggested that you had not stated when these electric lines were opened. I intended to ask you, but neglected to do so. Can you give us about what time those lines were opened for service?

A. I am unable to give from memory the dates of the opening of those lines, but my recollection is that they all have been opened for service within the last five years.

Q. If that is as near as you can come it will be sufficient.

Going back, now, to the regular order of your testimony, what are the relations between the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific in respect to the through route via Ogden?

A. There are but few connecting lines whose relations are as close and coöperative. There are no connecting lines whose relations are closer and more coöperative than the relations between the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific. The lines are operated as o connected, continuous line.

Q. What about the personal relations between the officers of th lines in respect to mutual satisfaction as to the nature and extent the coöperation?

A. They are exceedingly cordial and cooperative. I do n 2180 know of a complaint on either side, and I know of no ca for complaint on either side.

Q. What arrangements have you, for instance, with them in reg to advertising the Ogden through route?

A. We joined the Union Pacific in advertising the through tr service between Chicago and San Francisco by the annual creation a joint advertising fund, to which the lines contribute on a pro ra basis. Very much the largest share of that fund is spent in we bound advertising, and is placed in the hands of the Union Paci for that purpose.

Q. They spend the fund to which you contribute as they see fit?

A. Yes.

Q. Can you give us the approximate amount annually which expended for this westbound advertising?

A. The amount spent, between Chicago and San Francisco, durin the current year will be about $140,000.

Q. What have been the results of this coöperative effort to affo the pubilc a through line via Ogden? What kind of a line is th through line thus created?

A. Briefly stated, the results of this coöperation have be 2181 to establish the best through transcontinental line, takin passenger and freight service together, across the country.

Q. Of all the all-rail lines that you have mentioned, in your opi ion, the Ogden route is the best?

A. Yes.

Q. Mr. Spence, state whether or not the Union Pacific is more o less at the mercy of the Southern Pacific now than it was just befo the merger in 1901 in respect to securing good service, reasonabl terms and facilities, and so forth, for engaging in transcontinenta business via the Ogden route, and give the facts upon which you answer is based.

A. Prior to 1901 the Union Pacific had, beside the Southern Pa cific west of Ogden as a connecting line, its rail route to Portlan and its steamship line thence to San Francisco as its only alternativ route. Since that time the Western Pacific and the San Pedro, Lo Angeles & Salt Lake Railways have been constructed, affording th Union Pacific various routes; the interstate commerce law wa amended in 1906, delegating authority to the Interstate Commerc Commission to establish through routes and joint rates, whic gives the Union Pacific an absolute guaranty of the continua-182 tion of through routes and joint rates; in 1910 the commission was given authority to suspend advanced rates, and by the me amendment to the law the shipper was given authority to route is freight, and the carriers were required to respect his routing.

Q. What kind of service is maintained by the Southern Pacific er its end of the Ogden route; that is, between Ogden and San rancisco? I mean in respect to the maintenance of the road as ell as in respect to the equipment and all the elements that go into rvice.

A. The service on the line west of Ogden is not excelled anywhere, nder like conditions.

Q. What do you mean by "under like conditions"?

A. The character of the country, the density of the traffic, and the opulation.

Q. State any facts that you may know tending to show whether ie Southern Pacific Company has any interest or motive to impair is service over the Ogden route.

A. In the first place, the Southern Pacific Company has a very rge investment in the Central Pacific, upon which it is anxious to rn a return. In the second place——

Q. Just give the general character of that investment 183 without going much into detail.

A. It owns the stock, and is the guarantor of the bonds. In the second place, the Southern Pacific is dependent upon the entral Pacific, west of Ogden, as the only route by which it can ccessfully compete for the traffic to and from the Middle West rritory, and also dependent upon that route to successfully com-ete for a large share of the traffic to and from the Atlantic sea-oard territory for which the Sunset-Gulf route is physically unable compete. These conditions not only afford no motive for impair-g the service, but they afford every incentive for keeping the serv-e up to its maximum efficiency.

Q. Could you impair the service on your part of the Ogden route ith a view to benefiting the Sunset-Gulf route in respect to the mited traffic for which those two routes offer alternative routes ithout at the same time impairing the service and injuring the gden route in respect to this traffic as to which the two lines do not ffer alternative routes?

A. No.

184 Q. Have you prepared a statement showing the total tonnage from and to all territories moving via the Ogden route s compared with the movement to and from Atlantic seaboard ter-itory?

A. I have.

Q. Was this statement prepared under your direction?

A. It was.

Q. Is it correct, to the best of your knowledge, information, a belief?

A. It is.

Q. Was it prepared from the statistics which were secured in or to furnish the petitioner with the traffic exhibits put in by it?

A. From the same statistics.

Q. Of course, throughout this testimony, by "Ogden route" mean over the Central Pacific to Ogden and the Union Pacific a its connections.

A. I am testifying with that understanding.

Q. This statement deals with tonnage moving over the Ogd route?

A. Yes.

2185 Q. How much of the transcontinental freight handled v the Ogden route during the fiscal year ending June 30, 19 had origin or destination in Atlantic seaboard territory?

A. 223,145 tons.

Q. How many tons had origin or destination in other territory?

A. 1,141,597 tons.

Q. What percentage of the total tonnage passing over the Ogd route is represented by Atlantic seaboard territory tonnage?

A. 16.3 per cent.

Q. In this Atlantic seaboard territory is included the traffic whi you mentioned yesterday in your testimony as traffic which t Sunset-Gulf route was physically unable to carry?

A. Yes.

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel for the defendants puts in evidence the sta ment just referred to by the witness.

(The statement referred to was thereupon marked "Defendan Exhibit (Spence) No. 62, April 22, 1915", and will be found in th volume of defendants' exhibits.)

By Mr. BLAIR:

2186 Q. Are you familiar, Mr. Spence, with the petitioner exhibits, which have been numbered here 43 to 58, containi certain traffic statistics?

A. Yes.

Q. Under whose directions were they prepared?

A. They were prepared under my direction.

Q. How was the material therefor obtained?

A. It was collected by the employment of seventy-six extra clerk

Q. What period is covered by these statistics?

A. The fiscal year beginning July 1, 1913, and ending June 30, 914.

Q. The Atlantic seaboard territory referred to in these statistics, suppose, embraces the same territory as the Atlantic seaboard terri- ory referred to in your previous testimony?

A. It does.

Q. And the same is true of the Middle West territory appearing n the statistics?

A. Yes.

Q. When you speak of traffic on those statistics as via El Paso, that does not necessarily mean traffic via the Sunset-Gulf route?

187 A. No, sir; it means the traffic passing through El Paso.

Q. Whether it goes further on by means of connections at l Paso or between El Paso and New Orleans or whether it goes by he Sunset-Gulf route?

A. It includes all traffic interchanged with connections at El Paso.

Q. The revenue referred to in the petitioner's exhibits and referred o in the additional exhibits which will be offered in connection with our testimony upon tonnage routed via Ogden is revenue accruing o the Southern Pacific Company, including the Central Pacific west f Ogden. Is that true?

A. Yes.

Q. And the revenue in the exhibits upon tonnage routed via El aso is that accruing to the Southern Pacific, including the Central acific, west of New York or New Orleans or El Paso or other Texas ateway through which the traffic moved?

A. All of the revenue accuring to the Southern Pacific system; yes.

188 Q. In the movement via the Ogden route what was the aver- age length of haul upon which the Southern Pacific earned its evenue?

A. The average haul was from 800 to 900 miles.

Q. When the movement was via El Paso what was the average ngth of haul upon which the Southern Pacific earned its revenue?

A. From about 1,000 miles to about 4,000 miles.

Q. In these statistical statements what does traffic to and from ints in Oregon include?

A. It includes all traffic from and to points in Oregon and any affic going to points north of Portland or originating at points rth of Portland, the only exception to that statement being what- er small amount of traffic there may be on the little branch that ns from Weed across the border into Kirk, Oregon.

Q. And in what have you included the revenue from that little anch?

A. That is included in California tonnage and revenue wherever California tonnage and revenue is introduced.

Q. Why was that?

A. Because the traffic is carried off from the main line of 2189 the Central Pacific by a branch line of the Central Pacific and is subject to the same general conditions as all northern California movements.

Q. Referring to petitioner's Exhibit 43–4, covering all tonnage routed via Ogden to and from Atlantic seaboard territory, and to petitioner's Exhibit 45–6, covering all tonnage routed via Ogden to and from Middle West territory, do they embrace all points west of Ogden that can be routed by the Ogden route?

A. They do.

Q. Now, referring to petitioner's Exhibit 47–8, covering all tonnage routed via El Paso to and from Atlantic seaboard territory, and to petitioner's Exhibit 49–50, covering all tonnage routed via El Paso to and from Middle West territory, what territory on the west has been included under the designation of "West of Ogden" and "West of El Paso"?

A. All points west of El Paso, including New Mexico and Arizona; all of California, Oregon, and Nevada.

Q. The boundaries west of Ogden and west of El Paso were boundaries designated by the petitioner in his request for the statistics?

A. Petitioner asked for the statistics covering the traffic routed via El Paso to and from all points west of Ogden; and 2190 we, therefore, included in the statistics all points west of El Paso for that reason.

Q. What is the eastern or southeastern boundary of Pacific coast territory to and from which through rates are applicable via the Ogden route?

A. They apply to points as far southeast in California, to and from points, as Banning, a point about eighty-six miles east of Los Angeles.

Q. So that in the Government's statistics of freight passing via El Paso there is necessarily included, from your description of the boundaries, a great deal of traffic which in no sense would be competitive to the Ogden route; is that true?

A. That is correct.

Q. Have you prepared statistics of the tonnage via El Paso which includes all tonnage to and from points west or northwest of Banning, California?

A. I have.

Q. In other words, they would exclude from the Government's statistics what was not in any way or in any sense open to the Ogden route?

A. Yes; the statement is made to make the statistics properly comparable.

2191 Q. Will you produce that statement?

A. Here it is.

Q. The statement which you produce is one of commercial freight tonnage and revenue of the Southern Pacific Company on traffic moved via El Paso gateway (including the relatively small amount of traffic interchanged with the Santa Fe at Deming) between all points west of Ogden, Utah, open to traffic via Ogden gateway in the sense in which you have explained, and Atlantic seaboard territory. Is that the statement you have produced?

A. That is correct.

Q. Have you prepared a statement embracing all traffic to and from the Pacific coast territory that is covered by petitioner's Exhibit 45–46, showing traffic routed via El Paso to middle west territory?

A. I have.

Q. Will you produce it?

A. That is the statement I have just handed to you.

Q. That is a statement that covers freight tonnage and revenue of the Southern Pacific Company on traffic moved via El Paso gateway (including the relatively small amount of traffic interchanged 2192 with the Santa Fe at Deming) between all points west of Ogden, Utah, open to traffic via the Ogden gateway to middle west territory as defined. Are both these statements correct?

A. They are both correct.

Q. They were prepared under your supevision?

A. Yes.

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel for the defendants puts in evidence the two statements referred to by the witness, one of which is headed S–1 and the other of which is headed S–2.

(The statements referred to were thereupon marked, respectively, "Defendants' Exhibit (Spence) No. 63, April 22, 1915", and "Defendants' Exhibit (Spence) No. 64, April 22, 1915", and will be found in the volume of defendants' exhibits.)

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. Have you prepared another statement making a comparison of commerciel freight tonnage and revenue of the Southern Pacific Company on traffic moved by the El Paso gateway with that moved by the Ogden gateway?

A. Yes.

Q. Under whose supervision and direction were those statistics prepared?

2193 A. Under my supervision.

Q. Are they correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Were they compiled from the same material and data from which the petitioner's exhibits were prepared?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. This is revenue, as shown here, via El Paso and via Ogden. Will you state any reasons why the revenue part is not fairly comparable?

A. The revenue on traffic via Ogden represents an average service of from 800 to 900 miles. The revenue upon tonnage via El Paso embraces all of the revenue, whether from El Paso, Alpine, Texas, New Orleans, or New York. That is to say, it embraces all of the revenue accruing to the Southern Pacific lines, which ranges from 1,000 to 4,000 miles.

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel for defendants puts in evidence the statement just referred to by the witness, it being a comparison of commercial freight tonnage and revenue of the Southern Pacific Company on traffic moved via El Paso gateway with that moved via Ogden gateway, between all points west of Ogden, Utah, open to traffic 2194 via Ogden on the one hand and Atlantic seaboard territory and Middle West territory on the other hand, it being headed S-4.

(The statement referred to was thereupon marked "Defendants' Exhibit (Spence) No. 65, April 22, 1915", and will be found in the volume of defendants' exhibits.)

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. When you say "open to traffic via Ogden" you mean that the rates are the same?

A. The tonnage via El Paso embraces all of the tonnage to and from western territory that is open to the Ogden route; that is, by which the rates apply.

Q. It includes traffic in southern California, though?

A. And Oregon.

Q. I want to call your attention to petitioner's Exhibit 51-32, covering traffic which originated or was delivered at points reached by the Central Pacific, whether it moved over the Central Pacific line or not, this exhibit being confined to traffic routed via El Paso. Did you include in this exhibit San Francisco traffic as well as Oakland and San Jose traffic?

A. Yes.

2195 Q. Although the Central Pacific really has not a line into San Francisco?

A. Yes; and may not have hauled Oakland and San Jose traffic. e included Oakland and San Jose because the request included that ffic.

Q. Whether that traffic was touched or handled by the Central cific or not?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you prepared a similar statement covering the traffic uted via Ogden?

A. I have.

Q. This statement is a statement of commercial tonnage and rev- ue of Southern Pacific Company on traffic which originated, assed over, or was delivered on Central Pacific Railroad moving via gden gateway to and from Atlantic seaboard territory?

A. That is correct.

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel for defendants puts in evidence the statement ferred to by the witness, which is headed S–4.

(The statement referred to was thereupon marked "Defendants' xhibit (Spence) No. 66, April 22, 1915", and will be found in the volume of defendants' exhibits.)

1096 By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. This offers the other side of the picture to petitioner's xhibits, does it not?

A. It does.

Q. Have you prepared a similar statement referring to Middle Vest territory?

A. I have.

Q. This is a statement of commercial tonnage and revenue of outhern Pacific Company on traffic which originated, passed over, r was delivered on Central Pacific Railroad, moving via Ogden ateway, to and from Middle West territory?

A. Yes.

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel for defendants puts in evidence this statement, hich is headed S–5.

(The statement referred to was thereupon marked "Defendants' Exhibit (Spence) No. 67, April 22, 1915", and will be found in the olume of defendants' exhibits.)

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. Have you prepared a statement making a comparison of this affic routed via Ogden with that routed via El Paso?

A. I have. Here it is.

1097 Q. All these statements you have introduced and are introducing are correct and are prepared in the same way?

A. They are.

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel for defendants introduces in evidence the statement referred to, which is a comparison of commercial tonnage and revenue of Southern Pacific Company on traffic via El Paso and via Ogden which originated, passed over, or was delivered on Central Pacific Railroad to and from Atlantic seaboard territory and Middle West territory. This statement is headed S–6.

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. Coming now to petitioner's Exhibits 53 and 54, which cover traffic moved via El Paso between all points in Nevada and Atlantic seaboard territory and Middle West territory, respectively, have you prepared like exhibits covering the traffic moved via Ogden?

A. Yes.

Q. And a statement making a comparison of that routed via Ogden with that moved via El Paso?

A. I have.

2198 Q. I have now called for three statements, which you have produced?

A. Yes.

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel for the defendants put in evidence the three statements, the first headed S–7, it being a statement of commercial freight tonnage and revenue of the Southern Pacific Company on traffic moved via Ogden gateway between all points in Nevada and Atlantic seaboard territory.

(The statement referred to was thereupon marked "Defendants' Exhibit (Spence) No. 68½, April 22, 1915", and will be found in the volume of defendants' exhibits.)

Mr. BLAIR. The second statement is headed S–8, and is a statement of commercial freight tonnage and revenue of the Southern Pacific Company on traffic moved via Ogden gateway between all points in Nevada and Middle West territory.

(The statement referred to was thereupon marked "Defendants' Exhibit (Spence) No. 69, April 22, 1915", and will be found in the volume of defendants' exhibits.)

Mr. BLAIR. The third statement is headed S–9, and is a comparison of commercial tonnage and revenue of Southern Pacific Company on traffic moved via El Paso and Ogden gateways, between 2199 points in Nevada and Atlantic seaboard territory and Middle West territory.

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. I call your attention now to petitioner's Exhibit No. 55, showg traffic moved via El Paso between all points in Oregon and bend and in California north of Roseville, Davis, Elmira, Suisun, d South Vallejo and Atlantic seaboard territory; and also to petiner's Exhibit No. 56, showing movements between the same Pacific ast territory and Middle West territory.

A. Yes.

Q. Those statistics, I understand, include all traffic originating rth of the Southern Pacific's main line, Roseville to San Franisco included?

A. They do.

Q. Have you prepared exhibits showing the like traffic routed via gden and an exhibit showing the comparison of the traffic routed ia Ogden with that routed via El Paso?

A. I have.

Q. My call brings from you three statements?

2200 A. Yes.

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel for defendants puts in evidence the three statements, the first being headed S–10, it being a statement of commercial tonnage and revenue of Southern Pacific Company on traffic moved via Ogden gateway between all points in Oregon and beyond and in California north of Roseville, Davis, Elmira, Suisun, and South Vallejo and Atlantic seaboard territory.

Mr. BLAIR. The next statement is headed S–11, and is a statement of commercial tonnage and revenue of Southern Pacific Company on traffic moved via Ogden gateway between all points in Oregon and beyond and in California north of Roseville, Davis, Elmira, Suisun, and South Vallejo and Middle West territory.

Mr. BLAIR. The third statement is headed S–12 and is a com-

2201 parison of tonnage and revenue of Southern Pacific Company via El Paso as shown in petitioner's Exhibits Nos. 55 and 56 with that via Ogden on traffic moved between Atlantic seaboard territory and Middle West territory, on the one hand, and points in Oregon and beyond and in California north of Roseville, Davis, Elmira, Suisun, and South Vallejo.

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. Are there any reasons why the comparison between the mo ment via the Ogden route and the movement via El Paso for t period covered by these statements is not a fair comparison?

A. Yes. The tonnage via the Ogden route is not normal, becau the route was not opened to traffic to and from Oregon until Ju 15, 1914; so that the major part of the Oregon traffic moved v Portland. About eighty per cent of the traffic was moved via Po land.

Q. That was due to the closing of the Roseville gateway, to whi you have referred?

A. Because the Roseville gateway was closed; yes.

Q. The Roseville gateway was closed during the regi 2202 of the Union Pacific?

A. Yes.

Q. And did you begin to take steps immediately after the merg to reopen that gateway?

A. We took steps at once and we encountered some long and sh haul difficulties that delayed the opening of it, but finally opened it June, 1914, the year covered by the statements.

Q. The tonnage which would have moved via Ogden, if it had b open, was routed via what points?

A. Chiefly via Portland.

Q. Do these statements, both the petitioner's exhibits and ou include traffic having origin and destination on the Northweste Pacific and on the Southern Pacific line north of Vallejo, Suis Elmira, and Davis?

A. They do.

Q. Are those points also on the Central Pacific?

A. None of them, except Marysville and Tehama.

Q. How would you explain the large excess of eastbound tra shown in petitioner's Exhibit No. 55?

A. The excess of eastbound over westbound?

A. Yes.

2203 A. The eastbound tonnage originates at the interior poi
The westbound tonnage goes to——

Q. I am speaking of petitioner's Exhibit No. 55, which is o which deals with traffic north of these points, Roseville, Sacramen and other points.

A. Do you mean why does the eastbound so largely exceed t westbound?

Q. Yes.

A. The westbound tonnage does not go directly to the destinatio
It goes to Oakland and Sacramento and is jobbed.

Q. And your statement, by its definition, excludes those jobbing ints?
A. Yes; it does not include those jobbing points.
Mr. McCLENNEN. By "jobbing" you mean the jobbing of the mmercial houses?
The WITNESS. Yes.
Mr. McCLENNEN. And not the jobbing of the railroad?
The WITNESS. No.

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. Coming now to petitioner's Exhibit No. 57, covering traffic via El Paso gateway between San Francisco and Oakland 04 and Atlantic seaboard territory, and petitioner's Exhibit No. 58, covering traffic moved via El Paso between San Francisco d Oakland, California, and Middle West territory, have you pre-red exhibits showing similar traffic routed via Ogden?
A. I have.
Q. And a comparison of the statements?
A. Yes.
Mr. BLAIR. Counsel for defendants puts in evidence the three tements just produced by the witness, one headed S–13, being a tement of commercial tonnage and revenue of Southern Pacific mpany on traffic moved by Ogden gateway between San Francisco d Oakland, California, and Atlantic seaboard territory.
(The statement referred to was thereupon marked "Defendants'
hibit (Spence) No. 74, April 22, 1915", and will be found in the lume of defendants' exhibits.)
Mr. BLAIR. The second statement is headed S–14, and is a state-nt of commercial tonnage and revenue of the Southern Pacific mpany on traffic moved via Ogden gateway between San Francisco and Oakland, California, and the Middle West territory.
05 (The statement referred to was thereupon marked "Defendants' Exhibit (Spence) No. 75, April 22, 1915", and will found in the volume of defendants' exhibits.)
Mr. BLAIR. The third statement is headed S–15, and is a compari-n of commercial tonnage and revenue of the Southern Pacific Com-ny on traffice moved via El Paso gateway and via Ogden gateway, tween San Francisco and Oakland, California and Atlantic sea-ard territory and Middle West territory.
(The statement referred to was thereupon marked "Defendants'
hibit (Spence) No. 76, April 22, 1915", and will be found in the lume of defendants' exhibits.)

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. How would you explain the excess of westbound over east-und traffic in the statements just offered in evidence?

A. These are statements of westbound traffic of Oakland and San Francisco, which, as I have previously stated, are not only large consuming points, but are the points at which the traffic is jobbed by the jobbers to all the surrounding country.

Q. How would you explain the movement of as much as 40,000 tons via El Paso from Middle West territory, as contained, say, in petitioner's Exhibit No. 58?

A. That traffic is, in the main, delivered to us at El Paso by the Rock Island. They have their own organization in California and throughout the country actively soliciting the traffic for their long haul, which is at El Paso.

Q. You have an arrangement for handling that business?

A. We have an arrangement.

Q. Can you say whether the amount of traffic which simultaneously was secured over the Santa Fe for the same territory was as large as that over the Rock Island or larger?

A. I should say that it was larger.

Q. I believe you have testified, yesterday, that the Central Pacific lines do not cut any figure in transcontinental traffic having its origin or destination in southern California.

A. Yes.

Q. And that they are not initial lines in Oregon?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you prepared a statement showing the tonnage moved via El Paso and via Ogden between points in southern California as defined—and by "as defined" I mean south of Tehachapi or south of a line between Santa Barbara and Mojave—and points in Oregon on the one hand and points in Atlantic seaboard territory on the other?

A. I have.

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel for the defendants put in evidence the statement just referred to, it being headed S–17, and being a statement of commercial tonnage moved via El Paso and Ogden between points in California, Banning to Mojave and Santa Barbara, inclusive, and points in Oregon on the one hand and points in Atlantic seaboard territory on the other.

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. In other words, the statement which I have just referred to affords the basis of cutting out from the previous statements in reference to Atlantic seaboard territory so much thereof as has origin or destination in Oregon or in southern California?

A. Both by El Paso and by Ogden.

Q. Have you a similar statement which will serve the same purpose in respect to traffic to and from Middle West 2208 territory?

A. I have.

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel for defendants puts in evidence the statement st referred to, it being headed S–16, and being a statement of commercial tonnage moved via El Paso and Ogden between points in alifornia, Banning to Mojave and Santa Barbara, inclusive, and oints in Oregon on the one hand and points in Middle West territory on the other.

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. Have you prepared statements which eliminate the Oregon and outhern California tonnage from the traffic statistics offered as exhibits by petitioner, and which show the movement of traffic between points south of the Oregon-California line and north of Mojave and Santa Barbara on one hand, and points in Middle West territory and Atlantic seaboard territory, respectively, on the other hand?

A. I have.

Q. Moving either way?

A. Yes.

2209 Mr. MCCLENNEN. Does that include both territories?

The WITNESS. Yes.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. And both gateways—both Ogden and El Paso?

Mr. BLAIR. It includes both gateways.

Counsel for defendants puts in evidence the statements just produced by the witness, the first of which is headed S–18, and is a statement of commercial tonnage moved between points west of Ogden, Utah, south of the Oregon-California State line, and north of Mojave and Santa Barbara on the one hand and Middle West territory on the other hand.

Mr. BLAIR. The other statement is offered by counsel for the defendants, and is headed S–26, it being a statement of commercial tonnage moved between points west of Ogden, Utah, south of the Oregon-California State line and north of Mojave and Santa Barbara on the one hand and Atlantic seaboard territory on the other hand.

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. We have the different routes on these tables described in s way; via Ogden is our old friend the Ogden route?

A. Yes.

Q. Via Sunset-Gulf route we all know?

A. Yes.

Q. What is meant by "via New Orleans"?

A. It covers traffic that moves from that territory all-rail via N Orleans.

Q. Through El Paso?

A. Through El Paso.

Q. And then went all-rail to destination?

A. Yes.

Q. What is meant by the term "via El Paso and other gatew east thereof except New Orleans"?

A. That covers traffic received from connecting lines at El Pa and at any gateway east thereof to, but exclusive of, New Orleans

Q. I see here on these statements, Mr. Spence, a little traf 2211 carried by the Sunset-Gulf route to middle west territor How did that happen?

A. That is probably reconsigned traffic—traffic that was started b the shipper to one market and reconsigned en route to another.

Q. Explain that a little bit more fully.

A. They may start fruit consigned to New Orleans and reconsig it to Pittsburgh or Cincinnati or to some point in the Middle We territory after it is en route.

Q. That is the only kind of traffic that moves in that way?

A. Except an occasional car that a connecting line may secur through the consignee by their solicitation.

Q. How would you explain the movement of any traffic via Ne Orleans to Middle West territory, especially eastbound traffic?

A. That is explained in substantially the same way, the eastboun traffic; the business may be solicited by the Queen & Crescent or th Louisville & Nashville or connecting line through the consignee a Cincinnati or some point in the vicinity, and by his instructions b routed via New Orleans.

Q. By what railroad, mainly, was the traffic secured 2212 which appears on statement S–18 as moving via El Paso?

A. Chiefly by the Rock Island.

Q. Of course, this is not all the traffic, but only includes traffi which passed either by the Ogden route or the El Paso route?

A. Yes.

Q. And it includes the Asiatic traffic, I suppose—fast-freight traffic?

A. Yes.

Q. And the perishable traffic?

A. Yes.

Q. How would you explain the large percentage of the eastbound traffic via Ogden and the small percentage via the Sunset-Gulf route, as contrasted with the respective percentages of westbound traffic?

A. The eastbound traffic embraces the very large volume of business of a character for which the Sunset-Gulf route is physically unable to compete.

Q. Is there any of this traffic which is traffic to industrial companies, oil companies, or things of that kind owned by the Southern Pacific Company?

2213 A. A very considerable volume of traffic is tonnage consigned to affiliated companies owned by the Southern Pacific Company.

Q. A very considerable part of what particular routing?

A. Westbound traffic.

Q. Which passes over what route? In other words, how would the Southern Pacific Company route its own traffic that it absolutely controlled, the freight for which came out of its pocket?

A. It would route it via the nearest gateway, in order to minimize the amount of freight charges paid to foreign carriers.

Q. It would route it by the nearest gateway by which it could reach its own lines?

A. Yes. Therefore the Middle West traffic via New Orleans; the westbound consists largely of material consigned to affiliated companies.

Q. That is what I was getting at—that comparatively large movement via New Orleans is explained in that way, is it?

A. Yes.

Q. Mr. Spence, what are the chief routes in competition for Asiatic traffic?

2214 A. The Canadian Pacific via Vancouver in connection with its own steamship line across the Pacific.

The Great Northern, Northern Pacific & Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, each a separate route, to Puget Sound ports, Seattle, and Tacoma, in connection with Japanese steamships operating across the Pacific, the Nippon Yusen Kaisha, and the Osaka Yusen Kaisha.

There were other steamship lines operating to and from Puget Sound ports which have less frequent sailings than these.

The Union Pacific system through Portland has the same steamship service available, making a through route via Puget Sound ports.

The Western Pacific and its connections east of Salt Lake City, the Southern Pacific-Union Pacific and its connections east, and the Santa Fe and the Southern Pacific southern route operate to San Francisco in connection with three steamship lines across the Pacific namely the Pacific Mail Steamship Line, the Toyo Kisen Kaisha, and the Dollar Line.

There may be some others, but those are the principal ones.

2215 The San Pedro, Los Angeles & Salt Lake Railway, in connection with the Union Pacific and lines east, operate through San Pedro in connection with steamers of the Dollar Line across the Pacific.

The Atlantic-seaboard business follows the Suez routes, of which there are four steamship lines in regular operation between New York and Asiatic ports.

Q. What does the outbound Asiatic business handled through the Pacific coast consist of?

A. It consists chiefly of products originating in the Middle West such as condensed milk, machinery, canned meats, and of cotton from Oklahoma, Texas, and the Imperial Valley.

Q. What does the inbound traffic consist of?

A. The inbound traffic consists chiefly of raw silk, matting, and tea.

Q. You have explained how that moved—at least, the raw silk. How does the tea move?

A. The tea and matting are consigned, usually, to Missouri River points under storage and transfer arrangement, which exist at Kansas City, Omaha, St. Joseph, St. Paul, under which the matting and tea originally are consigned to those points and stored, and 2216 eventually distributed to points east under the through rate.

Q. Can the Sunset-Gulf route get any of this Asiatic traffic?

A. No.

Q. Would it be in a different position if the Central Pacific were not a part of its system?

A. Its position would be just the same.

Q. It is out of that, hopelessly?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you an exhibit or statement showing the eastbound tonnage delivered at Ogden to the Union Pacific as compared with the westbound tonnage received at Ogden from the Union Pacific during the two years ending June 30, 1913, and June 30, 1914?

A. I have.

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel for defendants puts in evidence the statement headed S–37, statement of commercial freight interchanged between Southern Pacific Company and Union Pacific Railroad Company at Ogden, Utah, for the fiscal years ending June 30, 1913 and 1914.

The statement referred to was thereupon marked "Defendants' Exhibit (Spence) No. 81, April 22, 1915", and will be 7 found in the volume of defendants' exhibits.)

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. The eastboard shipments represent tonnage you deliver to the ion Pacific and the westbound shipments tonnage you receive from Union Pacific?

A. Yes.

Q. It appears from your statement of 1913 that you delivered, in nd numbers, 606,000 tons and received 547,000 tons?

A. Yes; that is correct.

Q. And that in 1914 you delivered 598,000 tons and received from e Union Pacific 469,000 tons?

A. That is correct.

Q. Will you explain the difference between the figures contained this statement produced by you and those covering the two fiscal ars included in petitioner's Exhibit No. 73, produced by Mr. unroe?

A. The difference is due, first, to a difference in the method of counting, of keeping the statistics. The Union Pacific takes into count during a specific period all traffic passing the junction within that period. The Southern Pacific takes the business into 18 account under what we call interline accounts, after it is delivered to destination and the earnings reported back by e delivering line.

The second difference is that our statement does not include, in e westbound, material and supplies for our own company.

Q. You do not include, in the eastbound, material and supplies r the Union Pacific?

A. No.

Q. Mr. Spence, have you prepared a statement making a compari-n of tonnage to and from Middle West territory moved via El aso which had origin or destination on the Central Pacific bond-ded line, with tonnage moved via Ogden which had origin or estination on the Southern Pacific or Central Pacific nonbond-aided ine?

A. I have.

Q. Will you produce the statement?

A. Here it is.

Q. Is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel for defendants puts in evidence the statem just referred to and produced by the witness, headed S-22.

2219 (The statement referred to was thereupon marked "Defe ants' Exhibit (Spence) No. 82, April 22, 1915", and will found in the volume of defendants' exhibits.)

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. The statement just referred to embraced Middle West territo Have you a similar statement in regard to Atlantic seaboard ter tory?

A. I have.

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel for the defendants puts in evidence the sta ment just produced, headed S-30, being a similar comparison of sim lar tonnage upon Atlantic seaboard territory.

(The statement referred to was thereupon marked "Defendan Exhibit (Spence) No. 83, April 22, 1915", and will be found in t volume of defendants' exhibits.)

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. Mr. Spence, is there much unrouted traffic nowadays? I me is there any considerable quantity of traffic which a carrier recei without routing directions from the shipper?

A. There is no appreciable amount of such traffic now. T 2220 shipper nearly always exercises his prerogative to designate routing.

Q. Take the westbound traffic from the Atlantic seaboard whi the Sunset-Gulf receives, of course, at New York. How much of th is unrouted?

A. There can not be said to be any of it that is unrouted, becau the delivery of the freight by the shipper to the steamship line p of the Southern Pacific Company makes his intention obvious.

Q. You could not carry it but one way when it is delivered to yo

A. No.

Q. What about the eastbound traffic which the Sunset Route g for transportation to the Atlantic seaboard territory?

A. There is very little of it that is not routed by the shipper.

Q. Do other lines have access to points exclusively on the South Pacific lines in California?

A. Yes; all transcontinental lines have access to the business to a from all Southern Pacific territory.

Q. Does the Southern Pacific control the routing of traffic ori nating at such places exclusively on its line?

2221 A. It does not.

(Whereupon, at 12.30 o'clock p. m., a recess was taken un 2 o'clock p. m.)

222 AFTER RECESS.

LEWIS J. SPENCE, the witness under examination at the taking of ecess, resumed the stand and testified further as follows:

Direct examination (continued) by Mr. BLAIR:

Q. Mr. Spence, referring again to the steamships operated through he Panama Canal, and to this map offered in evidence showing those operation October 1, 1914, do you remember how many in number hese steamships were?

A. There were forty-nine, on the date of the map.

Q. What was their approximate capacity?

A. Approximately 400,000 tons.

Q. Have any additions been made to the service since that map was repared? I think you stated them yesterday?

A. Yes; the Red Star Line has put on a regular service with the teamers Finland and Kroonland.

Q. What does this make the steamship facilities available through he Panama Canal amount to, in tons per annum, in each direction?

223 A. Considerably more than 1,000,000 tons per annum in each direction.

Q. Do you know the number of tons of transcontinental traffic arried through the Panama Canal by steamships between eastern oints in the United States and California in the months of September, October, November, and December, 1914?

A. 369,199 tons.

Q. That is, between Atlantic seaboard territory and California?

A. And California ports.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. In what period?

The WITNESS. During the last four months of 1914.

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. How did sailings and service in the Panama Canal compare ith those of the Tehuantepec route when that was in operation?

A. The sailings of the American-Hawaiian Line of the Tehuantepec route were from five to seven days apart. The time in transit as from twenty-six to thirty days, and the service involved two ransfers, one on each side of the Isthmus. The average sailings between New York and California via the canal at the present time are about every other day. The average time is about twenty-224 two days, and the freight is handled through without transfer.

Q. And all these water lines compete directly and successfully for traffic in New Orleans and central California?

A. They do.

Q. And in what part of Atlantic seaboard territory?

A. The entire Atlantic seaboard territory.

Q. How was the Sunset-Gulf route affected by the inaugura of the service through the isthmus of Tehuantepec?

A. When the service was inaugurated by the Tehuantepec ro it reduced the time which had previously been by the Americ Hawaiian Line through the Straits of Magellan from sixty to twe six or thirty days and drew a very considerable volume of tra from the Sunset Route.

Q. Was the business of all-rail lines as much affected as was t business of the Sunset Route?

A. No; they were not as much affected, because the Tehuantepec capable of handling the peculiar character of traffic that the Sun Route is capable of handling.

Q. Has it competed with the Sunset-Gulf route at its strong point, the port of New York. Is that right?

A. That is right; yes, the port of New York.

2225 Q. Is the effect of numerous steamship lines through t Panama Canal confined to the port of New York? I beli I have asked you that before.

A. Yes, sir. The rates are so low to and from New York C that by the addition of the full local from or to any point in Atla seaboard territory the aggregate cost of transportation is less th by the transcontinental line.

Q. Are the steamships through the Panama Canal physically a to carry all the kinds of traffic that the Sunset-Gulf route is capa of carrying?

A. Everything.

Q. And the kind of traffic which the Sunset-Gulf route is not phy ically capable of carrying I suppose the steamships are not phy cally capable of carrying?

A. No; they have made an effort to carry a little perish freight, but have not been successful so far.

Q. Please state what are the future prospects in respect to t traffic between California and Atlantic seaboard territory wh both the Sunset-Gulf route and the steamships through the Pan Canal are able to carry.

A. The steamship lines through the Panama Canal have alre established very low rates; rates so low that the all-rail lines finding it impossible to meet them.

2226 Q. Why?

A. Because the eastern lines will not join in the nece through rate.

Q. By "eastern lines" you mean what lines?

A. East of Chicago and the Mississippi River, especially. Sunset Route (the Southern Pacific Company) has made appli

o the Interstate Commerce Commission for authority to make east-ound rates, which application was granted this week between the California ports and New York, to approximately meet the competi-ion through the canal.

Q. And the all-rail lines, as you have said——

A. The all-rail lines have not participated in the application and re unable to do so for the reasons stated.

Q. Are the western parts of the all-rail lines willing and the east-rn parts not willing?

A. Yes; the western lines would be glad to handle the traffic.

Q. How about the Santa Fe, with its mixed rail and water lines?

A. The Santa Fe, in connection with the Mallory Line, expects to establish the same rates as the Sunset Route.

2227 Q. So that, then, as to all the traffic of the Sunset-Gulf route which it is physically able to carry between California and the Atlantic seaboard territory it is in competition with the Pacific Mail steamships?

A. The steamships through the Panama Canal.

Q. Yes; I mean the steamships through the Panama Canal; and the prospects are that it will be alone in the fight in respect to that traffic with the water carriers on that side?

A. That the Sunset-Gulf route and the Mallory route will be in the contest with the steamships through the Panama Canal and for the major part of the traffic the all-rail lines will not be able to com-pete.

Q. Then the all-rail lines, including the Ogden route, will be in the business to the extent of striving for that traffic which you have described, which mixed rail and water lines can not engage in?

A. Yes; competition for that traffic will be between the several all-rail lines, the Ogden route, and the Santa Fe and others.

Q. And the competition for this transcontinental traffic which the Sunset-Gulf route is capable of carrying, that competition will be between the Sunset-Gulf route, the Santa Fe-Mallory Line, 2228 and the water carriers through the Panama Canal?

A. That is right.

Q. What effect in respect to the rate upon that traffic has the coming into existence of the water carriers through the Panama Canal had?

A. It has radically reduced it.

Q. Which lines are the dominant rate-making factors in respect to all that traffic which the Sunset-Gulf route is capable of carrying?

A. The steamship lines through the Panama Canal.

Q. And those carriers now dominate the rate situation in respect to such traffic between California and the Atlantic seaboard terri-

A. Yes.

Q. What effect, in your opinion, upon the rates would result fr the separation of the Central Pacific lines from the Southern P cific system; first, as to transcontinental rates in general, and t I will ask you about rates between California and Atlantic seabo territory especially?

A. Owing to the petitions which the carriers filed with the Int state Commerce Commission after the amendment of the law 2229 1910 for the privilege of protecting and continuing thro rates to California terminals, lower than rates to intermedi points, the transcontinental rates have been under the active a continuous review of the Interstate Commerce Commission for s eral years. They have not been found higher than reasonable. fact, the major part of them have been found to be subnormal ra less than reasonable, to such an extent that the commission has thorized a waiver of the long and short haul clause and the maint nance of higher rates for less service to intermediate points.

Q. That answer would apply as to the prospect of any fut reduction of transcontinental rates?

A. Yes.

Q. What I am asking is: What, in your opinion, would be t effect of the separation of the Central Pacific lines from the South Pacific system in general upon transcontinental rates?

A. My answer is that the same competitive forces that have c ated those rates would be still operative, and the effect would neither to advance nor to reduce them.

Q. What about rates between California and Atlantic seaboard t ritory? Into what two classes would you divide that tra 2230 with reference to the ability of the Sunset-Gulf route to t part in it?

A. First, that class of traffic which neither the Sunset-Gulf ro nor the Mallory Line nor the canal steamship lines are physic able to take.

Q. That, I understand, is the perishable freight?

A. The fruit and bulk freight; all kinds of delicate freight freight which is insufficiently packed to bear handling.

Q. As to such traffic, what effect upon rates would the separa of the Central Pacific lines from the Southern Pacific have?

A. I do not think it would have any.

Q. The Sunset-Gulf route and the Central Pacific do not com for that traffic, do they?

A. No, sir.

Q. As to the remainder of the traffic; that is, such traffic as Sunset-Gulf route and the Santa Fe-Mallory Line and the w carriers through the Panama Canal can compete for, what e ould the separation of the Central Pacific from the Southern Pacific have upon rates for that traffic?

A. It would have no effect whatever, for the reason 231 that the contest for that traffic will be between the canal steamship lines and the Sunset-Gulf line and the Mallory Line-Santa Fe route.

Q. As I understand it, the water carriers through the Panama Canal have already reduced rates on that traffic, so that the all-rail lines are prospectively out of that business?

A. On the major part of it the rates have already been reduced.

Q. What will be the effect, in your opinion, of the separation of the Central Pacific from the Southern Pacific system upon rates on the Pacific coast, say from Oregon and north thereof, to El Paso on the south and Ogden on the east? That is, comparatively speaking, the local rates.

A. The separation would have a tendency to increase those rates.

Q. Why?

A. By creating a two-line haul or a three-line haul where a one-line haul has previously existed.

Q. What would be the effect, in your opinion, upon the service of the separation of the Central Pacific lines from the Southern 232 Pacific system? First, consider the lines via Ogden and via El Paso.

A. The effect would be to impair the service by both routes, because of the interchangeable way in which the lines are used.

Q. That is, both the lines standing in the name of the Central Pacific and the other lines of the system participate in both of those through routes and add to their efficiency?

A. They do.

Q. Do you know of any compensating advantages to the public likely to result from the separation?

A. I am not able to conceive of any compensating advantages to the public.

Q. Has the inclusion of the Central Pacific lines in the Southern Pacific system closed any alternative or competitive routes to the public?

A. No.

Q. I believe you have already stated that the ownership of the Central Pacific by the Southern Pacific has not prevented the existence of competition between the Ogden route and the El Paso route.

A. It has not.

Q. You said that yesterday?

233 A. Yes, sir.

Q. Has such ownership created the power to prevent such competition?

A. No; it has not.

Q. Has such ownership created an interest or inducement on t part of the Southern Pacific to impair the service on the Cen Pacific part of the Ogden route?

A. It has not.

Q. Have you anything to add to the reasons you gave for y answer yesterday or to-day?

A. No; I think I gave the reasons in full.

Q. What is the value to the Southern Pacific Company of t inclusion in its system of the Central Pacific lines?

A. The lines standing in the name of the Central Pacific ar necessary complement to the other lines embraced in the South Pacific system. The two sets of lines developed as one system, a their separation would impair the efficiency of both.

The joint operation of the two lines enables the Southern Paci to participate in a very substantial volume of traffic which it wou not be able to successfully secure by any other route. It en 2234 bles it to participate in a large traffic for which the Sunse Gulf route is physically unable to complete.

Q. Is it usual or unusual for a railroad system of this country include within its system lines which form part of alternate a competing routes of traffic?

A. It is quite usual.

Q. Let us take, for example, the different systems of railroad whi participate in the transportation of traffic across this continent—th very transcontinental traffic we have been talking about; do any o these systems include within themselves different lines which for parts of alternate competing routes for transcontinental traffic?

A. Quite a number of them.

Q. Will you give some illustrative examples?

A. The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway operates its ow line from Chicago via St. Paul to Seattle.

Its line from Chicago to Omaha, in connection with the Unio Pacific system between Omaha and Seattle, makes an alternate com peting route.

Q. Of those two competing routes, the Chicago, Milwaukee & S Paul owns all of one and what proportion of the other?

A. Nearly 500 miles.

2235 Q. Out of approximately a total of how much?

A. 2,300 miles.

Q. Have you prepared a map which graphically shows what you have just stated in regard to the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul?

A. I have.

Q. Will you produce it?

A. Here it is.

Q. Is that map correct?

A. It is.

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel for defendants put in evidence the map just referred to by the witness.

(The map referred to was thereupon marked "Defendants' Exhibit (Spence) No. 84, April 22, 1915.")

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. Proceed, Mr. Spence.

A. The Union Pacific has its own system of lines from Omaha and from Kansas City on the east to Portland, Oregon, and its own steamship line from Portland to San Francisco. It also has a line from Omaha and one from Kansas City via Salt Lake in connection with the San Pedro, Los Angeles & Salt Lake Railroad, of 2236 which it owns a half interest, and its own steamship line between Los Angeles and San Francisco.

Its lines from Omaha and from Kansas City on the east to Ogden in connection with the Southern Pacific line from Ogden to Sacramento, Oakland, and San Francisco form an alternate competing route.

On the east these Union Pacific lines join, at Council Bluffs, with the Chicago & North Western, among other lines, between Council Bluffs and Chicago; and the Pennsylvania lines, among other lines, between Chicago and the Atlantic seaboard.

The Kansas City line of the Union Pacific connects at Kansas City with the Chicago & Alton to St. Louis, and thence via the Baltimore & Ohio system to Atlantic seaboard, among others.

The Council Bluffs line connects with the Wabash from Council Bluffs to St. Louis, and the Baltimore & Ohio east thereof.

The Kansas City line connects with the Rock Island from Kansas City to Chicago, and thence via Pennsylvania lines to the Atlantic seaboard territory.

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel for defendants put in evidence the map just referred to by the witness.

2237 (The map referred to was thereupon marked "Defendants' Exhibit (Spence) No. 85, April 22, 1915.")

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. In all these maps you have not attempted to put in branches and feeders and other parts of this system of lines to which the map refers that do not figure in the alternate routes?

A. I have not.

Q. Now, proceed.

A. The Missouri Pacific system, consisting of the Missouri Pacific, Denver & Rio Grande, and Western Pacific, operates a line from St. [illegible] to Sacramento, Stockton, Oakland, and San Francisco; a separate line from St. Louis to Texarkana, joining with an affiliated line the Texas & Pacific, between Texarkana and El Paso, connecting with the Southern Pacific west of El Paso, forms an alternative competitive through route.

Q. Of this southern line, what proportion do they own or have a part of their system?

A. The affiliated lines represent fully one-half of it.

Q. In all these maps you represent the system which you are referring to in green color, and the connecting lines in 2238 yellow?

A. Yes.

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel for defendants put in evidence the map referred to by the witness.

(The map referred to was thereupon marked "Defendants' Exhibit (Spence) No. 86, April 22, 1915.")

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. Proceed.

A. The Santa Fe System operates its own line between Chicago and Stockton, Oakland, and San Francisco, California. Its line from Chicago, via Kansas City, to Pueblo, Colorado, in connection with the Denver & Rio Grande, thence to Salt Lake City, and Western Pacific thence to San Francisco, forms an alternate competitive through route.

The Santa Fe system, besides its line from San Francisco to Chicago, operates a line via Texaco to Galveston, Texas, which, in connection with the Mallory Steamship Line, forms an alternative route between California and Atlantic seaboard territory, the line between San Francisco and Chicago joining with the Erie Railroad between Chicago and New York.

Q. Are these alternate routes which you refer to, say, of the 2239 Santa Fe, mere paper routes, or does a substantial volume of traffic pass over both of the alternative routes?

A. They are in active competition and carry a substantial volume of the traffic.

Q. Is that true of the Missouri Pacific system that you refer to?

A. Yes.

Q. And what was the first one you referred to?

A. The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul and the Union Pacific.

Q. And is it true of them?

A. Yes.

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel for the defendants put in evidence the map last referred to by the witness, of the Sante Fe system.

(The map referred to was thereupon marked "Defendants' Exhibit (Spence) No. 87, April 22, 1915.")

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. The Mallory Line, as I understand, is closely affiliated with the Santa Fe and operates with it?

A. Preferentially.

Q. And does a large business?

A. And does a considerable transcontinental business.

2240 Q. Proceed.

A. The Great Northern Railway operates a line from Seattle to Superior, Wisconsin, and the Twin Cities, Minneapolis and St. Paul, connecting at Superior with the New York Central lake and rail lines to New York, and connecting at St. Paul with the Burlington route and the Pennsylvania lines to New York.

The Great Northern, jointly with the Northern Pacific, owns the Spokane, Portland & Seattle Railway, between Astoria, Portland, and Spokane, which, in connection with its Great Northern lines from Spokane eastward, forms a through route from Portland to the Atlantic seaboard by the connections that have been enumerated.

The Great Northern, by the routes described from Seattle and Astoria and Portland, operates a line to Billings, Montana, where it connects with the Burlington route, running via Omaha to Chicago, and via Kansas City to St. Louis, connecting at Chicago with the Pennsylvania lines to the Atlantic seaboard and at St. Louis with the Baltimore & Ohio system to the Atlantic seaboard.

Q. Those, also, are actual routes, over both of which, or over all of which, a substantial volume of traffic moves?

2241 A. Yes.

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel for the defendants puts in evidence the map just referred to by the witness.

(The map referred to was thereupon marked "Defendants' Exhibit (Spence) No. 88, April 22, 1915.")

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. Suppose you give us some examples from the Western Trunk Line group.

A. The Chicago & North Western operates a line from Chicago to Ashland, Wisconsin, which joins with the Northern Pacific in one through route between Chicago and Portland, Tacoma, and Seattle.

The Chicago & North Western operates a separate line between Chicago and St. Paul, which, in connection with the Great Northern Railway, forms an alternate competing route between Chicago and Puget Sound.

The Chicago & North Western operates a third line, between Chicago and Council Bluffs, in connection with the Union Pacific system, forming an alternate competing through route between Chicago and Puget Sound.

Q. You have likewise prepared a map of the system which y have just described?

2242 A. I have.

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel for defendants puts in evidence the m just referred to by the witness.

(The map referred to was thereupon marked "Defendants' E hibit (Spence) No. 89, April 22, 1915.")

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. All three of these alternate routes carry a considerable vol of traffic?

A. They do.

Q. In competition with each other?

A. Yes.

Q. Proceed.

A. The Rock Island lines extend from Chicago to Council Bl and in connection with the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific li form one route between Chicago and California.

A line from Chicago via Kansas City to Pueblo, Colorado, c nects with the Denver & Rio Grande, which connects with the We ern Pacific and forms an alternative route.

A line from Chicago via Kansas City to Santa Rosa, New Mexi in connection with an affiliated line, the El Paso & Southweste between Santa Rosa and El Paso, and the Southern Pac

2243 west thereof, forms an alternate competing line.

A line from St. Louis via——

Q. When you say "a line from St. Louis" and "a line from Ch cago" you mean a Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific line?

A. Yes; a Rock Island line from St. Louis to Denver, in conn tion with the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific to Pueblo, in c nection with the Denver & Rio Grande and Western Pacific, and Santa Rosa, New Mexico, in connection with the El Paso & Sou western and Southern Pacific, form also competing routes betw St. Louis and California.

A Rock Island line from Memphis to Santa Rosa, in connect with the El Paso & Southwestern to El Paso and the Santa Fe yond forms an alternate route in transcontinental business, b joined on the east by the Southern Railway, the Baltimore & O Philadelphia & Reading, and New Jersey Central to New York.

A line at St. Louis connecting with the Pennsylvania lines betw Chicago and the Atlantic seaboard.

A line at Chicago connecting with the New York Central lines tween Chicago and the Atlantic seaboard.

Q. These lines to which you refer have been delineated on map—the map which you now produce?

244 A. Yes.

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel for the defendants put in evidence the map just referred to by the witness.

(The map referred to was thereupon marked "Defendants' Exhibit (Spence) No. 90, April 22, 1915.")

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. Proceed.

A. The Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railway, known as the Burlington Route, operates a line between Chicago and St. Paul in connection with the Great Northern Railway to Portland, Tacoma, and Seattle.

The Burlington Route operates another line from Chicago to Billings, Montana, in connection with the Northern Pacific Railway; thence to Puget Sound, which forms an alternate competing route.

The Burlington operates a line from St. Louis to Denver in connection with the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific to California, and the Burlington operates a separate line from St. Louis to Kansas City in connection with the Missouri Pacific, Denver & Rio Grande, and Western Pacific, forming an alternate competing route between St. Louis and California.

Q. And all those routes carry a substantial volume of 245 traffic?

A. They do.

Q. In competition with each other?

A. Yes.

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel for the defendants put in evidence the map just referred to by the witness.

(The map referred to was thereupon marked "Defendants' Exhibit (Spence) No. 91, April 22, 1915.")

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. Give us some samples, Mr. Spence, from the lines in Trunk Line territory, the eastern territory.

A. The Pennsylvania Lines operate from New York to Chicago and there form connection with the Santa Fe system between Chicago and San Francisco.

The Pennsylvania Lines operate between New York and St. Louis, and there form connection with the Missouri Pacific, Denver & Rio Grande, and Western Pacific to San Francisco, forming alternate competing lines.

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel for the defendants put in evidence the map showing the lines just referred to by the witness.

(The map referred to was thereupon marked "Defendants' Exhibit (Spence) No. 92, April 22, 1915.")

2246 By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. By the way, Mr. Spence, if you were to take the Pennsylvania lines from New York, say, to Chicago, and the Sunset-Gulf route from New York to San Francisco, would you not have an exact reproduction on the east of the Central Pacific and the Sunset Gulf route on the west?

A. Yes; especially from Pittsburgh westward; business from Pittsburgh.

Q. Except that the line from Chicago to New York is longer than the line from San Francisco to Ogden?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you any other examples?

A. The Baltimore & Ohio system operates from the Atlantic seaboard to Chicago, joining with the Illinois Central between Chicago and Council Bluffs, and the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific west thereof via Ogden in one through route between the Atlantic seaboard and San Francisco.

The Baltimore & Ohio system operates a line from the Atlantic seaboard to St. Louis, which, in connection with the Missouri Pacific, Denver & Rio Grande, and Western Pacific to San Fran-2247 cisco, forms an alternate route in the business between the Atlantic seaboard and California.

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel for the defendants put in evidence the map showing the lines just referred to by the witness.

(The map referred to was thereupon marked "Defendants' Exhibit (Spence) No. 93, April 22, 1915.")

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. Proceed, Mr. Spence.

A. The New York Central operates a line from New York to Chicago, which, in connection with the Chicago & North Western, Union Pacific, and San Pedro, Los Angeles & Salt Lake Railroad, forms a through route between New York and Los Angeles.

The New York Central operates another line from New York to St. Louis, which, in connection with the Rock Island, El Paso & Southwestern, and Southern Pacific, forms an alternate competitive route between New York and Los Angeles.

Q. And it is true of the last system of lines, as it was true of the others, that they are not paper lines, but actually handle the business?

A. They actively engage in the business.

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel for the defendants put in evidence the large map referred to by the witness.

2248 (The map referred to was thereupon marked "Defendants' Exhibit (Spence) No. 94, April 22, 1915.")

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. Is this inclusion in one system of alternate or competing routes eculiar to the lines engaged in transcontinental business?

A. It is not. It is quite common to the large systems of the ountry.

Q. You have stated that you wanted to make one correction in your stimony this morning, Mr. Spence.

A. In connection with my statement with reference to passenger ain service in 1885, 1900, and 1914, in response to a question of ounsel, I stated that in 1885 there was through train service from maha to San Francisco, although not from Chicago to San Fran- sco. I should have stated that there was no through train service ither from Chicago to San Francisco or from Omaha to San Fran- sco.

Q. In what year?

A. In 1885; December, 1885. Close connections were made both t Omaha and at Ogden, and every one of the schedules adjusted to make close connection.

249 Q. Was it customary at that stage of railroad development for through trains to be run through junction points?

A. It was not common to operate through equipment, as it is -day.

Q. That kind of through service was up to the standard of through rvice as it generally existed?

A. Yes.

Q. That route has kept up with the procession, has it not, as the rough traffic developed?

A. Yes, sir. As I have shown, two through daily trains in De- mber, 1900, and three through daily trains in December, 1914, were n.

Q. Do you recall the exact date when through service in the way of nbroken trains first passed through?

A. I do not.

Mr. BLAIR. The witness is yours.

Cross-examination by Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. Mr. Spence, you recall the request which was made last July y petitioner's counsel for certain statistics from the railroad?

A. Yes.

250 Q. I refer to the request which eventually resulted in your furnishing petitioner's Exhibits 43 to 58, and you so under- and me?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall that that request defined the eastern territories in o sections: One, the Atlantic seaboard territory, and the other the territory west of the Atlantic seaboard territory and east of the Mi souri River, and north of a line?

A. Yes.

Q. Was the question of getting up the statistics from your reco with reference to those territories taken up with you?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you the author of the suggestion that instead of that li territory which I have last defined, there should be substituted wi you have called the Middle West territory?

A. Yes.

Q. At the time the requests were made, were your statistics alre compiled for that Middle West territory?

A. No.

2251 Q. In order to get the various statistics for that territory became necessary to refer to your original details of shipme from and to that territory?

A. Yes.

Q. What was the reason which influenced you to suggest the Mid West territory, as you have defined it on the exhibits, for the terri defined in the request?

A. I had two reasons. The first reason was because it was my c ception, as the result of some experience, of what I thought the p tioner's counsel desired. In view of the extent to which the requ were confined to traffic via El Paso, it seemed to me that the R Island, operating directly through El Paso, ought to be included the traffic, and that petitioner's counsel wanted to include it, in a ing "via El Paso."

The second reason was that it conformed to my proposed prepa
tion of statistics to show exactly what petitioner's counsel appare was seeking, the relation of traffic via El Paso to that via Ogden.

Q. Do these statistics which have been produced with reference that Middle West territory include or exclude traffic taken 2252 or laid down by the Rock Island route between the north boundary of Oklahoma, the point selected [indicating on m and Omaha?

A. They include that.

Q. They include that. The territory selected by you as Mid West territory included the traffic taken up or laid down in the wh of Nebraska and Wyoming and a large part of Kansas?

A. No; it included all traffic taken up or laid down on the R Island line between the southern boundary of Kansas and St. P

Q. That is, it included in the El Paso tonnage that which have just mentioned?

A. Yes.

Q. By the selection of this Middle West territory there was included in the Ogden figures the traffic taken up or laid down in Wyoming and Nebraska and the northwestern part of Kansas?

A. The Ogden figures include exactly the same territory as the El Paso figures in traffic.

Q. Do you mean by that that they include that territory?

253 A. They include all traffic picked up or laid down by the Rock Island between the southern boundary of Kansas and St. Paul and east thereof.

Mr. BLAIR. Nothing west of it?

The WITNESS. No. The statistics of traffic via Ogden include the same originating and destinating territory as the traffic via El Paso.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. Just what traffic west of the Missouri River is included in the Ogden figures as part of the Middle West territory, giving it not by comparison with El Paso, but absolutely?

A. As far west as the Rock Island line, from the southern boundary of Kansas to St. Paul, inclusive.

Q. That is, it includes, then, nothing in Nebraska?

A. I will have to look at the Rock Island lines. [After examining memoranda.] The exhibits define in greater detail the points on the Rock Island through which the line is drawn. It embraces all points in and east of the line of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific, extending from the Kansas-Oklahoma State line via McFarland and Belleville, Kansas, and Des Moines, Iowa, to St. Paul, Minnesota.

254 Q. Then is it correct to say that in Middle West territory, referring now to Ogden figures, is included nothing west of the Missouri River except that freight which is picked up and laid down on the Rock Island line?

A. Yes; between that and the Missouri River.

Q. Or east thereof?

A. Yes.

Q. That territory which you selected and defined as Middle West territory was, to your mind, the competitive territory as between the Ogden and El Paso gateways, so far as the eastern end was concerned, and not considering Atlantic seaboard territory now?

A. It embraced the territory from and to which traffic could be reached by Ogden or by El Paso.

Q. And in that sense, competitive territory?

A. Yes.

Q. The Atlantic seaboard territory, as an eastern origin, was obviously a competitive territory as between the Ogden and the El Paso routes?

A. The Atlantic seaboard territory was competitive between the Ogden and the Sunset routes.

Q. And it was also competitive between the Ogden route and the El Paso route by the Sunset line?

2255 A. An alternate route existed via El Paso by connection with eastern lines.

Q. And in that way that territory was a competitive territory as between the two gateways?

A. If that is the result of that statement.

Q. It is the result of that statement, is it not?

A. The result of that statement is that neither the line west of El Paso nor the line west of Ogden can alone compete for that traffic. The line west of Ogden, in connection with the several lines east of Ogden, compete for that traffic, and the line west of El Paso, in connection with the several lines east thereof, also compete for that traffic.

Q. Take, for example, the line made up of the Central Pacific, Union Pacific, the Chicago & North Western and the New York Central, and the lines made up of the Southern Pacific to El Paso, the Rock Island—using that to include the Rock Island and El Paso & Southwestern to Chicago, and the New York Central to New York—those are competitive routes for the entire Atlantic seaboard territory?

A. They are. They are engaging in the traffic.

Q. And are competitive in that sense?

2256 A. Well, it depends on what you call a real competitor.

Q. They are two practicable, and not merely theoretical routes between those two territories?

A. Yes.

Q. And in that sense—in the actual operation—are competitive?

A. They may be said to be competitors in a degree; that is, distinguishing between successful and unsuccessful competitors. One is a long route and the other is a short one.

Q. Would you call the competition between those two routes active?

A. Yes.

Q. And substantial?

A. Yes.

Q. And to some extent successful, so far as the Rock Island is concerned?

A. Successful in a degree, as the statistics show.

Q. And it is a substantial degree?

A. Well, by percentages it is substantial, but small.

Q. The El Paso route, made up of the Southern Pacific and the Rock Island, is a substantial and large competitor for Middle West business with California against the Ogden route?

2257

A. It has a substantial and large business between the Middle West and southern California.

Q. Do you mean by that to say that it is not large for central and northern California?

A. Judged by percentages, as shown by the statistics, it is not large.

Q. On Exhibit No. 62 you have compared the Ogden tonnage for Atlantic seaboard with all other territory, showing eastbound, for Atlantic seaboard 20.6 per cent, and for other territory 79.4 per cent. The 100 per cent, according to my understanding, includes all Southern Pacific movements, wherever originating, which pass through Ogden?

A. Yes.

Q. What is comprised in "other territories"?

A. All territories except Atlantic seaboard territory.

Q. That includes all that you have stated as Middle West territory, and some besides?

A. Yes.

Q. The figure against "Other territories" is 592,588 tons. Of that, am I right that 368,975 tons go to Middle West territory?

A. That is correct.

2258 Q. Have you any statistical information as to where the remaining 223,000, approximately, tons goes.

A. I have no statistical information, but I can tell you where it goes.

Q. What is the general distribution?

A. All over the territory west of the Rock Island, to and from all points on the Southern Pacific along the line of Texas and Louisiana; everything south of the northern boundary of Arkansas and south of the Ohio River.

Q. Is the 97th meridian of longitude the recognized line in defining what is and what is not transcontinental freight?

A. The Colorado gateway is Denver, Pueblo, Colorado Springs, and Trinidad. Then it runs down to El Paso and crosses the Santa Fe at Albuquerque.

Q. That is more nearly the 105th meridian, is it not?

A. I do not know. That is the boundary.

Q. That 223,000 tons has such a delivery that it is not, in a practical sense, competitive through El Paso. Am I right?

A. No; it is not, in a practical sense. It is possible to make 2259 routes by which through rates apply; for example, into this territory west of the Rock Island, business can be handled via Deming and El Paso over the Santa Fe or by the Rock Island and Fort Worth & Denver City to Denver.

Q. Does a substantial amount move that way?

A. The southern California movement moves quite a little the way; not a great deal from San Francisco.

Q. That is, roughly speaking, is it not thirty per cent of the total eastbound Southern Pacific traffic?

A. Via Ogden?

Q. Via Ogden; yes.

A. Approximately.

Q. Assuming, for the time being, that that thirty per cent should be said not to go into territory which, practically speaking, is competitive, then the total Southern Pacific tonnage going through Ogden is, to the extent of seventy per cent of it, tonnage which goes into territory as to which the El Paso gateway is a competitive gateway?

A. That share of the business routed via Ogden goes to points that it is practicable to reach by El Paso.

Q. And in that sense seventy per cent of the Southern Pacific eastbound Ogden tonnage goes into territory as to which the El Paso gateway is competitive?

2260 A. The gateway is open and is in position to take the traffic.

Q. And in that sense it is competitive?

A. It is competitive to the extent of its ability.

Q. And for all of that territory where that seventy per cent of freight goes there are joint through rates published?

A. Yes.

Q. Both ways?

A. Yes.

Q. Referring to the same exhibit, No. 62 of the defendants, and the westbound tonnage, your figure for "other territories" is 549,009 tons. Is it true that 259,648 of those tons are from what you have defined as "Middle West territory"?

A. 259,648 tons?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes.

Q. This leaves 289,361 tons moved through Ogden westward to be accounted for from territory other than Atlantic seaboard or Middle West territory?

A. 289,361 tons.

2261 Q. And that is approximately forty-seven per cent of the Southern Pacific's total westbound Ogden tonnage?

A. No.

Q. Is not that right?

A. This, other than Middle West, is 289,361 tons?

Q. Yes.

A. With a total of 549,009?

Q. No; the total was 617,925.

A. Oh, yes. It is somewhat less than forty-seven per cent.

Q. To make it perfectly clear, right at this point in the record, the tal of all westbound Ogden Southern Pacific tonnage is 617,925?

A. Yes.

Q. And it is that figure upon which you just based that forty-six lus per cent?

A. Yes.

Q. And the remaining fifty-three per cent of all the Southern Pacific Ogden westbound tonnage is from territories as to which the El Paso gateway is competitive with the Ogden gateway?

A. The El Paso gateway—the El Paso route—is engaged in competition as to all that territory.

Q. It appears from the figures which you have had prepared that e eastbound tonnage through El Paso from all points west of Ogden nd El Paso moved by the Southern Pacific is, to the Atlantic seaoard, 163,180 tons; to the Middle West territory, 271,897 tons. low much tonnage additional to those two figures is moved by the outhern Pacific eastward through El Paso?

A. I believe that is all the tonnage moved eastward through l Paso to those territories.

Q. I said to all territories.

A. You combined two statements; one to the Atlantic seaboard, d the other to the Middle West.

Q. What I mean to ask you, if I did not do so, is, What eastbound nnage is moved via the Southern Pacific through El Paso, in addion to these two items? Of course you understand that in all these estions I am referring to your year ending June 30, 1914.

A. Whatever eastbound tonnage had destination in territory her than Middle West, as described in one statement, or Atlantic aboard, as described in the other.

Q. Have you that figure?

A. I have not.

Q. Has it been made up, that you know of?

A. I think not.

Q. The two figures stated amount, you will observe, to 435,077 tons. n you, from your stock of general information, tell me anything out the number of tons moved by the Southern Pacific eastward rough El Paso during that period, additional to these figures?

A. I can not.

Q. Have you not any idea of your total annual eastbound El Paso vement?

A. No. I do not know of any such statistics that are kept.

Q. But have you not your total Southern Pacific annual eastbound vement through all gateways?

A. I do not think we have. I do not know of any such statistics.

Q. And have you no idea whatever of what the gross figure is?

A. No.

Q. As a practical matter, what are the territories, other th 2264 Atlantic seaboard and Middle West, through which the Sou ern Pacific moves freight in essential quantities thro El Paso eastward?

A. From northern and central California to the territory wh
I have described once before, I think, south of the northern bou ary of Oklahoma and Arkansas.

Q. Is that a heavy tonnage?

A. Yes; there is a good deal of dried fruit, canned goods, a wine. One of the largest wine destinations in the country is N Orleans; all the consumption of California products down in th country.

Q. The eastbound tonnage through El Paso moved by the So ern Pacific in a year to territories other than the Middle West ter tory, as defined, and the Atlantic seaboard territory, would undou edly exceed 100,000 tons, would it not?

A. I really could not say. I have no idea.

Q. Could you say that it did not exceed 200,000 tons?

A. No.

Q. Is not this the kind of a matter that you have to deal with the ordinary course of planning your business and method 2265 A. Yes; but not necessarily with the segregation of desti tion territories that you are endeavoring to ascertain.

Q. The 435,077 tons eastbound through El Paso to Atlantic s board territory and Middle West territory all go to the territory to which the Ogden gateway is competitive?

A. Both routes are open to engage in that traffic.

Q. And in that sense the Ogden gateway is competitive for it?

A. If you please.

Q. Well, regardless of my pleasure, but simply as a fact.

A. As I said before, it is competitive in the degree that a w line, a long line, can be competitive with a short line.

Q. To what do you refer as the weak long line?

A. Any line operating through a gateway of the southern lines

Q. From the schedules which you have produced it appears the Southern Pacific El Paso westbound movement includes 10 tons from the Atlantic seaboard and 269,970 tons from the Mi West territory, or a total of 375,778 tons. All of that El P 2266 Southern Pacific westbound movement is from territory which the Ogden gateway is competitive, is it not?

A. No; it includes New Mexico and Arizona and points ea Banning, California.

Q. I will ask to have the question read.

(The reporter read the question as above recorded.)

The WITNESS. I say no.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. The Atlantic seaboard territory, as a place of origin, is a territory as to which the Ogden gateway is reasonably and practically competitive for all California, Nevada, and southwestern Oregon destinations, is it not?

A. Nevada, California north of Mojave and Santa Barbara, and southwestern Oregon destinations.

Q. Prior to the opening of the San Pedro route, in 1905, did westbound traffic, to any extent, from Atlantic seaboard territory move through Ogden into southern California?

A. I think not.

Q. The opening of the San Pedro route has had no effect upon the comparative movement, then, into southern California as between Ogden and El Paso; is that right?

2267 A. Prior to the opening of the San Pedro route, of course the Union Pacific had no other route by which to send any southern California traffic that it might secure, nor had the Denver & Rio Grande, except the route via Ogden to Sacramento. Since the opening of the San Pedro route their entire strength has been thrown to the San Pedro line.

Q. Was the movement of the Union Pacific or the Denver & Rio Grande or other lines through Ogden to southern California before the opening of the San Pedro route substantial?

A. It was not large, because of the long haul; but to whatever extent the Union Pacific's influence could be exerted, either on the shipper or the consignee, or the Denver & Rio Grande's influence, or other connections, the business was influenced that way.

For example, take citrus fruit from southern California. Whatever they wished to start to markets up in Utah or Colorado, with possible reconsignment eventually, they sent up via Sacramento and Ogden. To-day they can send that traffic via the Salt Lake route. The building of the line changed those conditions.

Q. Would you call the movement through Ogden, influenced by the Union Pacific or the Missouri and allied lines, or otherwise, 2268 from Atlantic seaboard territory to southern California, before the opening of the San Pedro route, substantial or negligible?

A. I would not be able to deal with it in figures I do not think I ever saw any. At that time I probably would not see any.

Q. I do not mean to commit you at all to anything like exact figures, but was it worth talking about or was it trifling? Was it substantial or was it negligible?

A. The main part of the traffic to southern California moved by the Santa Fe and via the southern route. What share the Ogden route secured I really do not know.

Q. It was more or less negligible, was it not?

A. I could not say without the figures.

Q. What you have just said with reference to the Atlantic seaboard freight moving into southern California through Ogden would apply equally well, would it, to the Middle West freight moving into southern California through Ogden, or is there a distinction to be made?

A. No; I think the same general conditions prevail.

Q. I call your attention to defendants' Exhibit No. 77: The figures in the schedule against southern California mean that portion 2269 of southern California lying northwest of a line drawn across the State at Banning and southeast of a line drawn across the State from Santa Barbara through Mojave?

A. Yes; southern California as shown in the statement is as you have described it.

Q. The intention of those figures was to bring out, was it not, the portion of the El Paso and Ogden tonnage which originated or was destined in the portion of southern California which is within the range of the joint rates through Ogden, but beyond what, in your judgment, would move through Ogden. Is that correct?

A. Yes. They cover the territory that could only be reached by the Central Pacific through the use of the Southern Pacific rails.

Q. Well, was that the occasion for making that division?

A. The occasion for making the division was to lay the foundation for the elimination from the statistics of southern California and Oregon business, for which the Central Pacific is, under existing conditions, not a natural route.

Q. In choosing Mojave as the northern boundary of that territory rather than Goshen, you must have had in mind something 2270 other than the necessity of using the Central Pacific rails, did you not?

A. We had in mind the territory through which the connections of the Central Pacific east of Ogden solicit the traffic and route the traffic through Ogden and the Central Pacific.

Q. That was not, primarily, on account of the need of Southern Pacific rails to complete the haul, was it?

A. It was a combination of the two circumstances. We probably included the Central California business routed by the Southern Pacific very liberally. Part of that must be reached by Southern Pacific rails.

Q. Was not the existence of the Tehachapi Pass one of the things that play a part in selecting Mojave as the northern boundary for this particular compilation, rather than selecting Goshen?

A. No. The line was drawn just as I have told you the solicitation line was drawn, that the Southern Pacific solicitors of traffic from and to territory north of Mojave and Santa Barbara, picked up or laid down in the Middle West via the Ogden route, and the Union Pacific and Denver & Rio Grande, Chicago & North Western, Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul and other connections likewise 2271 solicit that traffic via that route. They solicit the traffic south of the Tehachapi Mountains via the Salt Lake route.

Q. That policy had no relation to the fact that Southern Pacific rails were needed particularly to reach below Mojave, did it?

A. No; because the policy of solicitation treats the Southern Pacific and Central Pacific rails as one system.

Q. The San Pedro route does not affect the situation appreciably north of Mojave, does it?

A. Not freight traffic.

Q. What was the occasion, on defendants' Exhibit No. 77, for setting out the Oregon east and west bound tonnage through the two gateways?

A. Substantially the same reasons as for eliminating southern California.

The Union Pacific and its connections solicit all of the Oregon traffic via Portland, and the Central Pacific has no connection east of Ogden with which to make it an effective route.

Q. Is this item on defendants' Exhibit No. 77 of Oregon 7,533 tons in part El Paso tonnage and in part Ogden tonange?

A. Yes.

2272 Q. So far as it is Ogden tonnage, does it pass through Roseville?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know what portion of that 7,533 tons goes El Paso and what part Ogden?

A. No; because, as I stated, the Ogden tonnage is not representative, because the line was not open for a good part of the year.

Q. Then, for all practical purposes, the 7,533 is El Paso tonnage?

A. Except what moved through Ogden during the time it was open.

Q. A matter of fifteen days, was it?

A. Fifteen days.

Q. And the same is true of the 1,743 westbound?

A. Yes.

Q. That is substantially all El Paso tonnage?

A. Yes.

Q. Those two figures come from territory that, so far as physical conditions are concerned, is territory for which the Ogden gateway is competitive?

2273 A. The Ogden route is open to and from both of these territories, but is not effectively competitive.

Q. The Roseville gateway and the Ogden gateway are now open on all southwestern Oregon freight, are they not?

A. Yes.

Q. Why is Ogden, with that gateway open, not competitive with El Paso, either on an equal plane or a superior one, for all that southwestern Oregon tonnage?

A. Not competitive with El Paso?

Q. Yes.

A. What I intended to convey was that neither of them was effectively competitive. Eighty per cent of the Oregon traffic is moved by Portland.

Q. No part of the eighty per cent moved by Portland is in these figures on defendants' Exhibit No. 77?

A. No.

Q. On this Exhibit 77 these two figures, east and west bound from Ogden, did in fact move down through California over Southern Pacific and Central Pacific lines to El Paso?

A. Yes.

Q. With the Ogden gateway open, by the filing of the joint rates, the Roseville gateway open by the filing of the joint rates, the 2274 Ogden gateway was competitive for every pound of those two items, was it not?

A. It was, in so far as those items were competitive freight. The westbound item includes material and supplies for affiliated railroads of the Southern Pacific in Oregon, which was routed via El Paso or some gateway east thereof, to minimize the cost of transportation paid to foreign lines.

Q. Territorially, the gateway was competitive?

A. Yes.

Q. For all of those items?

A. Yes; the rates are now in effect. The Southern Pacific is responsible for having restored that competition. The gateway was closed.

Q. Did the Southern Pacific Company participate in the closing of that gateway?

A. The Southern Pacific Company did not have any power to resist it. It responded to "its master's voice."

Q. Do you recall that the only time heretofore in this record that expression "responded to its master's voice" was used was when Mr. Herrin used it?

A. I had not seen that in the record. It must be a good expression if Mr. Herrin used it.

2275 Q. That is, there was a coordination of thought between you two on that subject?

A. Naturally.

Q. It was the officers of the Southern Pacific Company, as officers of the Southern Pacific Company, that participated in closing that gateway?

A. By direction of a joint officer of the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific.

Q. That joint officer being then the president of the Southern Pacific Company?

A. Or the director of traffic.

Q. And the subordinates in the employ of the Southern Pacific Company obeyed the direction, because they recognized it as the direction of the superior Southern Pacific officer?

A. No; as the direction of the joint officer of the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific.

Q. Returning now from the little excursion on which you are responsible for inviting me: With the Roseville gateway open and the Ogden gateway open, on whomever may rest the praise or the blame for doing it, all of those items against Oregon on defendants' Exhibit No. 77 are items for which the Ogden gateway is competitive territorially?

A. Yes.

2276 Q. And in that respect they differ from the items against southern California on the same schedule?

A. No.

Q. Are those items on the same schedule against southern California items for which the Ogden gateway is competitive?

A. The Ogden gateway is open to this southern California business as it is open to the Oregon business.

Q. And practically competitive?

A. But not effectively.

Q. Practically but not effectively?

A. Yes.

Q. The exhibit of which we have just been speaking, defendants' Exhibit No. 77, had reference to Atlantic seaboard freight, you notice, either east or west. Exhibit No. 78 has reference to Middle West territory freight east or west, but is in other respects the same as Exhibit No. 77. That is correct, is it not?

A. Yes.

Q. And all that you have just said with reference to the Ogden gateway, as applied to Exhibit No. 77, applies likewise to the 2277 items of southern California and Oregon on Exhibit No. 79, does it not?

A. Yes; including my statement that the westbound includes a substantial amount of material for the company.

Q. Have any figures been collected of the affiliated companies' freight?

A. No.

Q. That explanation which you have made with reference to affiliated companies has practically no bearing on eastbound freight, has it?

A. No.

Q. How large an item is the westbound freight for affiliated companies?

A. I should say that that item consisted largely of that character of freight, the westbound item.

Q. That is, that Oregon freight?

A. Yes. We had the Portland, Eugene & Eastern Railroad under construction and electrification, and the Ogden route being closed sent it via El Paso.

Q. Did that railroad construction, in your estimate, probably include substantially all of the 10,716 westbound Oregon tons, practically all through El Paso and from the Middle West, and sub-2278 substantially all of the 1,743 westbound tons, Oregon westbound tons, from the Atlantic seaboard?

A. It included substantially all the westbound tonnage from the Middle West, because it would be difficult to induce the shipper to send commercial freight via El Paso to Oregon from Chicago.

Q. All of that freight had to travel, in part, over the rails of the Central Pacific Railroad?

A. Yes.

Q. On defendants' Exhibit No. 79 you have, as moving from what amounts to Nevada and all of California north of the Mojave-Santa Barbara line to Middle West territory 331,218 tons, you observe?

A. Yes.

Q. On your schedule furnished the petitioner of the total movement from west of Ogden and El Paso to the Middle West, eastbound, through Ogden you have 368,975 tons, you observe?

A. Yes.

Q. Perhaps I was a little inaccurate in not calling your attention to this: Am I correct that that item of 331,218 does include any oriental freight that passed through California, through that gateway?

2279 A. Yes.

Q. Returning, then, to the question: What was the origin of the 37,757 tons which moved through Ogden to the Middle West, ut did not come from northern and central California and Nevada nd east thereof to Ogden, or through that territory?

A. Oregon and southern California.

Q. None of it came from Oregon except such as moved in the ifteen days after the opening of the Roseville gateway, did it?

A. No.

Q. Substantially all of it originated in southern California south f the Mojave-Santa Barbara line?

A. Yes.

Q. And that amount is a little more than ten per cent of the total astbound movement to the Middle West through Ogden, as given in Exhibit No. 45–46?

A. The eastbound is a little more than ten per cent?

Q. No; the southern California-Oregon is a little more than ten per cent of the total northern and central and southern California nd Nevada origin?

A. 37,757 tons.

2980 Q. And that is ten per cent of the movement through Ogden—a little over ten per cent?

A. Yes.

Q. That ten per cent from southern California, through Ogden to the Middle West, was tonnage as to which the El Paso gateway was competitive?

A. Yes; but the reasons for its routing via Ogden, as I have stated, were climatic and commercial on the part of the shipper.

Q. With the climatic and commercial conditions, as they were, the Ogden gateway was competitive and successfully competitive as to that ten per cent with the El Paso gateway, was it not?

A. Yes. It owed its success to the difference in climate and commercial conditions.

Q. Those climatic and commercial conditions were those which would have led the traffic over the San Pedro road, preferably to the El Paso gateway, were they not?

A. Yes.

Q. What was the character of that ten per cent of the total going through Ogden which originated in southern California that led to its going by Ogden?

2981 A. Citrus fruit.

Q. As to citrus fruit in southern California, is the Ogden gateway competitive with the El Paso gateway for the Middle West territory and the Atlantic seaboard territory?

A. At a certain season of the year it is to a limited extent.

Q. During what season of the year?

A. The spring.

Q. Spring only?

A. Yes; it is in the spring that they send this fruit north for climatic reasons.

Q. How many months of the spring?

A. It is practically between seasons. When they reach the point where they have to ice it for shipment by either route, it does not cost them any more to ship it via El Paso than it does by Ogden. In the season when they can ship it under ventilation between the cold and the hot weather, they ship it via Ogden, owing to climatic conditions.

Q. In terms of months what would that be, having regard to the usual weather conditions?

A. April or May, I should think.

Q. A couple of months?

2282 A. Yes.

Q. If the citrus fruit traffic moving through Ogden to the Middle West during two months of the year was ten per cent of the total Ogden movement to the Middle West for the whole year, would that mean approximately that during those two months sixty per cent of the Ogden movement to the Middle West from the Southern Pacific was from southern California?

A. Oh, no.

Q. What would be the counteracting feature? If ten per cent for the whole year moved in two months through Ogden from southern California, why was it that it was not sixty per cent of the movement during those months?

A. Because of the absence of the movement during the remaining ten months.

Q. I do not quite follow you. Why would not the absence of the movement during the remaining ten months, the ten per cent moved during the year, rather suggest that sixty per cent of the movement during the two months was from southern California, to make up for the other ten months during which none moved?

A. Now I do not follow you.

2283 Q. What?

A. I do not follow you. You are some mathematician.

Q. Then I will have to start afresh, and see where we divide. It appears that of this class the total movement through Ogden was 368,975 tons. Would that come anywhere near moving equally over the different months?

A. No. That moves chiefly within a couple of months.

Q. Do you quite mean that? Observing the figure that I have called attention to, is not this southern California movement, the Ogden Middle West movement for the whole year, eastbound?

A. Well, that is a seasonal movement. Not only the southern California, but the northern California, the deciduous fruit, moves within short period.

Q. Taking 368,975 as the movement for the year of this kind through Ogden, what is a reasonable estimate of the total movement of this kind through Ogden in April and May, one-sixth of the year?

A. I could not tell you.

Q. Should you think that it would much exceed 40,000 tons?

A. Well, no.

Q. Should you think it would be as much as 100,000 tons?

A. I do not know.

Q. Mr. Spence, do you mean to say that you could not be of any assistance, from your general knowledge of the movement of traffic, as to whether upwards of a quarter of the annual movement through Ogden of this kind was in two months or not?

A. No; because the different kinds of traffic move at different times. Deciduous fruit dies not move in April and May at all.

Q. Do you think it at all probable that this total, ten per cent of this total Ogden movement to the Middle West, which came from southern California, moved in the two months, or in two months?

A. I think it moved within a short period. There are two reasons for sending the things by that route, and one is climatic and the other commercial. One is to send business up through certain markets at which the fruit may be stopped or may be permitted to go on to markets farther east.

Q. Apart from the southern California citrus fruit movement, strongest in April and May, what else, eastbound from California, is conspicuously heavy in April and May?

A. Nothing.

Q. Nothing? Is there much, if any, citrus fruit movement eastbound from California north of Tehachapi?

A. Oh, yes; several thousand cars a year.

Q. Several thousand cars a year. And would they move in April and May?

A. No; they move earlier.

Q. And for the converse reason they consider a part of them go via El Paso?

A. They move in season and according to the season.

Q. They would not move in April or May?

A. No; that movement is earlier than that.

Q. Then the only eastbound traffic of moment in this item through Ogden of 368,975 tons, which was conspicuously heavy in April and May, was this citrus fruit movement from southern California?

A. Oh, I could not say that.

Q. What else was there that would be conspicuously heavy?

A. The lumber and the dried fruit and canned goods move 2286 all the year round. The business that comes in from Asia moves all the year round. Everything moves all the year round except this green fruit.

Q. I say, anything that is conspicuously heavy in April and May.

A. Well, what I mean is that I am not able to say whether these other commodities move heavier in April and May than they do in any other months.

Q. There is nothing in your knowledge of the general situation to indicate that such is the fact?

A. No.

Q. If you take this citrus movement of something like 37,757 tons from the total, you observe that you have a little over 330,000 tons, or precisely 331,218 tons, as shown on your Exhibit No. 77?

A. 331,218 tons.

Q. That figure being reached after we have taken away from the total Ogden-Middle West-Eastern movement the citrus fruit movement from southern California, is there any reason that any of the balance of that 331,218 tons would be particularly excessive in April and May?

A. I have no reason to think that it would or that it would not. I really do not know.

2287 Q. If that movement were divided equally over the months you would have moving in two months 55,000 tons, would you not?

A. No; I would not say it would be that.

Q. 331,000 divided by six?

A. Oh, of this total of 331,218 tons?

Q. That is, after we have deducted the citrus fruit from the total, you have this 331,218 tons?

A. Yes.

Q. So that I say, if that moved equally, that would mean 55,203 tons within two months, would it not?

A. It would leave a difference of 55,203 tons, a substantial part of which moves in two months.

Q. If you assumed that there was, of all other classes than the citrus fruit, at least a pro rata share moving during those two months of the 55,203 plus the citrus fruit from southern California, you would have during those two months moving eastward to Middle West territory through Ogden 93,960 tons, would you not? There would be 55,203 tons plus 37,757 tons of citrus fruit, which gives 92,960.

Mr. BLAIR. Do you mean that moves in any one month?

Mr. McCLENNEN. In two months. The citrus fruit move-288 ment of 37,757 tons would be forty per cent of the total movement during the two months, would it not?

The WITNESS. Approximately, but still only ten per cent of the nnual tonnage.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. But still only ten per cent of the annual tonnage. Is it not air to say that the Ogden gateway is competitive for a substantial mount of southern California freight during certain times of the ear for Middle West territory east bound?

A. It is fair to say that the route is competitive for a substantial hare of the citrus fruit from southern California.

Q. I call your attention to petitioner's Exhibit 43–44, to the eastound tonnage through Ogden to the Atlantic seaboard of 154,229 ons, and to defendants' Exhibit No. 80, eastbound tonnage via Og-len from north of Mojave and Santa Barbara in California, and in Nevada 140,900 tons. From what source did the 13,329 tons come?

A. From southern California?

Q. That was probably a citrus fruit movement, was it?

A. Yes.

289 Q. And was eight plus per cent of the total Ogden movement eastbound to the Atlantic seaboard?

A. Yes.

Q. And was moved presumably in the two months, as you have entioned in the case of the Middle West?

A. Chiefly.

Q. Chiefly. And in like manner was perhaps thirty-two or thirty-hree per cent of the total movement through Ogden to the Atlantic eaboard east during the period when the movement was in prog-ess; that is, April and May of the year?

A. I make the calculation that it is thirty per cent of the move-ent of those two months, but still only eight per cent of the annual onnage.

Q. Of the annual tonnage. Would it be fair to say that the Og-len gateway is competitive for southern California freight, southern California citrus fruit, eastbound to the Atlantic seaboard, to a sub-tantial extent during portions of the year?

Mr. BLAIR. With what?

Mr. McCLENNEN. With the El Paso gateway.

The WITNESS. The Ogden route is competitive for citrus fruit 290 to Atlantic seaboard territory from southern California during certain seasons of the year.

By Mr. McCLENNEN.

Q. And to a substantial extent?

A. To the extent of the percentages that I have stated.

Q. As a traffic matter that is pretty substantial, is it not?

A. Eight per cent is not very substantial.

Q. What would you call the minimum percentage of what was substantial?

A. In this case of which I was speaking I would call it fifty per cent.

Q. Then, all you mean when you speak of the Ogden gateway as not being competitive to a substantial extent for southern California freight, is that it can not control fifty per cent of that traffic?

A. No; I mean that it takes an inappreciable amount, westbound and it takes only this citrus fruit eastbound.

(Whereupon an adjournment was taken until to-morrow, Friday April 23, 1915, at 10.30 o'clock a. m.)

2291 TWENTY-EIGHTH DAY.

ROOM 2506, 165 BROADWAY,
New York City, Friday, April 23, 1915.

The hearing was resumed, pursuant to adjournment, at 10.30 o'clock a. m., before Frank R. Hanna, special examiner.

Present on behalf of the United States: James W. Orr, Esq., Edward F. McClennen, Esq., and Edward E. Gann, Esq., special assistants to the Attorney General.

Present on behalf of the defendants: W. F. Herrin, Esq., J. H. Blair, Esq., and Garret McEnerney, Esq., for the Southern Pacific Company.

2292 LEWIS J. SPENCE, the witness under examination at the taking of adjournment, resumed the stand and testified further as follows:

Cross-examination (continued) by Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. Is it correct to say, Mr. Spence, that in your opinion the territories as to which the Ogden gateway and the El Paso gateway are competitors, in a real and practical sense, are the Middle West territory as you have described it and the Atlantic seaboard territory as you have described it, on the east; and southwestern Oregon, Nevada, California north of a line drawn across the State through Mojave and Santa Barbara, and, as to citrus fruits during a certain portion of the year, California south of that line down to a line drawn across the State through Banning, as the territory on the west?

A. Between all points in the territories that you have described through rates apply via the El Paso route and via the Ogden route, and the line west of Ogden, with its connections east thereof, and the line west of El Paso, with its connections east thereof, afford alternative routes for that traffic, and in that sense are competitive.

2293 Q. And not merely theoretically, but practically, in the movement of substantial volumes of freight?

A. We encourage and facilitate the movement of as much as possible by both gateways.

Q. I was speaking more of what actually did move than of the effort at this moment; and from the territories defined in the question there move through the two gateways substantial volumes of freight, making the gateways competitive in a practical sense and not merely as paper gateways. That is true, is it not?

A. The two through routes are competitive in the practical sense that I have described. The statistics show whether the volume of business is substantial.

Q. And competitive between the east and west territories just described?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you before you now petitioner's Exhibit 47–48 and defendants' Exhibit 63?

A. Yes.

Q. On petitioner's Exhibit 47–48, the eastbound tons, you note, are 163,180?

A. Yes.

2294 Q. And on defendants' Exhibit 63 you notice the eastbound tons are 85,059?

A. Yes.

Q. The first figure being from all of the territory covered by the Southern Pacific Company west of Ogden and El Paso, and the second figure being further defined by the phrase, in the defendants' Exhibit 63, "open to traffic via Ogden gateway". That definition in defendants' Exhibit 63 is what accounts for the difference in those two figures, is it not?

A. Yes.

Q. In arriving at your 85,059 on defendants' Exhibit 63, what territory on the west did you include?

A. In Exhibit 63 we included all points west or northwest of Banning, inclusive.

Q. Does that mean, then, that 78,121 tons destined to Atlantic seaboard territory through El Paso originated between Banning and El Paso?

A. Yes.

Q. Was much of that in California?

A. No. It consists largely of products of the mines from Arizona and New Mexico.

2295 Q. Comparing the same exhibits westbound, you note that the figure for the whole is 105,808 tons, and for the more confined territory, 94,737 tons, leaving a difference of 11,071 tons?

A. Yes.

Q. Was that 11,071 tons pretty much all destined to New Mexico and Arizona?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you the figures which disclose how much of this 85,059 on Exhibit 63 originated north of the Santa Barbara-Mojave imaginary cross-State line?

A. We have it here in one of the statements.

Q. In answer to this question you call my attention to defendants' Exhibit 80?

A. Yes.

Q. Is it true that the item on defendants' Exhibit 80 of 37,166 plus 603, plus 13,362, making 51,131 tons, plus the item on Exhibit 77 of Oregon, 7,533 tons, making a total of 58,664 tons, states the part which originated north of the Santa Barbara-Mojave line, of the 85,059 which appears on Exhibit 63?

A. No.

2296 Q. You mean that the figure which I have just given of 58,664 would require a slight correction by the deduction of such freight from Oregon as passed through Ogden during the fifteen days in which the Roseville gateway was open?

A. Yes.

Q. Then would it be sufficiently accurate for practical purposes to say that of this item of 85,059 eastbound through El Paso, defendants' Exhibit 63 included approximately 58,000 tons which originated in Oregon and California north of an imaginary transverse line drawn through Santa Barbara and Mojave?

A. I do not want to quibble on figures, but without any knowledge of what the Oregon traffic is, I would not want to subscribe to the 58,000 tons. I do subscribe to your previous question that, deducing whatever moved via Ogden——

Q. You mean you do not want to commit yourself on what went through Ogden during those fifteen days?

A. Yes. I do not know.

Q. It necessarily was an inconsiderable amount as compared with the total figure of 58,664, was it not?

A. Well, it would necessarily be about one-twenty-fourth of the natural movement via Ogden.

2297 Q. From Oregon alone?

A. From Oregon alone; yes.

Q. Now, am I right in understanding that to get the westbound tonnage from the Atlantic seaboard through El Paso which was destined north of the Santa Barbara-Mojave imaginary line, and is buried in the item of 94,737 on defendants' Exhibit No. 63, we should add the figures appearing on defendants' Exhibit 80, of 41,762, and 2,174, and 14,546, making 58,482, and such portion of the figure 1,743 on defendants' Exhibit No. 77 as did not move west through Ogden during the last fifteen days of the period?

A. Yes.

Q. The result, then, is that the westbound tonnage from Atlantic seaboard territory to the points north of Santa Barbara-Mojave, through El Paso, was somewhere between 59,000 and 60,000 tons?

A. I would say that it exceeded 58,500 tons.

Q. And did not exceed 60,225 tons?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you before you petitioner's Exhibit No. 49–50, and defendants' Exhibit No. 64?

A. Yes.

2298 Q. Is it true that the difference on the eastbound to Middle West territory, through El Paso, of 271,897 tons, on petitioner's Exhibit 49–50, and 222,325 tons on defendants' Exhibit No. 64, of 49,572 tons, originated between Banning and El Paso?

A. Yes.

Q. And therefore most of it in Arizona and New Mexico?

A. Yes.

Q. On the same exhibits, is it true that the difference between the westbound El Paso-Middle West figure, 269,970 tons, on petitioner's Exhibit 49–50, and 219,246 tons on defendants' Exhibit No. 64, or 50,724 tons, was destined for points between Banning and El Paso?

A. Yes.

Q. And therefore mostly to Arizona and New Mexico?

A. Yes.

Q. Is it true that in order to get the portion which originated north of the Santa Barbara-Mojave imaginary line, and which is buried in the item 222,325 tons on defendants' Exhibit No. 64, we should turn to defendants' Exhibit No. 79 and add the figures 1,244 and 1,177 and 76,777, making a total of 79,198 tons, and should 2299 add to that from defendants' Exhibit No. 78 such portion of the item 1,878 as did not move east through Ogden after the opening of the Roseville gateway during the last fifteen days of the period?

A. That is correct.

Q. So that the figure is somewhere between 80,000 and 81,000 tons?

A. Yes.

Q. That is, there moved from points north of Santa Barbara and Mojave through the El Paso gateway to the Middle West territory, east bound, somewhere between 80,000 and 81,000 tons?

A. Yes.

Q. Is it correct that to get the figure in the reverse direction between the same territories, which is buried in the figure 219,246 on defendants' Exhibit No. 64, we should turn to defendants' Exhibit No. 79 and add the figures 13 and 11,278 and 75,754, making a total of 87,045 tons, and such portion of the figure on defendants' Exhibit No. 78 of 10,716 as did not move west through Ogden during the last fifteen days after the opening of the Roseville gateway?

A. Yes.

Q. If we added the total, it would be 97,761. From 2300 that is it safe to say that the true figure was somewhere between 90,000 and 97,000 tons?

A. Yes.

Q. Then there moved west from Middle West territory through the El Paso gateway to points north of the imaginary line through Santa Barbara and Mojave somewhere between 90,000 and 97,000 tons?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you before you defendants' Exhibit No. 77?

A. Yes.

Q. Yesterday you will recall determining that 13,329 tons, from between the Mojave line and the Banning line, moved through Ogden to Atlantic seaboard territory, which you defined as being citrus fruit traffic [referring to page 2288, et seq. of the record]?

A. Yes.

Q. Am I correct that that 13,329 tons is buried in the figure 41,[illegible] on defendants' Exhibit No. 77?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you before you defendants' Exhibit No. 78?

A. Yes.

2301 Q. Calling your attention to yesterday's testimony, [illegible] 2279, and the figure thereon, 37,757, as that substantially all of which originated in southern California, am I right that that figure is buried in the figure 178,978 on defendants' Exhibit 78?

A. Yes.

Q. Both of your answers as to these east and west figures just discussed may require a little correction, may they not, for such traffic may have moved east or west through Ogden to Oregon during the 15 days after the opening of the Roseville gateway?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you before you defendants' Exhibit No. 65?

A. Yes.

Q. On that statement you have included the east and west tonnage through each gateway between the areas which you have defined this morning as being the areas as to which the two gateways are competitive, have you not?

A. Yes.

Q. If you add the figure 179,796 east and west via El Paso to and from Atlantic seaboard to the figure 441,571 tons east and west El Paso to and from Middle West territory, and the figure 223,145

2302 east and west Ogden tons to and from Atlantic seaboard territory and 628,623 east and west Ogdon tons to and from Middle West territory, it gives you a total of what?

A. 1,473,135 tons.

Q. That was the total east and west tonnage through the two gateways between what you conceive to be the areas as to which the two gateways are competitive?

A. That represents the total tonnage via El Paso and via Ogden.

Q. You mean the total between the territories described?

A. Between the territories that I have described.

Q. If you add from, say, defendants' Exhibit 65, the four items of revenue from the four totals in tons that we have just considered, what was the total Southern Pacific Company's revenue from the movement of this 1,473,135 tons; that is to say, adding $3,101,292 and $4,149,911 and $1,519,772 and $5,028,084?

A. $13,799,059.

Q. Have you before you petitioner's Exhibit 53 and defendants' Exhibit 68-1/2 and defendants' Exhibit 70?

A. Yes.

2303 Q. The westbound tonnage from the Atlantic seaboard to Nevada in the year in question via El Paso was 539 tons and that via Ogden 2,138 tons?

A. Yes.

Q. About twenty per cent moved via El Paso and eighty per cent via Ogden?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you before you defendants' Exhibit 80?

A. Yes.

Q. In that you have subdivided the central and northern California-Atlantic seaboard movement into the different gateways?

A. Yes.

Q. Did substantially all of that Ogden tonnage go over the Union Pacific?

A. Yes.

Q. Since the opening of the Western Pacific the Central Pacific does not get, at Ogden, or deliver at Ogden, much through tonnage from or to the Denver & Rio Grande?

A. A small percentage of the tonnage.

Q. But very small?

A. Well, comparatively speaking, small.

2304 Q. The next three items east and west in the subdivision of defendants' Exhibit No. 80 are subdivisions of the El Paso movement into the Sunset-Gulf routes, either Galveston or New Orleans, and New Orleans all-rail, and to El Paso and other gateways, all-rail?

A. Yes.

Q. In what ways would those items, Atlantic seaboard-New Orleans rail, move between New Orleans and Atlantic seaboard? Would it move over many different routes, or is there any conspicuous example of a rail route over which that moves?

A. There is no conspicuous example.

Q. You distribute that among quite a number?

A. Yes; as the result of the efforts of the various connections.

Q. Does the Southern Pacific Company make any effort on any commodities to work an all-rail movement between the Atlantic seaboard and the Pacific coast through New Orleans?

A. No.

Q. Turning, now, on the same exhibit, to the east and west movement via El Paso and other gateways, which I think will mean substantially other Texas gateways, can you give me any idea of 2305 the portion of those two items that is Rock Island?

A. Not in figures, but in a general statement; the major portion.

Q. What other connection is there worth mentioning that would enter into those items?

A. Kansas City, Mexico & Orient Railroad connections at Alpine, Texas; Missouri, Kansas & Texas, at San Antonio; of the various lines at Houston.

Q. Is that movement, resulting from Atlantic seaboard through El Paso by rail in 13,362 tons east and 14,546 tons west, due to any substantial extent to the efforts of eastern connections of the Rock Island, or is it chiefly due to the Rock Island's own effort?

A. From Atlantic seaboard territory it is due to the joint efforts of the Rock Island and connections.

Q. Do the lines east of Chicago make an effort for El Paso as against Ogden?

A. Such effort as the Rock Island can secure as a reciprocal return for what they may give those connections.

Q. That is, it is no ambition on the part of the eastern lines to put it through El Paso, but simply to do something for the Rock 06 Island in return for what the Rock Island does for them?

A. The eastern line has no interest in sending it through El aso, but derives its long haul to Chicago or St. Louis, whether it es El Paso or whether it goes Ogden or Santa Fe or Missouri acific.

Q. Have you any means of stating how much of those El Paso nd other Texas gateways items originate or are destined north of Iojave?

A. All of them. Are you speaking of defendants' Exhibit No. 80 ow?

Q. I am speaking of defendants' Exhibit No. 80; yes.

A. All of them.

Q. Have you before you defendants' Exhibit No. 79?

A. Yes.

Q. This is for the Middle West, the correlative of defendants' Exhibit No. 80 for the Atlantic seaboard?

A. Yes.

Q. Referring, on defendants' Exhibit No. 79, to the Ogden gateway movement, is that substantially all Union Pacific?

A. Much the largest percentage of it.

307 Q. The next item on that exhibit, via Sunset-Gulf route—does that mean an eastbound tonnage that actually gets on the oat at New Orleans or Galveston, or is that simply a tonnage that tarted out routed via the steamer lines and was changed before it eached the boat?

A. It is tonnage that moved via the steamship lines, by reason of ts having been originally consigned to New York, and having been reconsigned either in transit or upon arrival at New York to these points on the Atlantic seaboard territory.

Q. So that the delivery was made into the Middle West territory by eastern lines drawing it west from New York?

A. Yes.

Q. The next item on defendants' Exhibit No. 79—what are the lines over which the substantial part of those New Orleans rail items moved?

A. I should say it was distributed between all the lines east of New Orleans.

Q. Such as what?

A. The Queen & Crescent route; the Louisville & Nashville; the Illinois Central; the Southern Railway; the Atlanta & West Point; the Western Railway of Alabama.

308 Q. Is the Southern Pacific Company making any effort for the New Orleans gateway on Middle West territory?

A. The Southern Pacific is making its preferential effort for the Ogden route. It does not interfere with or in any way restrict the efforts of its connections to secure business via New Orleans.

Q. Does it make any effort to use any of that business with the Mississippi Valley lines, as you spoke of in connection with the Rock Island and its eastern connections—that is, to route traffic that way in return for getting the valley lines to use the Sunset rails instead of others?

A. Only that much effort that you might find in the total traffic from Texas, Louisiana, New Mexico, and Arizona, and all territory combined, that may be delivered to our connections at New Orleans, which is large.

Q. Does the Southern Pacific Company make any effort to obtain passenger traffic for the Pacific coast from New Orleans?

A. From Atlantic seaboard territory.

Q. It does?

A. Yes.

Q. What are the lines east of New Orleans, for that?

A. The short line to New Orleans is the Pennsylvania
2309 or Baltimore & Ohio to Washington and the Southern Railway and Atlanta & West Point and Louisville & Nashville. That is the shortest route. The passenger can be ticketed via Cincinnati—over any of the trunk lines via Cincinnati—and the line via Cincinnati to New Orleans.

Q. Are any through passengers passed from Cincinnati to New Orleans?

A. There is a daily tourist car from Washington to New Orleans. There is no first-class equipment.

Q. That runs over what road?

A. The Southern Railway.

Q. Any Middle West-Pacific passenger movement through New Orleans would be practically out of the question?

A. It would be simply the result of the passenger's especially wishing to go South, wishing to go through that country for some reason or to visit some point on that line.

Q. Coming, now, to defendants' Exhibit No. 79, to the item of El Paso and other gateways, which we understand to mean other Texas gateways; are those items substantially all Rock Island?

A. No; not substantially all. The largest percentage of the tonnage is Rock Island.

2310 Q. What other substantial route is there?

A. That previously described, the business which is brought to Alpine, Texas, by the Kansas City, Mexico & Orient and to San Antonio by the M., K. & T., and that which is brought to Houston by the several connecting lines east and north thereof.

. Will you repeat comprehensively the commodities which, from ir nature, can not be moved by the split rail and water haul?
. Citrus fruit, deciduous fruit, vegetables, pianos and organs not ackages, earthenware and crockery in bulk, fresh oysters, furni-
, automobiles and other vehicles, all bulk freight such as coal coke, and freight in tank cars, considerable freight that may be ked, but in such light packages that it will not bear rehandling; example, the business of the National Biscuit Company, the kages are so light that they require them to go through in the orig-l car from point of shipment to destination; machinery which is boxed or crated. There are doubtless other articles that I do not ll at the moment.
. You use the term "fresh oysters" to distinguish from canned oysters?
1 A. To distinguish from canned oysters; yes. Fresh oysters move in trainloads from the east to California.
. Are none of these articles which you have just mentioned hand via the Panama routes?
A. Not to my knowledge. They may be, because the Panama te does not involve the transfer that the Sunset Route does at Galton.
. It would, for all points except on the Pacific harbors and the lantic harbors, would it not?
A. It would involve a transfer at New York if it came from the erior, and so would the Sunset Route.
. A transfer from a short haul would not differ particularly, its injurious consequences, from a transfer from a long haul.
uld it?
A. No; but two transfers are more objectionable than one, and ee transfers are more objectionable than two.
. All of these articles which you have mentioned are articles hich can be handled through the Ogden gateway or through the l Paso gateway with rail connections east, are they not?
A. They can be, in so far as the application of rates is con-12 cerned; but no one could persuade the oyster shipper to send freight by any other than the shortest route.
. The articles which you have mentioned, other than eatables, uld all be handled, and are handled, through El Paso in substanl quantities on the rail lines, are they not?
A. The routing via El Paso is entirely practicable on all of them cept the perishable freight.
. What would that fresh-oyster business amount to, in tons, in ear, so far as it is handled by the Southern Pacific Company?
A. I do not know. They are all shipped within a very short riod of time, and they are shipped in train loads, when they are shipped, in order to get quick despatch, I suppose. I do not kn how many cars a year that would amount to.

Q. What is the season?

A. I think it is our oyster season here. They are sent out th for seeding, very largely.

Q. The citrus fruit, deciduous fruit, and vegetable movement practically exclusively eastward, not westward, is it not?

A. Chiefly eastward. Strange to say, citrus fruit 2313 shipped from Florida to California.

Q. The citrus fruit and the deciduous fruit and the veg tables now move in substantial quantities through each gatew Ogden and El Paso?

A. From the entire State; yes.

Q. What is the oriental freight—what kinds? I think silk a teas have been mentioned.

A. I mentioned the principal imports as silk, tea, and matting

Q. What is the westbound freight?

A. I think the largest westbound freight—the largest single ite
I think of—is condensed milk. That is shipped from the Midd West by the Borden Company, from their Middle West factories

Q. Does the tea and the matting as well as the silk take a pass ger schedule?

A. No.

Q. Is it only the silk that takes a passenger schedule?

A. Only the silk, as a rule.

Q. The oriental freight eastbound, other than silk, can be handl then, much as ordinary freight can be handled?

A. If the matting and tea go directly to the Atla 2314 seaboard territory from the Orient, it is handled via S

If it comes through the Pacific ports, it is usually sent Middle West points for storage, and eventually reshipped and d tributed to other territory.

Q. And it can go over any of the rail lines from San Francis the Middle West?

A. I am not sure about the storage arrangements. The stor arrangements and reconsignment arrangements are made by the li on which the storing is undertaken, and the importers have usu made their arrangements directly with those lines and have stored warehouses served by the lines with which they have made th arrangements. I am sure the arrangements do not apply by routes. I am not sure by which ones they do not apply.

Q. Is the eastbound silk movement through Ogden exclusively

A. No.

Q. What other way does that move?

A. Vancouver and Seattle.

3315 Q. Then, limiting it to the silk which arrives in California, is that exclusively by Ogden?

A. That moves exclusively by Ogden.

Q. The Santa Fe has never put in an organization for that?

A. They have apparently never been able to make the time.

Q. Have they sought that business?

A. I presume they have. I do not know. I can not state for them. I presume they have.

Q. Do they run any passenger time freight over the Atchison?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. What is that eastbound silk movement, in volume?

A. I could not tell you from memory what it is, in volume; but it arrives at the Pacific ports, say, at Vancouver or at Seattle or at San Francisco, in lots of ten or twelve or fifteen cars on a ship, and its arrival at either of those ports is anticipated by the railroad putting the equipment there ready to load, and despatched in a special train, practically, as soon as the freight is out of the ship.

3316 Q. Is it a traffic that arrives with regularity?

A. Yes.

Q. And is it a matter of daily, weekly, or monthly arrival, or what is a fair estimate of the periods when a trainload arrives; that is, a short trainload of the kind you have described?

A. I should imagine that a trainload of silk would arrive at one of the three ports, Vancouver, Seattle, or San Francisco, perhaps every sixty days.

Q. The occasion for great expedition in that was originally the Suez competition, was it not?

A. I do not see how the Suez competition could have created the necessity for despatch. My understanding has always been that it was on account of the risk entailed, and the enormous value of the silk, that the practice was inaugurated and became competitive between the Canadian Pacific, the Great Northern, the Northern Pacific, and the Southern Pacific.

Q. Does that mean it was due to the desire of the railroads to get it off their hands as soon as possible?

A. Yes; to get it out of their possession. That is my under-3317 standing of the matter. It has been going on many years.

Q. On page 2160 of your testimony of April 21 you give an item of 122,481 tons. Is that exclusively Southern Pacific Ogden eastbound fruit and vegetables to the Atlantic seaboard?

A. No; that embraces the fresh fruit and vegetables from California to the Atlantic seaboard by the Ogden and El Paso routes.

Q. How is it divided as between the two routes?

A. From that district of Ohio and Indiana that I described in my direct testimony.

Q. Is there much transcontinental movement of coal and 2322 coke?

A. If by "transcontinental movement" you mean California——

Q. I mean defined as you defined it, to California from east of what you call the Colorado gateway and north of the south line extended from that gateway.

A. There is a very considerable movement from Utah and Colorado. There is a movement from Virginia and the eastern part of West Virginia, and some from Pennsylvania. What the total volume is I do not recall.

Q. You would not comparatively speak of it as a large volume of traffic, would you?

A. That which originates where?

Q. East of the Colorado gateway.

A. I would say that there was a considerable tonnage, including that which originates in Colorado. I am not sure whether that is east of the gateway or west. There is a very considerable coal traffic.

Q. Apart from that Colorado movement there is not much, if any, moved from east of the Colorado gateway, is there?

A. When you speak of coal you speak of a commodity, of 2323 course, which you generally consider in very large volumes, but there is quite considerable coal and coke from Virginia from the Pocahontas district and the Virginia district, and from eastern West Virginia, and I think there is some from Pennsylvania and some from Maryland, to California. There is some soft coal and some anthracite coal.

Q. That comes, to a considerable extent, through El Paso?

A. No; I think through Ogden, chiefly.

Q. Would you think there was much divergence between the two figures on the two gateways?

A. I do not know, really. I have never seen the figures on the two gateways. Both gateways are open for the traffic.

Q. The tank-car movement is largely—eastbound—wines, is it?

A. The tank-car movement consists of wines, liquid asphalt, and they ship mineral water in tank cars, and oil. Those are the chief commodities.

Q. Is the great bulk eastbound?

A. Of the wine and asphalt, eastbound. Of the mineral water and oil, westbound.

Q. You have some arrangement, have you not, with some 2324 tank-car lines to ship wine to New Orleans and barrel it there?

A. We have tried some of that. I am sorry to say it has not been effective in meeting water competition.

Q. When was that special attempt to meet water competition inaugurated?

A. Last summer, I think.

Q. Do you remember what the rate was?

A. Fifty-five cents.

Q. That was fifty-five cents via the Sunset-Gulf route, with a barreling in transit privilege at New Orleans?

A. At New Orleans.

Q. Was the barrel included in the paid weight?

A. In the paid weight?

Q. Yes.

A. According to my recollection, there was a specific provision in the tariff that covered that. I think it was stated that way. It was considered in making the rate, I know. The tariff, however, would speak for itself. It is somewhat specific, and makes plain just what it is intended to cover.

2325 Q. It resulted in a much more favorable rate than the all-rail rate?

A. The all-rail rate was seventy-five cents.

Q. That is, it was seventy-five cents against fifty-five cents?

A. Yes.

Q. The barrels originate largely in the eastern part of the country?

A. No; in Louisiana and Arkansas.

Q. In Louisiana and Arkansas?

A. That was the purpose of the arrangement, to bring the barreling of the wine in close proximity to the staves. They had been shipping staves to California, and they expected they would be able to establish some business by that arrangement, as against the sea route, by saving the cost of transportation of the staves, and in that way bring the two costs of transportation closer together.

Q. That would result in a saving to the shipper on his barrel cost?

A. Yes.

(Whereupon a recess was taken until two o'clock p. m.)

2326 AFTER RECESS.

LEWIS J. SPENCE, the witness under examination at the taking of recess, resumed the stand and testified further as follows:

Cross-examination (continued) by Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. Mr. Spence, will you please give the method by which you arrived at 122,481 tons being 55.8 per cent, as appears on page 2160 of the record?

A. The total traffic via El Paso and Ogden during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1914, from points in California to Atlantic seaboard territory aggregated 219,384 tons, of which the 122,481 tons which constituted the fresh fruit and vegetables represented 55.8 per cent.

Q. Have you there that 219,384 divided as between Ogden and El Paso?

A. No; it was compiled to get this percentage.

Q. You have referred to petitioner's Exhibit No. 22, page 61 whereon the percentage of traffic carried via the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe, there described as the "Atlantic & Pacific", between 2327 October 1, 1884, and December 31, 1885, is stated as 20.34 per cent. That percentage, you understand, do you not, to be a percentage of east and west bound combined?

A. Yes; through traffic.

Q. There is nothing on the exhibit, is there, from which to determine how much of that originated or was laid down north of Mojave?

A. No.

Q. Have you any means outside of the exhibit of stating statistically or forming any valuable estimate as to how much of that was north of Mojave?

A. I have no means of stating statistically how much of it was north of Mojave, but I was in the field and actively encountered the competition of the Santa Fe for northern and central California traffic.

Q. You were in the eastern field?

A. Yes.

Q. And the effort of the Santa Fe was exerted chiefly upon the eastern end, whether it was for the western movement or the eastern movement, was it not?

A. The effort was not entirely confined to the eastern end. The success may have been.

2328 I would like to say, with reference to my answer, that I was I was in the field during the several years preceding 1899 that were covered by the original question, not in the field on the date of the exhibit.

Q. That is, your comment upon being in the field has more reference to the period near to 1899 than it does to the precise period covered by the exhibit, which ended with the end of 1885?

A. It would include the early nineties.

Q. Was there much southern California traffic in 1885?

A. It was not very large; no. The citrus fruit industry had not developed at that time.

Q. How about the westbound traffic to that region?

A. Well, it would bear a corresponding ratio in importance to the eastbound, for the reason that the population had not at that time increased.

Q. In reading this exhibit, petitioner's Exhibit No. 22, from which this percentage 20.34 is taken, you have assumed the 100 per cent to be California traffic, have you not?

A. Whatever the exhibit shows. I described it as through transcontinental traffic, I think. I do not think there is any doubt about its having been confined to California, because at that time 2329 there was no connecting rail line north of California.

Q. Had the Arizona or New Mexico traffic come to an appreciable amount in 1885?

A. It never moved via Mojave.

Q. You will observe that this exhibit does not indicate a Mojave——

A. Yes; it indicates the Atlantic & Pacific, which went via Mojave.

Q. Was there not any access to the Atlantic & Pacific except through Mojave?

A. No.

Q. That is, neither Arizona nor New Mexico freight for the Atlantic or Middle West could get on to it?

A. No. The Santa Fe would have to take that freight through Deming. I think, too, that exhibit shows that the tonnage represented by this percentage was Atlantic & Pacific-Southern Pacific tonnage.

Mr. BLAIR. It does.

The WITNESS. It indicates that it chiefly moved north of Mojave.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. Coming, now, to the present time, have you any means of 2330 giving, in approximate figures, the amount of tonnage originating on Southern Pacific rails and delivered to the Santa Fe in California, and destined to Middle West or Atlantic seaboard points?

A. I could give you an idea of the total traffic from Southern Pacific points delivered to the Santa Fe at California junctions, destined to all transcontinental territory; that is to say, to points east of Albuquerque, which is accessible to our longer-haul routes. For example, we can take freight via El Paso to any point on the Santa Fe east of Albuquerque, and Albuquerque is the defined transcontinental line.

Q. Your answer, under those circumstances, would include some freight for Atchison local delivery?

A. It would include no freight for which we can not compete via El Paso.

Q. But would include a substantial amount of freight that would eventually be short-hauled by the Atchison at the delivering end?

A. The Atchison, extending all the way to Chicago. All points west of Chicago would come within your last statement. They would be short-hauled unless they hauled it all the way to Chicago.

Q. Can you state, correspondingly, the tonnage from the 2331 Atlantic seaboard and the Middle West territory long-hauled over the Atchison to California junctions and delivered on Southern Pacific rails?

A. No.

Q. You have not the westbound figure?

A. No.

Q. What is the eastbound figure for the tonnage as you have described it in your answer?

A. During the last fiscal year about 90,000 tons.

Q. Have you any knowledge of how much of that went east of the Mississippi River?

A. No; that tonnage is compiled for the purpose of ascertaining what traffic originating on our lines, destined to points that we would like to haul via El Paso and can haul via El Paso, has gone to our connections at a short-haul junction.

Q. What are the conspicuous commodities in that tonnage?

A. Everything which that section of California produces.

Q. Is there any large amount of fruit in that tonnage?

A. Yes.

Q. Would that be the largest item?

A. Not necessarily green fruit. It would include dried 2332 fruit, canned goods, wine, asphalt, beans, barley, and green fruit.

Q. That delivery to the Atchison at the California junctions is due to the shipper's routing?

A. Yes.

Q. From your general knowledge of the soliciting situation, can you say whether that routing is or is not largely influenced by the efforts of the Atchison with the eastern consignees?

A. No; I could not say, with respect to that particular traffic, how much was due to the influence or control of the consignees and how much was due to the influence or control of the shippers. The Atchison has the same access to the shipper as it has to the consignee, and the same opportunity to solicit him. It is in a position to afford him facilities, to put its equipment in, and all that sort of thing.

Q. Has that tonnage, short-hauled by the Southern Pacific and hauled from California east by the Atchison, been a more or less constantly increasing amount?

A. Undoubtedly so.

Q. The Atchison service has been an improving service, has it not?

2333 A. Yes.

Q. When, should you say, did the Atchison service reach an equality with the service rendered by the Sunset Route or the Ogden route?

A. In the early nineties.

Q. Do you remember when it was that the Atchison perfected its arrangements for the billing and through trackage of cars to the Atlantic seaboard?

A. No; I do not remember. The line was not completed into Chicago until 1888.

Q. Yes.

A. I think it was sometime after that.

Q. It was a pioneer in that, was it not?

A. I am not sure about that. Through billing in the early days was a very uncommon thing. Whether the Santa Fe put it in ahead of other transcontinental lines I could not say. It was taken up by one line after another, not only in transcontinental business, but all over the United States.

Q. When did the Southern Pacific begin to through bill through Ogden to the Atlantic seaboard?

A. I could not state from memory accurately, but I should say in the early nineties.

2334 Q. When did it begin to run through package cars to the Atlantic seaboard?

A. I could not tell you that from memory, but they have been run for a great many years.

Q. Did they precede the through billing?

A. I do not think they did.

Q. Through freight cars for carload lots have been moved ever since the railroads had junctions?

A. Originally to a limited extent. It was not a common practice, as it is in recent years. Each railroad used to hold on to its own equipment and transfer at the junctions; and retained its own equipment, and did not allow it out of its possession.

Q. When did through cars for carload lots become the practice through Ogden?

A. I could not say with any degree of accuracy. That was one of the gradual developments not only there but throughout the United States. That is, on a small number of through cars that might be run, more and more were run every year. That has been a gradual transition.

Q. It was really one of the competitive elements of the situation that were growing?

2335 A. Growing more acute all the time.

Q. The Santa Fe's most effective competition with the Southern Pacific was during the nineties, with reference to southern California, being in opposition to the Santa Fe route, was it not?

A. With reference to southern California?

Q. Yes.

A. In the early nineties; yes.

Q. The presence of the Atchison, with the improving service thereon, was a spur to the Southern Pacific to improve its service, was it not?

A. The spur was applied the other way. The Southern Pacific had supplied a service superior to anything that had ever been given across the continent, and the Santa Fe was spurred to improve its service to meet the competition.

Q. At some time the Ogden route—and by the Ogden route I mean from San Francisco to New York that way—was spurred on to an improvement in its service, was it not?

A. Especially the eastern lines in that route, who had been in the service for many years.

Q. The presence of the Atchison's competition had an effect on that improvement in service, did it not?

2336 A. It may have had some effect, but the improvement was mainly stimulated by the Sunset service.

Q. The Sunset service was, at least up to 1901, the pet service of the Southern Pacific Company?

A. It was the route by which it sought to secure the Atlantic seaboard traffic.

Q. It was the route on which it was putting out its great efforts to make the service so effective that the freight would move that way, was it not?

A. I do not know that the Southern Pacific exerted any more effort on the Sunset Route than it did on its part of the line west of Ogden, but it was unable to coordinate the efforts of the lines between Ogden and the Atlantic seaboard territory.

Q. It succeeded in coordinating the efforts of the Mississippi Valley line, so far as Middle West territory was concerned, did it not?

A. Between Cincinnati and New Orleans?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes.

Q. It made an effort to secure that coordination, did it not?

2337 A. Those lines made the effort themselves. They were hungry for the business and sought the business.

Q. Were they any hungrier for the business than were the lines operating to Omaha?

A. East of Omaha?

Q. Operating westward to Omaha?

A. No; I do not think that they wanted the business any worse than the Union Pacific did.

Mr. BLAIR. What was that question?

Mr. MCCLENNEN. I am referring to the lines from Cincinnati, if you please, to Omaha.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. Were not the lines in that region as anxious to get business to Omaha as the Mississippi Valley lines were to get business to New Orleans?

A. I never saw any manifestation of it.

Q. You never did?

A. No.

Q. Do you know personally of the effort, if any, made by the Southern Pacific to get coordination with those lines between Omaha and points east of Omaha in Middle West territory?

2338 A. In the usual course of events, that effort would be made by the Union Pacific with its immediate connections east.

Q. Did the Southern Pacific ever, so far as you know, attempt to organize that coordination?

A. I do not know. I would not know.

Q. You did know of the efforts that were put forth to improve the Sunset service?

A. I was at one end of it; yes.

Q. Is it true that, in your judgment, the Sunset Route would never have been able to secure a substantial share of the traffic between Atlantic seaboard territory and California if the Southern Pacific's short line had been to Los Angeles, we will say, or to the southern boundary of California, and its longer haul to Ogden? Or, in other words, if the influence of the Southern Pacific upon that traffic had been exerted in favor of the Ogden haul the Sunset Route could never have made the progress that it made in getting business?

A. That is true.

Q. Was not, then, the progress of the Sunset Route in its outstripping of the Ogden route due not merely to the lack of coordination of the eastern railroad connections of the Ogden route, but to the intense effort of the Southern Pacific Company to improve and secure the use of its Sunset haul, with the correlative relaxation of effort by the Southern Pacific Company over its Ogden route?

2339

A. It was attributable to the operation of the line under management between California and New York.

Q. The Atchison, as soon as it took up the effort to induce through business across the country, succeeded with rapid strides, did it not?

A. It succeeded with gradual strides. It was a process of years for them to accomplish the desired result.

Q. Its carrying trade, its through business, increased year by year with considerable rapidity after it came under the reorganization management, after 1895, and got into San Francisco in 1899, did it not?

A. What do you mean by "rapidity"?

Q. I mean barring the effect of the business depression upon freight carriage, that the Atchison takings in each year were substantially in excess of those of the preceding year?

A. I think so.

Q. When you said, in answer to an earlier question, that 2340 was true that if the influence of the Southern Pacific Company upon that traffic had been exerted in favor of the Ogden haul the Sunset Route could never have made the progress that it made in getting business, you meant to indicate, did you not, that the influence of the Southern Pacific Company upon that business had not in fact, been exerted in favor of the Ogden haul?

A. No; I meant that the influence had been exerted in favor of the Sunset haul.

Q. You say that if the influence of the Southern Pacific Company had been exerted in favor of the Ogden haul, the Sunset Route could never have made the progress that it made in getting business. Under the conditions under which you made that answer, you meant to convey the idea, did you not, that the Sunset Route had made this progress because it had not exerted its influence in favor of the Ogden route?

A. I meant to answer it by saying that the success of the Sunset Route was due to the influence of the Southern Pacific being exerted in favor of that route.

Q. I put the whole statement before you [handing witness record in Union Pacific merger suit] as I read it from the Union Pacific record, page 3392. You meant to convey the impression, did 2341 you not, that the lack of influence by the Southern Pacific Company in favor of the Ogden route was an essential to the success which the Sunset Route had had?

A. I answered two questions, and they were both incorporated in your first question to-day. The first, that if the Southern Pacific Company had not been in management of the entire line from coast to coast, what effect would that have had?

Mr. McEnerney. I think Mr. Spence has not finished his answer.

The Witness (continuing). The question was: What effect would that have had upon the Sunset Route into California? My answer was that the Sunset Route, in my judgment, would never have been able to secure a substantial share of the traffic between Atlantic seaboard territory and California if the Southern Pacific's short haul had been to Los Angeles, we will say, or to the southern boundary of California, and its longer haul to Ogden. What followed is a part of the same answer.

By Mr. McClennen:

Q. And what followed was the words: "Or, in other words, if the influence of the Southern Pacific upon that traffic had been ex-3342 erted in favor of the Ogden haul, the Sunset Route could never have made the progress that it made in getting business", was it not?

A. Coupled with the previous statement that if the Southern Pacific's line had stopped at Los Angeles or at the southern boundary of California.

Q. Coupled with the statement that you have just read?

A. Yes; the statement I have just read; if its line had stopped at Los Angeles or the southern boundary of California.

Q. To avoid the slightest question about the whole context—it is true, is it not, that there is no occasion to begin to read before this last question on page 3991 [indicating in record]?

A. I really do not know. I shall have to look at it.

Q. Will you glance at that and see whether it occurs to you that there is anything prior to that that is of consequence in order to get perfectly fairly the context in which you used the words to which we have just referred?

A. There is nothing immediately preceding it which affects that question.

Q. Then I will begin with that question, at the bottom of page 3991 of the Union Pacific merger record, and I read as follows:
3343 "Q. By the way, Mr. Spence, if the Southern Pacific line in California had stopped at the southern boundary of the State, if the Southern Pacific Company had not been in the management of the entire line from coast to coast, what effect would that have had upon the development of transcontinental business by the Sunset Route into California?

"A. The Sunset Route, in my judgment, would never have been able to secure a substantial share of the traffic between Atlantic seaboard territory and California. If the Southern Pacific's short haul had been to Los Angeles, we will say, or to the southern boundary of California and its longer haul to Ogden; or, in other words, if the influence of the Southern Pacific Company upon that traffic had b exerted in favor of the Ogden haul, the Sunset Route could n have made the progress that it made in getting business.

"Q. The Southern Pacific would naturally have preferred its l haul would it not?

"A. Its long haul; yes."

Now, from that point on will you glance at the book to see whe it is necessary to read anything more to make the portion read wh fair to you?

A. I think that statement that has been read into 2344 record is correct.

Q. You see, in the connection in which you use those wo do you not, that you have put the lack of influence of the South Pacific Company in favor of Ogden as a prerequisite to the suc which the Sunset Route did obtain?

A. There are two prerequisites.

Q. Two prerequisites?

A. One, if the Southern Pacific line had ended at the Colo River in southern California and the remainder of the line to York had been under a separate management, that the line w not have achieved the success which it did achieve in securing traffic.

Q. Do you observe that, in the phrase as you put it, you put i the alternative, in this form:

"Or, in other words, if the influence of the Southern Pacific C pany upon that traffic had been exerted in favor of the Ogden h

In using that expression in that case, did you not intend to lea that the Southern Pacific Company's influence in those days had been exerted in favor of the Ogden haul?

2345 A. I intended to be understood as meaning that the pr ential effort of the Southern Pacific Company was to s the traffic between California and the Atlantic seaboard via the set Route. I did not intend it to be understood that the Sout Pacific made no effort by its Ogden route, or that it did anyt to interfere with anybody else making an effort by the Ogden r

Q. You meant to be understood to say, did you not, that some in some way, the effort of the Southern Pacific in favor of the O route had not been as great as it might have been?

A. I did not.

Q. Did you mean to leave it, when you made that answer i Union Pacific case, that the Southern Pacific Company had everything that it could to encourage through business through O to the Atlantic seaboard from California?

A. I meant this: That the Southern Pacific Company's int from the outset, and the interests of the people and the mercha

California, were absolutely identical; that if the Southern Pacific had had its own line through Ogden to New York prior to the time when the Sunset line was started, that it had as much interest in getting the California products promptly to the seaboard and in getting 2346 the merchants' products promptly from the seaboard to them, as it had after the opening of the Sunset Route, and that the opening of the Sunset Route afforded the facilities, which it did not have before, to accomplish that result.

Q. Do you think that which you are now stating was what you intended to convey by the language which I have used here?

A. I think so.

Q. What did you mean by the words in the quoted phrase "if"—and I emphasize that—"if the influence of the Southern Pacific Company upon that traffic had been exerted in favor of the Ogden haul"?

A. I meant that if the Southern Pacific line had stopped at the Colorado River that the preferential effort probably would have been in favor of the Ogden haul, but it did not stop at the Colorado River. It had its own line to New York, and thereby was afforded facilities to do what it could not do via Ogden.

Q. And you meant also, did you not, that if the preferential effort of the Southern Pacific Company had been exerted in favor of the Ogden haul the Ogden route would have prevailed over the Sunset Route?

2347 A. If our ownership had stopped at the Colorado River and the remainder of the line had been under separate control, we would have been as powerless to accomplish the service by that route as we would via Ogden, and that under those circumstances the Sunset Route would not have prevailed over the Ogden route.

Q. Did you not think that if the Southern Pacific Company's effort had been exerted in favor of the Ogden route with all the inspiration that comes from 100 per cent of the rate that the Ogden route would have prevailed over the Sunset Route even if the Sunset Route were a through route?

A. No, sir; and it would not have prevailed.

Q. Has it not now prevailed?

A. Conditions have changed very materially in recent years. I have said that the coordination that was impossible to get in those days, the interests of eastern lines that it was impossible to get in those days, have been thoroughly aroused and the business has been extended, the business has grown, and those lines are all absolutely interested.

Q. Was not one of the things as to which the Southern Pacific's interest might have been exerted in those early days if it had not had another 100 per cent route, the getting of coordination with the eastern roads?

2348 A. It made those efforts to get that coordination before the Sunset Route was opened, and was not successful.

Q. I thought you said that you did not know of those efforts yourself.

A. I did say that I did not know. You asked me if I knew what efforts had been made, and I told you I did not; but I do say that the Southern Pacific Company—this is obvious—that the Southern Pacific Company, when it had only its Ogden line, was interested in securing that traffic between the Atlantic seaboard and the Pacific coast against the Panama route and against the Cape Horn route, and it was not very successful; and it wanted the traffic, if any line ever did want it, and certainly it put forth efforts to improve its service.

Q. The Sunset Route, so far as Atlantic seaboard territory was concerned, furnished as efficient a means of competing with the Panama routes and the Horn routes as the Ogden route would furnish, did it not?

A. After it was opened; yes.

Q. So that in order to fend against the Panama routes and the Horn routes, so far as that could be done by rail carriers, the Sunset Route was sufficient?

2349 A. Any route was sufficient.

Q. The Southern Pacific Company did not need the Ogden route for that particular purpose, did it?

A. After the opening of the Sunset Route?

Q. Yes.

A. It did not need it for that purpose; no.

Q. The person having the important say as to the methods of developing traffic for the Southern Pacific Company prior to 1901, and thereafter to some extent, was Mr. J. C. Stubbs, was it not?

A. Yes.

Q. If any effort had been made to organize a through service through Ogden from the Atlantic to the Pacific and the reverse, in the ordinary course, it would have been made by Mr. Stubbs?

A. I think that is likely.

Q. Mr. Stubbs is still living?

A. He was the last time I heard of him.

Q. And upon the rolls of the Southern Pacific Company?

A. Upon the pension roll.

Q. Did you ever talk with Mr. Stubbs about the efforts, if any,

2350 which he had made to coordinate the eastern rail carriers with the Union Pacific and the Central Pacific for through transcontinental business?

A. I think my information prior to 1885 is historical, and I have no doubt that a good deal of it was gained from Mr. Stubbs.

Q. Do you mean by that that you did or did not talk with him on t subject?
A. I could not tell you whether I talked with him or not.
Q. Do you now recall Mr. Stubbs having informed you of any ort which he made after the opening of the Sunset Route to get codination between the eastern roads and the Union Pacific and Cenl Pacific for through transcontinental service?
A. No.
Q. You were in the office of Mr. Edwin Hawley, were you not?
A. Yes.
Q. And Mr. Edwin Hawley was for years the general eastern agent
the Southern Pacific Company?
A. Yes; and subsequently assistant general traffic manager.
351 Q. Mr. Hawley was a peculiarly able railroad man?
A. One of the ablest railroad men of his day.
Q. His work directly and through his subordinates in securing affic for the Southern Pacific Company was directed exclusively ward the Sunset-Gulf route?
A. Preferentially.
Q. Mr. Hawley remained with the Southern Pacific Company up what time?
A. March 1, 1902, as an officer.
Q. Up to what time was he the general eastern agent?
A. My recollection is that he became assistant general traffic manger about 1890. I could not speak accurately as to that, but I think at was about the date.
Q. Did he in that position also continue to exercise the functions general eastern agent?
A. Yes.
Q. And he remained as assistant general traffic manager up to hat time?
A. March 1, 1902.
Q. The general traffic manager being Mr. Stubbs?
A. When Mr. Hawley was appointed assistant general traffic 352 manager, Mr. Richard Gray was general traffic manager at San Francisco.
Q. When did Mr. Stubbs become general traffic manager?
A. He was general traffic manager when I came with the company, think. I would not be sure about that.
Q. Mr. Gray is not living, is he?
A. No.
Q. And Mr. Hawley is not living?
A. No.

Q. Did Mr. Hawley ever tell you of any efforts which he had m to get a coordination between eastern roads and the Union Pacif Central Pacific for through service via the Ogden gateway?

A. No.

Q. The first railroad to get a coordination with eastern roads f through freight between the Atlantic and Pacific coast was the S Fe, was it not?

A. I am not sure about that. I expect they think so.

Q. Do you bear in mind any instance of anything of the kind pr to the through-route arrangements made between the Atchison a the Erie, to which Mr. Chambers has testified?

A. I have no recollection of anything prior to that.

2353 Q. You have spoken of the falling off in the Sunset-G route's business. Am I right in understanding you to mea relative and not an absolute falling off?

A. No; an absolute falling off; an absolute decline in tonnage, n withstanding an increase in the total tonnage.

Q. What was the maximum Sunset-Gulf tonnage in any year; d you know?

A. I do not remember it; no.

Q. How do you arrive at this statement that there has been a actual falling off in tonnage?

A. From my recollection of the business from year to year.

Q. How much do you think it is now below its maximum?

A. I do not know, in figures; but it is very substantially below i maximum.

Q. Is that true both of the eastbound and westbound?

A. Yes.

Q. That decline has come, in part, since the opening of the Pana Canal, has it not?

A. Partly.

Q. And may be due, in part, also, to present general business con tions?

A. No; the decline was substantially below the maxim 2354 before the canal ever opened, and before the present conditi of business existed.

Q. By "substantially" you mean what?

A. Thousands of tons.

Q. Did the tonnage of the Sunset-Gulf route, speaking in absolu and not in relative terms, decline before the Union Pacific-Southe Pacific merger, so called, in 1901?

A. I could not say as to the tonnage. The percentage of the tak ings of all lines very materially declined prior to 1901. I could n whether the actual tonnage declined prior to that date, because total tonnage was expanding very rapidly, and the number of may not have been less, but its percentage of takings was very ch less.

Q. During the Southern Pacific-Union Pacific merger period, m September 1, 1901, approximately, to February 1, 1913, did the uthern Pacific Company continue its vigorous effort to get as ch as possible of the Atlantic seaboard-California tonnage via the nset-Gulf route?

A. So far as my knowledge of the situation is concerned, from any structions which I had myself, we did.

Q. You mean to include in that so far as your belief goes?

55 A. I do not know what instructions officers in California might have had from the director of traffic, who was the joint ficer of the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific.

Q. Have you anything to arouse any suspicion in your mind on at subject?

A. No. The Union Pacific had another route to southern Cali-rnia in 1905.

Q. You refer to the San Pedro, from 1905 on?

A. Yes.

Q. During that merger period were you the immediate head of e Atlantic seaboard solicitation?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you also have to do with the Union Pacific solicitation in e seaboard territory?

A. On behalf of the line west of Ogden.

Q. You had under you, in the Atlantic seaboard territory during at period, solicitors whose business was to solicit for the Sunset-ulf route?

A. Preferentially.

Q. The Union Pacific Company had solicitors in the Atlantic sea-oard territory whose business it was to solicit for the Ogden route preferentially?

356 A. The Union Pacific had an organization in New York, Boston, and Philadelphia which was exclusively Union Pa-ific. Its offices at Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Chicago, Atlanta, Kan-as City, and St. Louis were joint offices of the Union Pacific and outhern Pacific.

Q. Perhaps I did not emphasize it sufficiently, but I meant to keep, or the moment, the distinction between the Atlantic seaboard ter-itory and the Middle West.

A. Oh!

Q. I was coming to the Middle West later.

So far as the Atlantic seaboard territory was concerned, there w a Union Pacific—if I may so call it—Ogden preferential organiz tion?

A. Yes.

Q. And the Middle West territory——

A. I would like to qualify that: It was an Ogden preferential o ganization to and from central California after 1905; it was a Sa Lake route preferential organization for southern California bu ness after that time, and had its own line to and from Oregon, a was not a preferential Ogden solicitor for Oregon.

Q. But was for northern and central California?

2357 A. Yes.

Q. In the Middle West territory, prior to 1901, for a dou or more years, the Southern Pacific Company had maintained soli tors whose business it was to get as much freight as possible to m by the Southern Pacific Company's long haul?

A. In some places.

Q. And for all points east of a line drawn from Toledo throu Danville, Terre Haute, or Indianapolis to East St. Louis; that eff meant the New Orleans gateway?

A. Preferentially.

Q. And the Texas gateways next?

A. Yes.

Q. In that same territory the Union Pacific maintained solicitor that is, in the Middle West territory?

A. Yes.

Q. And their effort, during that period before 1901, was direct toward moving the traffic as much as possible through Omaha a Ogden?

A. Yes; to and from central and northern California.

2358 Q. After the merger in 1901, the line of division in t Southern Pacific Company's solicitation which had run described, from Toledo to East St. Louis, was moved southerly easterly down to the Ohio River and points thereon?

A. Southerly to the Ohio River and easterly to and includ Pittsburgh and its environs and Buffalo and its environs.

Q. And to the south of that line the effort continued to be in fa of the Sunset rail route?

A. The preferential effort was in favor of the Sunset route, there had been instructions to work with their connections.

Q. Northerly of that line the preferential effort was via Om and Ogden?

A. Yes; to and from central California.

Q. That condition persisted during the period of the merger?

A. Yes.

Q. You were aware, were you not, at about the time of the unmerger, so called, in February, 1913, that the Attorney General had manifested an intention to bring proceedings to question the 2359 legality of the holding of the Central Pacific Railroad Company by the Southern Pacific Company?

A. Yes.

Q. One of the elements which entered into the solicitation of traffic, before the punitive or other enlightenments of the twentieth century, was the giving of rebates to a considerable extent?

A. I understand so.

Q. Has the policy of solicitation which you have just indicated as existing during the period of the merger continued unchanged so far as the Southern Pacific Company is concerned, since the unmerger?

A. With respect to California traffic, the same policy of solicitation has been pursued, except more actively and vigorously.

Q. How with respect to Atlantic seaboard and Middle West?

A. I am speaking of the traffic between California and the Atlantic seaboard and Middle West.

Q. Oh, I see. That is, you did not mean to distinguish between east and west bound traffic in that?

A. No.

Q. The steamship lines operating through the Panama 2360 Canal are, as to many points in interior California, dependent for delivery upon the Southern Pacific rails, are they not?

A. The large points of consumption in California are all reached by other rails than the Southern Pacific.

Q. Those other rails being what?

A. The Santa Fe and the Western Pacific; the Oakland, Antioch & Eastern, and the Northern Electric and the California Traction Company, and the San Pedro line.

Q. Many of the large industries in California are situated upon the rails of the Southern Pacific or Central Pacific Railroad, are they not?

A. Yes.

Q. I am now using it, as you understand, in the sense of being immediately upon those rails and not merely in the towns.

A. Oh, no; I thought you meant served by the tracks.

Q. I meant to ask you if many of the large industries in California were not situated immediately upon the Southern Pacific rails or Central Pacific rails, in the sense that they are reached by short sidings from those rails?

A. By "industries" I suppose you mean agricultural 2361 speaking in that sense. The eastbound products are agricultural, chiefly. The westbound products are warehoused in the large cities I referred to as served by the rails of the different lines.

Q. Do you not have large industries out in California that have sidings? I mean, to a considerable extent.

A. The fruit-packing houses, or something of that sort, you mean?
There is not much manufacturing in California, you know.

Q. I do not mean to define the particular kind of industry or business, but simply to find out what the fact is with respect to that, whether there are considerable numbers of receivers or shippers of large amounts of freight that have their own sidings or spurs from the Southern Pacific or Central Pacific tracks?

A. There are not many shippers that are located in the large cities.
The fruit-packing houses, of course, are at interior points, and some of them are served exclusively by the Santa Fe lines, and some of them are served exclusively by the Southern Pacific lines, and some of them exclusively by the Western Pacific lines, and some of them exclusively by the San Pedro.

2362 Q. Very little by the Western Pacific, of that sort of things?

A. Well, at Stockton and large cities up in central California. We switch to all of those lines, of course; for them all on an equal basis.

Q. Have you before you now defendants' Exhibits 84 to 94?

A. I have.

Q. Are you the author of them? I do not mean are you the draughtsman, but are you the author of the ideas portrayed by the lines on them?

A. I think I can take the credit for them.

Q. Defendants' Exhibit No. 84 you intend as indicating particularly alternative routes between Chicago and Seattle?

A. And Tacoma.

Q. And Tacoma. Which of those two alternative routes became complete first?

A. Complete?

Q. Yes.

A. The line from Chicago to Omaha was completed before the line from Seattle to Tacoma.

2363 Q. By that do you mean that the line from Chicago to Omaha ends the necessary rail connection through to Seattle and was completed before the line was through from Chicago to Seattle over the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul?

A. Yes.

Q. What section of the new through line over the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul between Chicago and Seattle was the last link in that line to be constructed or acquired?

A. I am unable to tell you where the last link was built. The western end of the line, known as the Chicago, Milwaukee & Puget Sound, was the last part of the road that was built.

Q. Between what points have you last described?

A. Between St. Paul and Seattle.

Q. That is, you mean you do not know which portion of the tracks between St. Paul and Seattle was the last to be built?

A. No; my understanding is that they built both ways, and I do not know where they met.

Q. That was a new building, was it not?

A. Yes.

Q. Was that conducted by the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul?

364 A. For their account, as I understand it.

Q. Do you know of their having any other line projected through that territory at the time that they built that section?

A. I do not.

Q. Did the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul stop any existing competition or prevent the arriving of any immediately threatened competition, so far as you know, by completing the building of that line?

A. I do not know of the St. Paul having stopped any threatened construction by any other line. If you mean, did they stop the soliciting of traffic by the Omaha line and in lieu thereof soliciting by their long haul, I will say yes.

Q. About how many lines parallel, in the common sense, with the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul are there between Chicago & Omaha?

A. Between Chicago and Omaha?

Q. Yes.

A. About five.

Q. Do you know whether or not there ever has been a substantial tonnage moving over the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul to 365 Omaha and thence by Union Pacific and the other connections which you have shown in yellow on defendants' Exhibit No. 4 to Tacoma and Seattle?

A. My understanding is that there was, prior to the construction of its own line.

Q. How substantial was it, to your understanding?

A. Do you mean how much?

Q. Yes.

A. The relations of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul with the Union Pacific were such that they were expected to put forth an effort to secure the traffic that way. There was a reciprocal obligation.

Q. A comparatively small portion of the Chicago-Seattle trafmoved that way, did it?

A. I should say that the Northern Pacific would have come firs possibly the Great Northern second, and the St. Paul-Union Paci line third.

Q. Once for all, let me ask you: On all of these maps you hav approached the subject from the standpoint of the line denoted i green, have you not?

A. Yes; the yellow lines are connecting lines.

Q. On defendants' Exhibit No. 85 you indicate as the eas-2366 ern terminus of the alternative of the Union Pacific throug eastern connections—or at least the determining line—the Atlantic seaboard points. What do you intend to indicate as the wes-ern terminus of the haul for which the map supplies alternati routes?

A. Portland, San Francisco, and Los Angeles.

Q. What do you mean to denote as the alternative route to Por land, to the obviously direct route, the Oregon Short Line, and t Oregon-Washington Railroad & Navigation Company?

A. The Southern Pacific via Roseville; the Southern Pacific v
San Francisco, and the steamship line of the San Francisco & Por land Steamship Company; the San Pedro, Los Angeles & Salt La Railroad, and the steamship line of the San Francisco & Portla Steamship Company.

Q. Does Union Pacific freight to any extent, destined to Portla Oregon, move via San Pedro, and by steamship to Portland?

A. It does not, because of the facilities afforded by the line west Ogden, which are so excellent that they have no need to use the alte native route.

Q. Would not the facilities afforded by the Oregon Short Line a the Oregon-Washington Railroad & Navigation Company 2367 pretty influential to keep the Union Pacific from movi traffic via San Pedro and boat line to Portland?

A. Yes.

Q. Is any route practicable for the Union Pacific to San Pedro e cept the San Pedro route?

A. I have heard a great deal about citrus fruits from southern Ca fornia moving via Sacramento and Ogden.

Q. And that is a substantial use, is it?

A. Substantial, so far as that freight is concerned.

Q. Is the route via the Oregon Short Line and the Oregon-Wa ington Railroad & Navigation Company and boat to San Francisc ine over which any substantial amount of through freight to San Francisco is moved?

A. No.

Q. Is the line from Ogden via San Pedro, and boat to San Francisco, a line over which any substantial amount of freight is moved?

A. No. I should like to add, to both of those answers, that both lines actively work for passenger traffic.

Q. You mean, by those inducements that are attractive, thrown out as to scenery?

A. And fried chicken.

Q. The San Pedro route is the one which was the subject 368 matter of a part of the Union Pacific merger case?

A. Yes.

Q. Where some contentions and replies thereto were made as to whether that had been acquired to prevent a competitive route?

Mr. BLAIR. I object on the ground that the record in the case and the decision of the court is the best evidence.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. I think the suggestion is one which can not be disputed.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. On defendants' Exhibit No. 86 the green lines are what is popularly known as the Gould system?

A. Yes.

Q. Why is the line from Marshall to El Paso hatched?

A. Because it is under separate operation; but a very large block of its stock is owned by the Missouri Pacific.

Q. The termini within which you intend by this exhibit to show the alternative routes are St. Louis and California terminals such as Stockton, San Francisco, and Oakland?

A. And Sacramento and Marysville.

Q. The last link to be constructed in the alternative route 369 was the Western Pacific from Salt Lake City to the San Francisco terminals?

A. Yes.

Q. There was no other line threatened, so far as you know, through that territory when that line was constructed?

A. No; not to my knowledge.

Q. Defendants' Exhibit No. 87 you intend to have present alternative Santa Fe routes?

A. Yes.

Q. And the points that you emphasize are New York on the one hand and California terminals on the other?

A. Those are not the first points that I emphasize.

Q. What are the first?

A. The first are Chicago on the one hand and Stockton, Oakland, and San Francisco on the other, between which the Santa Fe operates its own complete line, and a line from Chicago to Pueblo which, in connection with the Denver & Rio Grande and Western Pacific, forms an alternative competitive route between Chicago and California terminals.

The second point is that the Santa Fe line from San Francisco and Oakland to Chicago in connection with the Erie Railroad to New York forms one through route, and the Santa Fe system to 2370 Galveston, in connection with the Mallory Steamship Line to New York forms an alternative through route in competition for the Atlantic seaboard traffic.

Q. Dealing with the first that you mentioned, first; that is, Chicago and San Francisco: The last link in the alternative route was the Western Pacific from Salt Lake City to San Francisco?

A. Yes.

Q. Dealing with your second next; that is, the routes between New York and San Francisco: The last link in the alternative route was the line from Texico to Galveston or Temple, making thus to Galveston?

A. Yes; but the Santa Fe had a route to Galveston prior to that through some point farther north—I think I can tell you what it is.

Q. Do you refer to the line from Newton, Kansas?

A. I think that is the junction.

Q. Coming down to Galveston?

A. That line was in operation in connection with the Mallory Steamship Line as early as 1886. It is not shown here, because this map is designed to show the lines now in use.

Q. What was the last link, then, in the San Francisco 2371 to Galveston Atchison route, as it first went through, so as to be usable in a practical sense as a line from San Francisco to Galveston and thence by the Mallory Line to New York?

A. The line via Newton, Kansas, was used for many years as a practical route.

Q. That was the link that completed that line, was it?

A. I am not sure what part of it was last built. The Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe acquired the Gulf, Colorado & Santa Fe Line from Newton, Kansas, south in 1886. The line was there, I think, before that.

Q. Was it a competitor in transcontinental business?

A. Yes.

Q. The line from Newton, Kansas, to Galveston?

A. Yes; the Mallory Line-Santa Fe route has been a competitor for California business for many years, while the Texico Line has only been completed within recent years.

Q. Irrespective of whether it was Santa Fe ownership or other wnership, what was it that first bridged the last gap so that the eight could be moved through the Needles and thence on down to alveston?

A. From and to what point in California?

Q. Well, I will say Mojave.

372 A. The Atlantic & Pacific, I think, was the last.

Q. That was the last thing built?

A. Yes. Let me see. Wait a moment. It would depend upon hether this line from Newton, Kansas, south was in existence prior 1883. I don't know whether it was or not. If it is true that that ne was not in existence prior to 1883, then the link from Newton, ansas south was the last link.

Q. Was the Atlantic & Pacific competitive in any way with the anta Fe when it was acquired by the Santa Fe?

A. That depends on the broad meaning of that word. The Santa e had a line through Deming in connection with the Southern Pa-ific, competing for transcontinental traffic.

Q. Did the Atlantic & Pacific ever operate before it was operated y the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe?

A. I think so.

Q. Did it operate between the Needles and Mojave ever before it as operated by the Atchison?

A. I am not sure about that, but my understanding is that—I do ot know whether it was in operation there prior to its being operated y the Santa Fe or not.

Q. What were the practical means by which the Atlantic 373 & Pacific could reach eastern points except over the Atchison, when the Atchison acquired the Atlantic & Pacific from Mo-ave and Needles; and by "acquired" I mean acquired the lease over hat line?

A. I do not understand that the Atlantic & Pacific had any conection east of Needles.

Q. On defendants' Exhibit No. 88 the Great Northern is the line ith which you are dealing?

A. Yes.

Q. The western termini being Seattle, Portland, Astoria, and Spokane?

A. Yes.

Q. The eastern termini on one proposition being Chicago, and on he other proposition being these innumerable Atlantic seaboard oints?

A. The eastern termini of the Great Northern road is not shown s Chicago.

Q. I mean, in preparing this map to show alternative routes, one of the things that you intended to show was the Great Northern's alternative routes by connection to Chicago?

A. Yes; between Seattle, Astoria, and Portland on the west 2374 and Chicago, St. Louis, and Atlantic seaboard on the east.

Q. Dealing with the longer line—that is, from Seattle and the other western points to New York and the other eastern points—you intend to show three lines, one through Billings, one through Minneapolis and St. Paul, and one through Superior, Wisconsin, and boat lines to Buffalo and rail to New York?

A. Yes.

Q. Which was the first of those three that was a through service able line, say, from Seattle to New York?

A. The Great Northern, Burlington, and Pennsylvania lines via St. Paul and Chicago, according to the best of my recollection.

Q. Which was the second?

A. I think the Superior line.

Q. And then the third was the one through Billings?

A. The one through Billings.

Q. What was the last link in the line through Superior?

A. I do not know.

Q. What was the last link in the line through Billings?

A. I think the line from Omaha to Billings.

Q. That is, the Burlington's line?

2375 A. The Billings route, at all events; possibly the Great Northern line from Shelby down to Billings may have been. It was all about the same time.

Q. That is, the completion of that through route was the work of the Burlington Railroad?

A. The completion of the through route?

Q. Yes; through Billings.

A. As far as I know; yes.

Q. Was any other line immediately projected at the time the Burlington built the line to Billings?

A. I have no knowledge of any.

Q. And, of course, you did not mean to convey the impression that the completing of a line by the Burlington to Billings would be a suppression of competition by the Great Northern Railroad?

A. I do not know what the Burlington does as between its line to Billings and its connection which owns it.

Q. Do you know anything about the movement of traffic from Seattle through Superior and boat lines and the New York Central to New York?

A. Yes. During the season of lake navigation traffic moves that way freely.

2376 Q. Is the volume large?

A. I think so.

Q. On defendants' exhibit No. 89 the prominent line is the Chicago & North Western?

A. Yes.

Q. And you intend to show three possible routes which it has, by connection between Chicago and Washington and Oregon points?

A. Yes.

Q. Which was the first one that was completed?

A. I don't remember whether the line from Chicago to Council Bluffs or the line from Chicago to St. Paul was first built. It is a matter of record, of course, but I do not recall it.

Q. Well, the first completion of the through line was made by the developments in Oregon or Washington, was it not? That is, the Oregon-Washington Railroad & Navigation Company's extension from Portland?

A. Yes.

Q. Going next to the line which starts out through St. Paul from Chicago; what completed the through line?

A. The Great Northern.

2377 Q. Is the same true of the line which starts out from Chicago through Ashland?

A. The Northern Pacific completed that route.

Q. And of course you do not mean to suggest that the completion of through routes by the Great Northern or the Northern Pacific would be a suppression of competition by the Chicago & North Western?

A. No.

Q. Defendants' Exhibit No. 90 is designed to emphasize the alternative routes of the Rock Island?

A. Yes.

Q. By its connections?

A. Yes.

Q. And whenever we say "Rock Island" we mean, unless otherwise indicated, the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway Company, plus the El Paso & Southwestern and El Paso & Southeastern?

A. It will be so understood.

Q. What are the termini betwen which you intend to show the alternative routes by this exhibit?

A. First, between Chicago & St. Louis and between Atlantic 2378 seaboard territory on the east, and San Francisco, Oakland, Sacramento, and Stockton, California, on the west.

Q. Dealing with the Atlantic seaboard on the east and California terminals on the west, which of these routes that you have shown here was the first physically complete?

A. I could not say as between the New York Central and Pennsylvania on the east and the Southern Pacific on the west.

Q. I have misled you again by the form of my question, I am afraid.

Over which of these alternative routes that you show on this plat did the Rock Island, by connection, first close up the last link of the chain connecting New York and San Francisco?

A. Between Chicago and Council Bluffs.

Q. That is, when the Rock Island built from Chicago to Council Bluffs it completed the first?

A. Yes.

Q. And that meant the use of the Union Pacific from that point west?

A. Yes.

Q. What was the next of these alternative routes?

A. The line from the Missouri River to Colorado junction.

2379 Q. That is the line from Council Bluffs to Pueblo?

A. Yes.

Q. And Denver?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know whether any line was immediately threatened when that gap was closed by the building of that line?

A. I do not.

Q. And the third route that you suggest is the route through Tucumcari, is it?

A. Tucumcari and Santa Rosa.

Q. What was the last link to make that a through route from New York to San Francisco?

A. The southwestern end of the Rock Island line, connecting at Santa Rosa with the El Paso & Northeastern, it was at that time is now the El Paso & Southwestern.

Q. Do you know whether any other road was threatened at that point at that time?

A. I do not.

Q. Exhibit No. 91 you intend to show the alternative routes by connection of the so-called Burlington route, the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy?

A. Yes.

2380 Q. And the points are Chicago and St. Louis on the east and Pacific coast points on the west?

A. Yes.

Q. The last of those alternative routes to be completed was the uilding of the Burlington to Billings?

A. That is my recollection.

Q. And the first——

A. Was between Chicago and Council Bluffs.

Q. Was between Chicago and Council Bluffs, and that was com-leted by the extensions into Oregon?

A. What do you mean by "extensions"?

Q. Extensions of the lines of other carriers, not Burlington, into Oregon?

A. Yes.

Q. The only line which the Burlington finally completed the last ink of was this line to Billings?

A. That is the last line that was constructed, according to my un-erstanding.

Q. And, so far as you know, no other line was threatened through here at the time that was completed?

A. I have no knowledge of any.

Q. Defendants' Exhibit No. 92 is designed to show the 381 alternative routes of the Pennsylvania Railroad from Atlantic seaboard points to California points?

A. From Pittsburgh and Atlantic seaboard territory to California oints.

Q. The completion of the alternative routes there was put through y the connecting routes and not by the Pennsylvania?

A. Yes.

Q. Mr. Blair questioned you as to some resemblance between the ennsylvania situation in reference to Pittsburgh with the Central acific situation. Do you have in mind the incident?

A. Yes.

Q. I do not bear in mind just what the comparison was. Will you escribe it?

A. That the Pennsylvania lines have one route from Pittsburgh, ia Chicago, engaged in the transcontinental traffic, and a completely lternative route from Pittsburgh, via St. Louis, engaged in the same affic.

Mr. BLAIR. That may have been what the witness understood me o mean, but I had reference to an entirely different situation. How-ever, it is all the same.

382 By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. In seemingly assenting to Mr. Blair's proposition, this as what you understood him to mean, as you have now stated it?

A. I would like to have his question and my answer before me.

Mr. BLAIR. You will find that my question related to the relati of the Pennsylvania, considering its line from Chicago to New Yo and the Sunset-Gulf route from New York to California; wheth that was not exactly analogous to the position created by the Centr Pacific line from Ogden to San Francisco and the Sunset-Gulf rou to New York; one presenting the same situation on the east as th other presented on the west.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. Well, now, calling your attention to page 2246 of the recor keeping in mind Mr. Blair's explanation of what he meant by th question, will you not put in your own words, comprehensively, th comparison?

A. Well, Mr. Blair's question, as I now understand it, did not rel to transcontinental business. As I now understand it, it r 2383 ferred to the Pennsylvania line having its own line betwe New York and St. Louis——

Mr. BLAIR. I have never mentioned St. Louis, Mr. Spence.

The WITNESS. Will you let me read the question?

(After reading the question from the record.) Oh, yes; I s The Pennsylvania line between Chicago and New York is the Centra Pacific.

Mr. BLAIR. On the east?

The WITNESS. On the east.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. That is, the Pennsylvania line between Chicago and New Yor you analogize to the Central Pacific?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, having established that, what do you analogize to th Southern Pacific to make the comparison?

Mr. BLAIR. The Southern Pacific was used——

Mr. MCCLENNEN. One moment. I want Mr. Spence to answer.

The WITNESS. The Sunset-Gulf route.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. The Sunset-Gulf route?

A. Yes.

Q. That is, you mean that substituting Chicago for Ogden 2384 and New York for San Francisco you then use as the alterna tive the Sunset-Gulf route? Is that it?

A. Yes.

Q. That is, for the purposes of comparison you are assuming that the Pennsylvania lines from Chicago to New York and the Sunset-Gulf route are both owned by some company that we will cal the "X. Y. Company"; is that it?

A. That the X. Y. Company has an interest in both lines.

Q. The distinction between the two cases which you make analogous in your comparison being that in the case of the Central Pacific and the Sunset-Gulf route the Southern Pacific Company owns both of them and that in the other case the X. Y. Company does not exist at all; is that it?

A. The X. Y. Company is used as an example for comparison.

Q. I see. Mr. Spence, had this comparison that Mr. Blair called to your attention on page 2246 occurred to you before he mentioned the comparison at that time?

A. I do not know what he refers to.

Q. Had the comparison which you thought he referred to when you answered the question occurred to you before that time?

A. Yes; I prepared the map to show what I thought was 2385 comprehended by his question.

Q. And when you answered the question on page 2246 of the record you had in mind the Pennsylvania routes made by connection, the one through Chicago and the other through St. Louis, from Pittsburg to California?

A. Yes; that the lines between New York and Chicago, on the one hand, and the line from New York to St. Louis, on the other hand, formed parts of alternative competitive through routes.

Q. Now that you have had an opportunity to consider Mr. Blair's comparison, as you now understand that he meant it, from the explanation that he has given this afternoon, what do you think of it as a comparison representing your views?

A. He does not seem to think I understand his question yet.

Q. And the comparison, as he put it before you, is not so clear and obvious that you have yet got hold of it; is that it?

A. I have my own idea of this kind of a comparison, but have no idea of what Mr. Blair has in mind or what his question means.

The comparison that I made with your X. Y. example you 2386 stated for me—that if the same company had a route from New York via the Sunset-Gulf route to San Francisco and had an interest in another route between New York and Chicago it would be like the Central Pacific-Southern Pacific case.

Mr. BLAIR. You have got my idea at last, Mr. Spence.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. Does the comparison, now that I understand from Mr. Blair's comment that you have got the idea he intended to convey, seem to you an accurate comparison from the standpoint of a practical railroad traffic official?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, to avoid doing you any injustice, will you restate, in yo own language, the comparison which you have just described, seeming to you a valuable one from a practical standpoint? Wh is it?

A. If one company or interest had a line from New York to Ch cago, and the same company had an interest in a line, a Gulf a rail line, between New York and San Francisco via Galveston, th we would have a parallel case to the Southern Pacific and Centr Pacific.

Q. That is, you mean that if the Pennsylvania Railroad, having line from Chicago to New York, with connections to San Fra 2387 cisco, should acquire a water and rail line from New York v the Gulf of Mexico, and thence by rail to San Francisco, th you would have a condition analogous to the one that we have i the case of the Central Pacific Railroad?

A. Yes.

Q. The difference between the case on trial and that one bei that the Pennsylvania Railroad has not yet acquired that line by t Gulf? Is that the distinction?

A. I have no knowledge of what the Pennsylvania has acquired.

Q. You are not, from your general knowledge of traffic condi tions, aware of the Pennsylvania Railroad having any such Gu and rail line?

A. No.

Q. Defendants' Exhibit No. 93 you have prepared to show th alternative routes which the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad has by co nections from Philadelphia, Washington, and other Atlantic se board points to California points?

A. Yes; and Pittsburgh.

Q. Had the lines of the Baltimore & Ohio which you have show on the map reached Chicago and St. Louis before there were throug rail connections to California?

A. I do not recollect.

2388 Q. You recall that the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad was th first railroad in the United States?

A. I do not think it had reached Philadelphia. I think it wa built originally from Baltimore.

Q. Built to what point?

A. I do not remember.

Q. Which of these alternative routes that you have outlined ha was the first to be a through route by connection from the Atlantic t the Pacific?

A. I do not think either of them can be described accurately in answer to that question, because they are made up of links, some o the links in one having been built before some of the links in other. For example, the Illinois Central between Chicago and Council Bluffs was not built until after the Missouri Pacific west of St. Louis. On the other hand, the Southern Pacific west of Ogden was built before the Western Pacific west of Salt Lake City.

Q. The Baltimore & Ohio, by some connections to Chicago, if not over its own rails, reached Chicago and reached St. Louis before either of the lines here shown as west of Ogden and Salt Lake had been completed?

2389 A. I am not sure whether it had reached both Chicago and St. Louis or not.

Q. The second of the two alternative routes which you have shown here to be completed was completed by the construction of the Western Pacific?

A. Yes.

Q. And, of course, you did not mean to intimate that the construction of the Western Pacific was a suppression of competition by the Baltimore & Ohio?

A. No.

Q. Do you recall any of the routes which you have set out in defendants' Exhibits 84 to 93, inclusive, which we have just been going over, in which the last link in the second or third alternative line was acquired by the capture of an existing competitive line over that section, or was acquired or constructed to prevent the construction or acquisition by a competitor of a line or threatened line?

A. No.

Q. If in 1899, after the act had been passed directing the President to institute foreclosure proceedings on the Central Pacific Railroad line unless an adjustment of the debt was accomplished, that railroad had been sold to any concern other than the Southern 2390 Pacific Company, it would undoubtedly have competed strongly with the Southern Pacific from San Francisco Bay to New York, by connections, would it not?

A. As it does to-day.

Q. Passing to perhaps a little more fitting season for that part of your argument, I will ask you the simple question whether it would not in fact, irrespective of what it does to-day, have competed strongly against the Southern Pacific route?

A. As a purely academic question, the Central Pacific alone could not have competed with the Southern Pacific. The Central Pacific, joined with seventy-five per cent more mileage between Ogden and New York, would have completed a through competitive route.

Q. The Central Pacific Railroad, in the actual course of business under those circumstances, would, if managed as railroads ordinarily are managed, have tried to get business against the efforts of the Southern Pacific Company through El Paso?

A. It would have joined its efforts with the efforts of its connections, I have no doubt.

Q. To that end?

A. To that end.

2391 Q. You have, on defendants' Exhibit No. 94, sought to show the alternative routes of the New York Central Railroad from New York by connections to Los Angeles?

A. Yes.

Q. The New York Central Railroad acquired the West Shore Road, which you show here, the Michigan Central, which you show here, and the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern, which you show here, and some other roads not shown here, after those roads were already complete operating roads to the various points which you show on this plan?

A. As to all of them I could not speak from recollection.

Q. Well, you could as to the Michigan Central and the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern and the West Shore, could you not, which you show here?

A. That is my impression.

Q. This is the first of your instances on these various maps of the acquisition by a railroad of the control of the two existing competitive routes between the points which you designate, is it not?

A. As nearly as I can recall.

2392 Q. What is the analogy of any value which you draw between this New York Central situation and the Southern Pacific situation?

A. The New York Central lines between New York and Chicago and between New York and St. Louis, respectively, form parts of two alternative through routes.

Q. Does it seem to you that the situation is at all similar between the Southern Pacific Company and the New York Central?

A. No. The Southern Pacific Company does not own two parallel lines which in themselves compete with each other.

Q. So that really you make a distinction between the Southern Pacific and the New York Central rather than a comparison of the two as analogous; is that it?

A. They are analogous in the sense that they form parts of alternative through routes. It does not make any difference whether the New York Central uses the same line from New York and Buffalo or a different line. The lines from Chicago and St. Louis eastward form parts of different alternative through routes.

Q. And they form parts of through routes which are competitive routes in the New York Central case?

A. Yes.

2393 Q. And the same is true in the Southern Pacific case?

A. Yes.

Q. You were aware of the fact that the analogy between the New York Central situation and the Southern Pacific situation was such that a resolution had been introduced in the Senate inquiring as to why proceedings were not taken against the New York Central Railroad, were you not?

A. No; I do not remember the resolution.

Q. Were you not aware that a resolution had been introduced in the Senate inquiring?

A. Recently?

Q. Inside of a year and perhaps inside of six months.

A. No; I was not.

Q. Inquiring why proceedings were not taken against the New York Central Railroad?

A. No; it had escaped my attention.

Q. You have called attention in defendants' Exhibits Nos. 60 and 61 to the increase in through passenger trains since 1885?

A. Yes.

2394 Q. I suppose it is safe to say that the principal reason for the increase in the number of through passenger trains is the increase in the number of through passengers traveling between those points, is it not?

A. I am sorry to say that the increase in the number of passengers traveling between those points has not justified the increase in the trains.

Q. When they were put on, it was the belief that the increase in passengers was such as to call for the addition of the trains?

A. It was the belief that the increase would be sufficient to justify the operation of the trains.

Q. And the increase in the passenger travel through Ogden has not justified the through passenger service shown on Exhibit No. 61?

A. No; some of those trains have been losing money.

Q. Is the passenger travel via the routes shown on defendants' Exhibit No. 60 such as to call for the number of trains that are here shown?

A. They have been put on with the same object in view, and much with the same result.

Q. There has been some increase in travel through Ogden since 1885?

A. Oh, yes.

2395 Q. And it has been a very large increase?

A. Yes.

Q. And there has been a substantial increase in travel over the Sunset Route?

A. Yes. My point is that we have improved the service faster than the business has increased.

Q. Your map, defendants' Exhibit No. 56, in showing the lines on December 31, 1900, shows the lines substantially as they were in February, 1899, except for the Atchison road between Mojave and San Francisco; is that true?

A. And the American-Hawaiian Line, which did not begin operation until October 15, 1900.

Q. The lines in red on defendants' Exhibit No. 56 are lines controlled by the Southern Pacific Company?

A. Yes.

Q. The lines in green are pretty much all other railroads in the country?

A. The map does not show all of the railroads that are parties to transcontinental rates—transcontinental common tariffs. It is designed to include the principal railroads in the country that are participating in transcontinental traffic.

2396 Q. And it is true, is it not, that every one of the green lines except the Atchison, in order to get by rail into San Francisco, must forward over the red lines?

A. Every other line where? West of some point?

Q. West of Deming, New Mexico, and west of Ogden, Utah.

A. There were no other rails north of the Tehachapi Mountains on the date of that map except the Atchison.

Q. What was the condition in the traffic world with respect to the efforts of the Eastern and Middle West railroads to get traffic to move to or from California?

A. The lines described were soliciting the traffic either via Ogden and Southern Pacific, or via the Santa Fe through Chicago or Kansas City and Mojave.

Q. Was that solicitation vigorous?

A. Yes.

Q. As vigorous as it is now?

A. No. It was immediately prior to 1900, but not in the early nineties.

Q. I am referring to the condition in February, 1899.

A. Oh, in 1899?

Q. Was it then as vigorous as it is now, or not as vigorous?

2397 A. As to the question of degree, it was very active and vigorous. The competition seems more acute now by reason of the opening of additional lines and the Panama Canal.

Q. Was that vigorous effort by the Eastern and Middle West lines being made in February, 1899, in the West as well as in the East, or only in the East and Middle West?

A. In 1899? I think it was active and vigorous in both the Middle West and the East.

Q. Was the effort of all the other railroads to get traffic via the Atchison or via the Ogden gateway substantially as vigorous at the time of the Union Pacific merger in 1901 as it was in February, 1899?

A. Yes. You say "at the time." You mean prior to the merger, do you?

Q. I mean prior; yes.

A. Yes.

Mr. McENERNEY. What was the date of the merger?

Mr. McCLENNEN. September, 1901.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. You have produced, as defendants' Exhibit No. 58, a list of railroads maintaining solicitors in California?

A. Yes.

2398 Q. From what source did you make that up or have it made up?

A. From the Official Railway Guide.

Q. Was that made up from the current Railway Guide, so that it shows 1914 or 1915 conditions?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you make it up yourself, or merely give directions?

A. The California list was first made in California, and was checked in my office; each railroad was checked in my office.

Q. By some trusted subordinate?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you do the same thing with the New York list, defendants' Exhibit No. 59?

A. The New York list was made in my office.

Q. Was any attention paid, in making up the list, as to the number of solicitors that any one of these roads had in California?

A. No. The list is designed to show the number of organizations to have been forty-six, some of which have a number of solicitors.

2399 Q. Was any attention paid to the number of these forty-six railroads which combined into one soliciting organization in California?

A. No.

Q. It is obvious from your reading of the list, is it not, that some of those are joint offices of several different roads?

A. None, except those lines which are under the same ownership and control.

Q. Yes; but I say, from your knowledge of the railroads, you can say that there are a number of such, can you not?

A. The Gould lines and the Union Pacific system are about the only ones I observe.

Q. Now give me, will you, from this list of forty-six on defendants' Exhibit No. 58, the railroads, by name, which you characterize as the Gould lines represented by one organization or solicitor.

A. The Missouri Pacific, the Denver & Rio Grande, and the Western Pacific.

Q. Would you not add to that the Iron Mountain and the Texas & Pacific?

A. I would add the Iron Mountain. I do not think the 2400 Texas & Pacific are represented by the same agency. They are not usually.

Q. What are the lines represented by the single Union Pacific organization, as far as shown in this list of forty-six?

A. The Union Pacific, the Oregon Short Line, the Oregon-Washington Railroad & Navigation Company.

Q. And the San Pedro?

A. No; they maintain separate organizations.

Q. But not a competitive organization with the other Union Pacific organization?

A. No; they support the efforts of the Union Pacific to get southern California business.

Q. Are the New York Central lines and the Nickel Plate represented by one organization?

A. I think they are.

Q. Are the Canadian Pacific and the Soo Line represented by one organization?

A. They must be; they are under joint ownership.

Q. Are the Empire fast freight line and the Pennsylvania system represented by one organization?

A. No; I think the Empire is separately represented.
2401 Q. Those representations are not competitive with each other, are they?

A. The Empire line, you know, is not composed entirely of Pennsylvania lines. It is a mixture of Pennsylvania and New York Central lines. They are competitive to that extent.

Q. Are the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy and the Colorado Southern represented by one organization?

A. I think they are. I do not know.

Q. Of course the El Paso & Southwestern and the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific are represented by one organization?

A. They are represented by separate organizations.

Q. They are represented by separate organizations?

A. Yes.

Q. Are the Queen & Crescent and the Southern Railway represented by one organization?

A. No.

Q. Referring to the list, defendants' Exhibit No. 58, the Atchison maintained a soliciting organization in California at the time of the Union Pacific merger in 1901?

A. Yes.

Q. Is the same true of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad?

A. I think so.

2402 Q. Of the Canadian Pacific Railway?

A. I think so.

Q. Of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway?

A. I think so.

Q. Of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad?

A. Yes.

Q. Of the Chicago Great Western Railroad?

A. I think so.

Q. Of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway?

A. Yes.

Q. Of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway?

A. Yes.

Q. Of the Chicago & Alton Railroad?

A. I think so.

Q. Of the Chicago & Eastern Illinois Railroad?

A. Yes. That line was formerly part of the Rock Island, and my impression is that they may not have had separate representation at that time.

Q. Is it true of the Chicago & North Western Railway?

A. Yes.

Q. Of the Colorado Midland Railway?

A. Yes.

2403 Q. Of the Colorado & Southern Railway?

A. I am not sure whether they were joined with the Burlington at that time.

Q. And the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad?

A. Yes.

Q. Of the Denver & Rio Grande Railroad?

A. Yes.

Q. Of the El Paso & Southwestern?

A. I would not be sure that the El Paso & Southwestern separate organization had been created at that time.

Q. Of the Empire fast freight line?

A. Yes.

Q. Of the Erie Railroad?

A. Yes.

Q. Of the Grand Trunk Railway system?

A. Yes, I think so.

Q. Of the Great Northern Railway?

A. I do not think that the Great Northern opened its offices until recently. They have established their steamship lines from Seattle to San Francisco.

Q. Did they not have an office there for that purpose?

2404 A. Whether they had their own, or were represented by the Pacific Coast Steamship Company I am not sure.

Q. Is it true of the Illinois Central Railroad?

A. I do not think the Illinois Central had representation at that time. I am not sure about that.

Q. It has had for a great many years now?

A. Well, I will not say as to that.

Q. Do not understand me as referring to any other time. I refer only to 1901.

A. I do not know whether they had at that time.

Q. Recurring to 1901, the Kansas City, Mexico & Orient Railway was not in existence?

A. It was not opened for transcontinental traffic at that time.

Q. Did the Kansas City Southern Railway have an organization in California in 1901?

A. My impression is that it did not.

Q. Did the Lehigh Valley Railroad?

A. I think so.

Q. Did the Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie Railway?

A. That is a through line which was doubtless represented by the Canadian Pacific.

2405 Q. Did the Minneapolis & St. Louis Railroad, in 1901?

A. I do not believe so.

Q. Was that one of the Hawley lines?

A. Yes.

Q. Were they represented in some form by those lines?

A. I do not think they were.

Q. The Misouri, Kansas & Texas Railway, in 1901?

A. I do not know whether the M. K. & T. had an office at that time or not.

Q. The Missouri Pacific Railway?

A. Yes.

Q. The New York Central lines?

A. Yes.

Q. The Nickel Plate?
A. Yes.
Q. The Northern Pacific Railway?
A. I think so. I would not be sure about that.
Q. The Pennsylvania?
A. Yes.
Q. The Pere Marquette?
A. I would not be sure about that.
Q. The Queen & Crescent?
2406 A. I do not think the Queen & Crescent opened its California office until within the last three or four years.
Q. The Southern Railway?
A. I do not believe the Southern Railway had an office at that time.
Q. The St. Louis, Iron Mountain & Southern Railway?
A. They were represented by the Missouri Pacific.
Q. The St. Louis Southwestern Railway?
A. I should not think it had an office.
Q. The St. Louis & San Francisco Railroad?
A. Let me see when they opened. [After consulting memorandum.] I do not think they had. I do not think the St. Louis & San Francisco had an office.
Q. The Texas & Pacific Railway?
A. They either had a separate office or were represented by the Gould Lines' office. My impression is that the Texas & Pacific maintained a separate office.
Q. The Toledo, St. Louis & Western Railway?
A. I do not think so.
Q. The Wabash?
A. My impression is that the Wabash did.
Q. By 1908 practically all of the lines shown on Exhibit 2407 No. 58, except the Western Pacific, had different organizations in California?
A. I do not think the Queen & Crescent had. My recollection is that its office has been established quite recently. I do not know whether there are any other exceptions or not, from memory, but I think the majority of them had.
Q. Recurring to defendants' Exhibit No. 50, your table of Atlantic seaboard organizations, it is true, is it not, that in a number of instances two or more of the railroads shown thereon are represented by a single organization?
A. In the same instances that I have named with reference to the other exhibits.
Q. Instead of asking you as to each one of these roads in turn, I will ask you to look down through the list of defendants' Exhibit

No. 59 and tell me any that did not have a soliciting office in Atlantic seaboard territory in 1901.

A. The El Paso & Southwestern was not even jointly represented at that time, because the Rock Island had not connected with it.

The Kansas City, Mexico & Orient.

The Kansas City Southern.

2408 The San Pedro, Los Angeles & Salt Lake Railroad.

The Western Pacific.

Those are the only ones that I can say definitely did not have agencies.

Q. The probability is that the remaining fifty-four did have?

A. I should say so.

Q. And the San Pedro representation now is the Union Pacific representation?

A. No; it maintains its own office.

Q. It maintains a separate office in New York?

A. Yes.

Q. The Western Pacific is the same organization as the Missouri Pacific?

A. As the Missouri Pacific and the Rio Grande.

Q. By 1908 the San Pedro and the El Paso & Southwestern had required a soliciting organization in Atlantic seaboard territory?

A. The San Pedro line had, and the El Paso & Southwestern had an office in New York in 1908.

Q. In 1899 was there any really important Panama route other than that made up of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company 2409 on the west?

A. Yes. Well, not on the west; I think on the east. The Panama Railroad was operating its own steamship lines in 1899.

Q. But the Pacific Mail Steamship Company was a necessary part of it?

A. On the west, I think.

Q. On the west?

A. Yes.

Q. And the Pacific Mail Steamship Company in one form or another had been subsidized by the transcontinental railroads?

A. It had not for many years.

Q. Did they not have in 1899 still in existence that gross revenue guaranty or the space-rental agreement?

A. In 1899?

Q. In 1899.

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel objects on the ground that if it is a contract in writing the contract is the best evidence. I believe those contracts are offered in evidence.

The WITNESS. I do not recollect as to the date. I should say from my memory that it was not in effect.

2410 By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. It is a matter that you have not had occasion to look up?

A. I have not had occasion to look it up.

2411 Q. Have you before you defendants' Exhibits 82 and 83?

A. Yes.

Q. And the bond-aided map, defendants' Exhibit 55?

A. Yes.

Q. Is Sacramento freight included or excluded in bond-aided lines' freight?

A. Included.

Q. Is San Jose included?

A. Yes.

Q. Is Stockton included?

A. Yes.

Q. Are there any other substantial points included in the bond-aided figure?

A. It includes every point on that bond-aided line. This map does not show all the points.

Q. From your knowledge of the situation, what is there on that bond-aided section of large size in addition to Sacramento, Stockton, and San Jose?

A. Those are the important points.

Q. Is the Santa Fe to-day the strongest all-rail line in the field?

A. No. The Union Pacific Ogden route is the strongest

2412 line.

Q. The Santa Fe is next?

A. The Santa Fe is second.

Q. Does the Southern Pacific operate, with the Rock Island, as one continuous line from California to Chicago?

A. We operate very closely with the Rock Island. We cooperate with them very closely. We join in the operation of a through passenger train—two through passenger trains. We do not join in the operation of any through mail train or any through mail car. We do not join in the operation of through merchandise cars to points north of the Tehachapi Mountains, because the volume of the traffic does not justify it.

Q. What is there lacking to your describing the Southern Pacific-Rock Island operation from California to Chicago as one continuous through line?

A. I was seeking to show the differences, whatever they might be, between that route, in answer to your question, and the route through Ogden. The differences are that by the Ogden route we operate a through mail train from Omaha to San Francisco on a schedule two days two hours and ten minutes, and a through mail car on th

Overland Limited in two days four hours and ten minute
2413 We do not operate either by El Paso in connection with th Rock Island. We do not operate through merchandise cars central California via the Rock Island.

Q. When you use the term "one continuous through route" to d scribe a route portions of which are operated by separate compani what do you mean by that term?

A. I mean the joining in through passenger rates, in joint freig rates, in through billing, and in through bills of lading. Those should regard as the essential features to the operation of a co nected continuous line. We do more. We operate the mail trai as I have described, and a through mail car upon the fastest schedu made, because you know the Government awards the mail to t schedule, and we carry the mail. We join in joint advertising, as explained a day or two ago. We also do that for the Rock Island.

Q. If I have followed your answer, you do all of the things whi you regard as essential to that definition in your relation with t Rock Island. Am I correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And in the sense of the essentials the Southern Pacific and Ro Island operate one through line from California to Chicag 2414 A. In those essentials.

Q. One of the ordinary things to be expected where two ra roads operate as one through continuous line is an effort on the pa of each to get as much traffic as possible to travel over that line, it not?

A. We do not do that with the Rock Island.

Q. And it does not seem to you, then, that it is one of the natur things to be expected in the case of the operation by two compani of one through continuous line?

A. It is not an essential.

Q. And in that particular, if that is in fact contrary to what yo understanding is as to one of the attributes of one through continuo line, then the Central Pacific or the Southern Pacific has not or d not prior to 1901 operate with the Union Pacific as one through co tinuous line?

A. The Southern Pacific did not solicit 100 per cent of the tra continental traffic via the Ogden route.

Q. That is, the effort of the Central Pacific or the Southern Paci Company in operating the Central Pacific was to induce as mu freight as possible between California and points east or south of line from Toledo to East St. Louis not to go by the Uni 2415 Pacific Railroad, but to go by the Southern Pacific Railro

A. The effort was to have the traffic that you have described go preferentially by the southern route.

Q. And therefore not to go by the Union Pacific?

A. That does not follow. If the business could not be secured for the southern route, and was in danger of going by the Santa Fe, it was actively solicited for the Ogden route.

Q. If the effort succeeded, the result was to have the traffic not go by the Union Pacific. That is true, is it not?

A. With respect to that particular traffic, which is a minor part of the whole.

Q. What do you mean by "that particular traffic"?

A. That which you have described east and south of the specified line.

Q. Are you, when you say it was a minor part, taking into consideration that I mean to include everything east and south, even to the Atlantic Ocean?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you regard ninety per cent of the California-Atlantic seaboard traffic as a minor part of the traffic?

2416 A. My answer was that the traffic to and from the territory which you describe represented a minor part of the total transcontinental traffic.

Q. You mean of the total transcontinental traffic of all railroads?

A. Of our railroad. I mean that the traffic from north and west of that line is heavier than from south and east of that line.

Q. In 1899 was that so?

A. It is so to-day, and I think it was so then. Manufacturing has been moving to the Middle West very rapidly in this country.

Q. And you think that in 1899 ninety per cent of the California-Atlantic seaboard traffic plus that amount of traffic which you carried via the Sunset rail route from Middle West territory, south and east of the line from Toledo to East St. Louis, should, fairly and calmly, be described as a minor part of the Southern Pacific Company's transcontinental traffic?

A. Yes; because I would have to describe the other as the major part.

2417 Q. Do you think that ninety per cent of the Atlantic seaboard-California traffic, plus what went from south of that line together, was substantially less than fifty per cent of what was carried through Ogden and El Paso together?

A. The Sunset-Gulf route never carried——

Q. No; I did not ask——

A. Wait a minute. I want to——

Q. Take my question and answer that, if you will. I want you to understand it fully.

A. But you are assuming something that I am not willing to assume.

Q. Let the question be read and answer, if you can, the question which I have put.

(The reporter repeated the pending question as follows:)

"Q. Do you think that ninety per cent of the Atlantic seaboard-California traffic, plus what went from south of that line together, was substantially less than fifty per cent of what was carried through Ogden and El Paso together?"

The WITNESS. I think that ninety per cent of the seaboard traffic of the character that could be handled by the Gulf route, plus that from the territory south of the line that you have described, would be less than fifty per cent of the total traffic handled by the Southern Pacific routes; but the Sunset-Gulf route never handled 2418 ninety per cent of the seaboard traffic.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. What was the highest percentage that the Sunset-Gulf route did handle?

A. Of the total seaboard traffic I could not tell you. Of the New York City traffic it reached between eighty and ninety per cent.

Q. Have you any idea whatever of the percentage of the total Atlantic seaboard traffic to and from California it handled?

A. I think it handled the major part of it.

Q. Considerably the major part of it, did it not?

A. More than half.

Q. It handled the major part of the Pittsburgh common point traffic, did it not?

A. I do not think so.

Q. Have you ever investigated those figures?

A. Oh, I probably knew about them at the time. The Santa Fe was actively engaged in the Pittsburgh traffic.

Q. I mean the major part of the Southern Pacific's Pittsburgh traffic.

A. Oh! Of our own? I am inclined to think it handled 2419 more via New Orleans, from that particular territory than via Ogden.

Mr. BLAIR. What date are you speaking of?

The WITNESS. 1899.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. 1899; yes.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. It handled as high as sixty-five per cent of the Central Freight Association territory traffic, did it not?

A. I never saw anything that would confirm that understanding.

Q. Have you ever investigated those figures with a view to determining what percentage it did carry?

A. I have not, in recent years; no.

Q. You knew that that was the opinion of at least some who were familiar with the Central Freight Association territory?

A. That would not make it my opinion.

Q. Could you put into terms of anything like a percentage how much of the Southern Pacific Company's transcontinental traffic did move via El Paso in 1899?

A. No.

Q. Would you be prepared to say that it was less than 2420 forty-five per cent?

A. From all territories?

Q. From all transcontinental territories.

A. I should think it was.

Q. Was it less than forty-five per cent of all Atlantic seaboard territory and Middle West territory, as you have heretofore defined it?

A. I should think so.

Q. Was it less than forty per cent?

A. Well, I could not get into definite terms. I do not know.

Q. The Southern Pacific Company tried to have that volume which we will call something less than forty-five per cent, and other freight as to which its efforts were not successful, go via the Sunset Route in preference to the Ogden route?

A. Its efforts were to have all of the traffic to and from the Atlantic seaboard territory and south of the Ohio River go by the Sunset Route if its efforts were successful.

Q. And to have it not go, in consequence, by the Union Pacific?

A. No; they did not want it not to go by the Ogden 2421 route, because they found it absolutely necessary to get a haul, very frequently, rather than to have it go to its competitor.

Q. That is, if they could not get it to go by El Paso, their desire not to have it go by the Union Pacific ceased, but up to that point the effort was to have it go not by the Union Pacific; is not that accurate and true?

A. If it could secure the business by the southern route to and from this territory we have described, its effort was not to have it go by Ogden if it could get it by the Sunset. Its effort after that was to secure it via Ogden.

Q. The effort which you have described was a systematic one, was it not?

A. Yes.

Q. It was a preconcerted one?

A. Yes.

Q. And it continued from the time you first knew about the ra road up to 1901?

A. Yes.

Q. And it still continues, except that the division line has be moved east and south from the line that you described from Tole to East St. Louis?

2422 A. Yes.

Q. In the movement of freight from San Francisco via Paso, does the larger part go by the coast line?

A. The lines are used interchangeably to suit the convenience operation. The matter is entirely in the hands of the operating offi to send the traffic south via either the coast line or the Central Paci Valley line or the other lines that are used there as interchanged routes.

Q. Is the coast line easier or harder in matter of grades than t line through Mojave?

A. Somewhat easier.

Q. How does the distance to the common point at Saugus compar

A. It is about the same, I should say.

Q. Do you know, as a matter of actual practice, at all, how t volume going by the one line compares with that going by the othe

A. No.

Q. Do any of the boats touching at Los Angeles have any prefe ential arrangement, as far as you know, with any of the railroads?

A. Not to my knowledge.

2423 Q. And none of them are affiliated with any of the ra roads?

A. That is, you mean boats running through the canal?

Q. Boats running through the canal and touching at Los Angel

A. No affiliation, to my knowledge.

Q. But the Atchison and the Mallory Line work preferentia with each other?

A. Preferentially with respect to the Gulf route; yes.

Q. Does that work both ways—the Mallory Line seeks the Atc son and the Atchison the Mallory Line?

A. Yes.

Q. They are independently operated and controlled, as far as known?

A. I could not say that they are independently operated and co trolled. It has been reported many times that the Santa Fe had interest in the Mallory Line. I do not know.

Q. You only know the rumors on the subject?

A. Yes.

Q. How does the Mallory tonnage capacity compare with your New Orleans and Galveston boats?

A. It is not as large.

2424 Q. What is your total capacity tonnage?

A. Oh! Capacity. I thought you meant tonnage carried.

Q. No; capacity.

A. I think our capacity is about 77,000 tons.

Q. Do you know what the Mallory capacity is, about?

A. Not quite as large. They have a combined fleet now, however, that they use interchangeably. The Atlantic, Gulf & West Indies Steamship Line owns the Clyde Line, the Ward Line, the Porto Rico, and the Mallory Line. All of those ships are available for the Galveston service from time to time as they may be needed.

Q. Do you know anything about the California tonnage carried by the Mallory Line?

A. No; I do not.

Q. How long has the Southern Pacific Company been confiding certain of its advertising funds to the Union Pacific Railroad Company?

A. It began during the merger and has continued since the unmerger.

Q. Did it begin away back in 1901, practically?

A. I do not think as far back as that; no. The system of 2425 joint advertising of two connecting lines, I think, was organized some time between 1901 and 1910 and the eastbound money put in the hands of the Southern Pacific Company to spend in eastbound advertising and the westbound money put in the hands of the Union Pacific Company to spend in westbound advertising. That is the practice to-day.

Q. Is that for freight and passenger business?

A. Only passenger. That advertises through train service.

Q. How does the time from Mojave, say, to Chicago for freight traffic over the Atchison compare with the time via El Paso and the Rock Island?

A. If you make that Los Angeles, I would say it is about the same.

Q. About the same from Los Angeles?

A. Yes.

Q. Is there any reason why the Southern Pacific and Rock Island together could not compete successfully with the Atchison for all California-Middle West and Atlantic seaboard business?

A. On all California business?

Q. Between the two; yes.

2426 A. It competes successfully with the Atchison for south California. It might hold its own with the Atchison to c tral California. It could not hold its own with the Ogden route.

Q. That is, from all parts of California to the Middle West and the Atlantic seaboard the Southern Pacific-Rock Island route ou to be able to operate on even terms with the Atchison.

A. It is 200 miles longer, according to my recollection, than Atchison.

Q. That is, for points north of Los Angeles?

A. No; it is 200 miles longer to Los Angeles.

Q. It is 200 miles longer there?

A. Yes.

Mr. McEnerney. Which is—the Sunset?

The Witness. The Rock Island line from Chicago.

By Mr. McClennen:

Q. The Rock Island is the shortest connection, is it not?

A. For the Southern Pacific El Paso route; yes.

Q. You have a gateway with the Rock Island now at Tucson, h you not?

A. Yes; with the El Paso & Southwestern at Tucson.

2427 Q. Does that shorten the route over the El Paso route?

A. No.

Q. Is it substantially the same?

A. About.

Q. Does it affect the divisions?

A. No; it does not affect the divisions east and west of El Pa

Q. Take, for example, from Chicago to San Francisco; do y divide in the same proportions with the Rock Island, whether t delivery is made at El Paso or Tucson?

A. No. The same division accrues east of El Paso, whether t traffic is handled west of there by the Southern Pacific or by t El Paso & Southwestern. The proportion west of El Paso is th subdivided between the El Paso & Southwestern from El Paso Tucson and the Southern Pacific beyond.

Q. That results in a somewhat lower division to the Southe Pacific if it comes to Tucson?

A. Yes.

Q. The possession of the initial or terminal lines is, as a practic matter, of substantial advantage in competition, is it not?

2428 A. If that line has been in the territory for a number years, and industries have built up around it and are serv by it, it is important.

Q. Should you think that the Central Pacific, viewed as a separa railroad, was in a better or a worse position than the Union Paci Railroad, so far as competing with the Southern Pacific Railroad, if separate, in California, is concerned.

A. The Union Pacific is in a better position, because it has three arms extending, one to southern California, one to Central California, and one to the north coast.

Q. That was not so in 1899?

A. The Southern California line was not there in 1899.

Q. The Southern California line, meaning by that the San Pedro line, is not very practicable as a route for the Union Pacific for points north of Mojave?

A. It is not, under existing conditions, because of the short route west of Ogden. The same reasons operate to influence the Union Pacific to work the Central Pacific business by Ogden as influence the other lines to work the southern California business the other way; that is, the line by which they can give the best service.

2429 Q. The short line to Portland, under the conditions of railroading existing to-day, is not of great practical value as a means of access from Ogden or Granger to California for transcontinental freight, is it?

A. It does not carry any substantial freight traffic, if any, via Portland to-day.

Q. And it would not compete on anything like even terms with a direct road from Ogden or Salt Lake to California?

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel desires that this question should go in subject to their plea of estoppel and to the evidence in support of the estoppel which they have now entered, based on the contentions of the Government in what we have referred to as the Union Pacific merger suit.

(By request, the reporter repeated the pending question as above recorded.)

The WITNESS. I should say that it could fix the terms for the other route.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. You mean by that, that the presence of that reserve would put the Union Pacific in a position to see that the direct route did not seriously overreach it in the matter of terms?

2430 A. Yes.

Q. And that is all that you mean, is it not?

A. Yes; I mean that the Portland route is there as a rate-making factor.

Q. Now, apart from the possession of the San Pedro route and the Portland route, has the Union Pacific, in your mind, any better competitive chance with the Southern Pacific than the Central Pacific alone would have?

A. Yes.

Q. What other element is there giving the Union Pacific a better chance than the Central Pacific?

A. The support of the Southern Pacific lines in California.

Q. Is there any reason to suppose that the Central Pacific lines would not have as much support from the Southern Pacific lines as the Union Pacific now gets?

A. I do not know why it should have.

Q. As a matter of practical railroading, would it not be to its interest to further the Central Pacific traffic?

A. I do not know why the Southern Pacific would not be just as glad to handle the traffic to Stockton and Sacramento and de-2431 liver it to the Western Pacific as to deliver it to the Central Pacific. The revenue would be the same.

Q. Is there any reason to suppose that it would prefer the Western Pacific to the Central Pacific?

A. No. What the Central would lose is the absolute support that it has from the Southern Pacific to-day on the major part of the Calfornia traffic.

Q. Would not the Southern Pacific, as a matter of practical railroading, desire the support of the Ogden route, and naturally reciprocate so as to get it?

A. What else would the Ogden route do with the traffic?

Q. Do you mean by that that the Ogden route would have to deliver it to the Southern Pacific Company?

A. I mean that it would not be likely to deliver it to the Santa Fe and it would not be likely to deliver it to the Western Pacific.

Q. Why not?

A. The Western Pacific is a parallel line.

Q. It would not need to deliver it at those points where they are parallel, would it?

A. Where what is parallel—the Western Pacific?

Q. Yes.

A. It might deliver the Marysville business, for ex-2432 ample, to the Western Pacific.

Q. Do you think that the Central Pacific would naturally deliver to the Western Pacific for Marysville rather than to the Southern Pacific at Roseville for Marysville?

A. I would not want to enter the field of speculation to that extent. I would like to have somebody tell me what the Central Pacific would do under those circumstances. I do not think any man knows. It would revolutionize the map.

Q. The Southern Pacific rails are the important terminal rails in California for the Ogden route, so far as it is not reached by the Central Pacific Railroad itself, are they not?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you not think that it is probable that the Ogden route, so far as it could not reach destinations over the Central Pacific's own rails, would naturally use the Southern Pacific's rails?

A. I do not know why, if there are other rails reaching the same points.

Q. You have no reason to think that they would not, have you?

A. Suppose the Southern Pacific adopted a policy of neu-2433 trality between the Central Pacific and the Western Pacific in hauling this business up to junctions and getting the same revenue; the Central Pacific would not be under any reciprocal obligation to the Southern Pacific.

Q. That is, in a sense the Western Pacific and the Atchison and the Southern Pacific would be competitors for the delivery of Central Pacific freight?

A. Yes. They are to-day.

Q. The relation of the Union Pacific to the situation north of Mojave, in California, is much the same that the Central Pacific's situation would be, is it not?

A. No. The manifest interest which the Southern Pacific has in securing the haul to Ogden is the thing which protects the Union Pacific.

Q. You mean, you think that a dissolution between the Southern and the Central would not operate in any way to the advantage of the Union Pacific?

A. I do.

Q. You do not think that the Union Pacific would be put in any stronger position by such a dissolution?

A. No.

Mr. BLAIR. You do not mean, by the dissolution, the Union 2434 Pacific getting the Central Pacific, do you? I think it is fair to the witness that he should know what you mean by that.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. Well, it had not occurred to me that there was any doubt about what I meant.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. What did you understand me to mean, in answering, Mr. Spence?

A. I understood you to mean the Central Pacific as a separate and independent line.

Mr. BLAIR. That is what you did mean, was it?

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. And in answering, you answered on that assumption?

A. On that understanding; yes.

Q. The Central Pacific is to-day in an advantageous position in competition by reason of having Southern Pacific terminal lines to deliver over and obtain freight from?

A. Yes.

Q. The Union Pacific does not, so far as California is concerned, have the advantage of possessing any terminal lines north of Mojave in California, does it?

A. No.

2435 Q. The Central Pacific, with the Southern Pacific, is in a more influential position, in consequence of those terminal lines, than the Union Pacific in the matter of California transcontinental business, is it not?

A. The Union Pacific derives practically all of the benefits of the advantageous position that the Central Pacific occupies by being joined with the Southern Pacific to-day.

Q. The Union Pacific receives, you mean by that, the advantage of such freight as does move through Ogden over the Central Pacific?

A. And the advantage of the Southern Pacific's support in securing that traffic.

Q. To the extent that the Southern Pacific is not seeking to get it the other way, via El Paso?

A. Naturally.

Q. In that sense the welfare of the Union Pacific is dependent upon the attitude of the Southern Pacific toward the respective gateways? Is not that true?

A. To the extent of the solicitation of the Southern Pacific via other gateways, it is.

Q. That is, so long as the Southern Pacific deals with the Union Pacific in the effort to advance the business that will pass over 2436 the Union Pacific, the Union Pacific is, by so much, advantaged?

A. That effort is guaranteed the Union Pacific so long as the Central Pacific is under the control of the Southern Pacific by its very ownership.

Q. And the Union Pacific is dependent upon the existence and continuance of that effort?

A. It is dependent upon the Southern Pacific making the effort that it is to its own interest to make while it has the Central Pacific.

Q. And that effort of the Southern Pacific is diminished just by so much by its ambition to get as much as possible via the El Paso route?

A. Which is a very limited diminution.

Q. By saying it is a very limited diminution you intended to answer the question rather in the affirmative, with that limitation, did you not, than in the negative?

A. I intended to answer the question in pursuance of the statistics that are on record.

Q. You intended to assent, did you not, to that effort in favor of the Union Pacific being to some extent diminished by the desire of the Southern Pacific to get freight by El Paso?

2437 A. To that extent.

Q. The Central Pacific, if not connected with the Southern Pacific, would be actuated, naturally, by the desire to move all the freight possible through Ogden, would it not?

A. I should think so.

(Whereupon, at 6.30 o'clock p. m., an adjournment was taken until to-morrow, Saturday, April 24, 1915, at 10.30 o'clock a. m.)

2438 TWENTY-NINTH DAY.

ROOM 2506, 165 BROADWAY,
New York City, Saturday, April 24, 1915.

The hearing was resumed, pursuant to adjournment, at 10.30 o'clock a. m., before Frank R. Hanna, special examiner.

Present on behalf of the United States: James W. Orr, Esq., Edward F. McClennen, Esq., and Edward E. Gann, Esq., special assistants to the Attorney General.

Present on behalf of the defendants: W. F. Herrin, Esq., J. P. Blair, Esq., and Garret McEnerney, Esq., for the Southern Pacific Company.

2439 LEWIS J. SPENCE, the witness under examination at the taking of adjournment, resumed the stand and testified further as follows:

Cross-examination (continued) by Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. Mr. Spence, yesterday, at page 2331 of the record, you gave 90,000 tons as the eastbound tonnage delivered by the Southern Pacific to the Atchison, destined to points east of Albuquerque?

A. Albuquerque; yes.

Q. Did that include the tonnage originating on the industrial tracks of the Southern Pacific Company in and about San Francisco?

A. No.

Q. Could you give any idea of what part of the State this 90,000 tons originated in?

A. No.

Q. That is, how it was distributed among the parts of the State, I will say.

A. No; I have no distribution of it.

Q. In your direct testimony, at page 2112, you state that the 2440 line from Tehama to Roseville, Brighton, Stockton, and Lathrop of the Central Pacific, forms the shortest line of the Sunset Route, between Oregon and northern California, and points south and east.

You, of course, mean between Oregon and northern California, on the one hand——

A. On the one hand.

Q. (Continuing.) And points south and east on the other hand?

A. Yes.

Q. The alternative route, if you confine yourself to Southern Pacific rails, is through Davis and via the Benicia cut-off?

A. Yes.

Q. On page 2113 you say the line of the Central Pacific from Lathrop to Goshen is part of an alternative route from points north of Lathrop, as well as from Oakland and San Francisco, to points south and east.

If you disregard the freight having origin or delivery between Lathrop and Ogden, that portion of the line is not the best of the Southern Pacific routes for San Francisco and Oakland business, is it?

2441 A. I think so. It is the line that is chiefly used. It is the line over which the passenger service is routed.

Q. Is not that pasenger service routed that way for the purpose of serving the local points on the line rather than for the advantage to San Francisco and Oakland when dealing with points south of Goshen?

A. It is routed that way, the trains are operated that way, as an operating convenience to avoid congestion by concentration on those lines and by operating in that way all of the points on that line north of Goshen Junction are given a through service, given the benefit of the through service to southern California, which they would not otherwise have.

Q. If you were leaving out of consideration the places between Lathrop and Goshen, the more natural line from Oakland and San Francisco to points at Goshen and south would be via Tracy and Ingle, would it not?

A. I would not regard it as a more natural line.

Q. The mileage from Oakland to Goshen would be no more?

A. I think it would be no less.

Q. Than by Ingle?

A. I think it would be no less.

Q. You think it would be about the same?

2442 A. My impression would be that the mileage would be about the same.

Q. What places of importance are there between Goshen and Mojave, if any?

A. Between Goshen and Mojave?

Q. Yes.

A. The stations in the oil section are the most important, Famosa, Oil City, and Bakersfield; and the line served from Bakersfield by a branch.

Q. Are they important for the outgoing oil traffic or have they a large tonnage otherwise because of the oil industry?

A. They have the inbound tonnage that is incident to the oil industry, and they have the passenger traffic of the oil industry that must be served in and out.

Q. What are the large oil concerns there?

A. I could not begin to enumerate them by name.

Q. For points south of Saugus the coast line from San Francisco and Oakland is, if anything, an easier route than the line through the San Joaquin Valley and over the Tehachapi, is it not?

A. Yes.

Q. Since I asked you about the comparison from Tracy to 2443 Goshen via Lathrop or via Ingle, have you looked up and found that the mileage from Tracy to Goshen via Lathrop is 241 miles, and the mileage from Tracy to Goshen via Ingle is 247 miles?

A. Yes.

Q. On page 2134 of your direct examination you refer to the arrangements that have prevailed for through rates and divisions with other transcontinental lines. That means, so far as anything north of Mojave is concerned, the Atchison and the Western Pacific, does it not?

A. Yes.

Q. Exclusively? There are no other lines?

A. No.

Q. Has the Atchison arrangement been uniform since 1885 or so?

A. I can not say as to 1885. For many years, within my recollection, it has been uniform.

Q. Without going into precise figures, what is the method of arriving at the divisions on Atchison freight which you short-haul and deliver at California junctions, to the Atchison, or that you receive from the Atchison?

A. My understanding is that the divisions were arrived

2444 at on the basis of what we call "constructive mileage", the short line taking something for its short service.

Q. That is, without going into precise figures, you divide on a mileage basis, and you call every mile of the short haul a mile and a half or two miles, or whatever fraction may be adopted?

A. That is the theory.

Q. The arrangement with the Western Pacific is a different arrangement, is it not?

A. No; it is exactly the same.

Q. The Southern Pacific and the Western Pacific also have a working agreement, have they not, by which the freight delivered by one to the other, destined to Ogden or Salt Lake or eastward, is divided as to rate, fifty-fifty, irrespective of the length which either line hauls?

A. No; the divisions between the Southern Pacific and the Western Pacific are that the Southern Pacific takes twenty-three per cent of the west of Missouri River proportion of the through transcontinental rate, which is the same percentage that it takes from Santa Fe; the same percentage that the Santa Fe and Western Pacific charge each other, and the same percentage that they charge 2445 the Southern Pacific for like service.

Q. Twenty-three per cent of the west of Missouri River proportion?

A. Of the west of Missouri River proportion of the transcontinental rate.

Q. Twenty-three per cent of the west of Missouri River proportion is one-half of the California-Ogden proportion of the California-Missouri River rate?

A. That is the effect of the calculation. I would like to add that the Western Pacific being a part of a system of railroads from the Missouri River and east thereof, we are not interested in that subdivision. That system of railroads is accorded exactly the same treatment as the Santa Fe.

Q. That is, whatever accrues west of the Missouri River to that river and that which accrues east of the river to the Santa Fe, that division is, as between the Southern Pacific Company and the Santa Fe, favorable to the Santa Fe when the Santa Fe has the terminal line, and favorable to the Southern Pacific when the Southern Pacific has the terminal line?

A. Yes.

2446 Q. Does that or does it not mean that when the Atchison from the east terminated at Mojave for all points north of Mojave the Southern Pacific received twenty-three per cent of the Missouri River rate for hauling to Mojave and the Atchison twenty-three per cent of the Missouri River rate for hauling from Mojave to the Missouri River?

A. No; the Atchison received seventy-seven per cent for hauling from Mojave to the Missouri River, if the Southern Pacific received twenty-three west of Mojave.

Q. On page 2161 in your direct examination you were asked this question, and answered as follows:

"Q. Prior to 1901 did the control or ownership of the Central Pacific lines by the Southern Pacific Company, the preferential solicitation and routing which was described, prevent competition between the Ogden route and the Sunset line or Sunset-Gulf route?

"A. It did not."

You meant by that, did you not, that the Union Pacific and the Iowa lines and the eastern lines were competing to get the traffic via Ogden and the Southern Pacific was competing to get the traffic via the Sunset-Gulf route?

2447 A. Yes; Atlantic seaboard traffic especially I had in mind.

Q. It applied, as you have elsewhere described, to a certain portion of the Middle West territory also?

A. A small portion on the east, as previously defined.

Q. Will you refer to one of the larger maps, say defendants' Exhibit No. 54, and state the important points in California north of Mojave which are on the Central Pacific rails or connected by ferry with them, and then state separately the important points north of Mojave which are not on those rails?

Mr. BLAIR. How far north of Mojave? Do you want the whole of California?

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. The whole of California north of Mojave.

A. You want those which are on the Central Pacific rails first?

Q. Yes; give those first.

A. Fresno, Madera, Merced, Stockton, Sacramento, Marysville, San Jose, Oakland, Red Bluff, Los Molinos, Redding, Dunsmuir, and, connected by ferry, San Francisco.

What was the other part of the question?

Q. Now, the important points in the whole of California 2448 north of Majave that are not on the Central Pacific rails or connected by ferry therewith.

A. Santa Barbara, Lompoc, Guadalupe, Betteravia, San Luis Obispo, Paso Robles, Salinas, Del Monte, Pacific Grove, Watsonville, Hollister, Santa Cruz; all suburban towns between Menlo Park and San Francisco, Berkeley, and all of the suburban towns on the Oakland-Berkeley electrified line; South Vallejo, Napa, Calistoga, Santa Rosa, Rumsey, Elmira, Davis, Fruto, Oroville, Placerville, Ione, Valley Springs, Milton, Swiss-Italian Colony, Ramond, Spreckels, Pajaro, Pollasky, Exeter, Porterville, Springville, Famosa, Oil City, Bakersfield, Olig, Kerman, Ingle.

All of those points mentioned are served by the Southern Pacific rails.

I do not know how I can begin to enumerate those that are served by other lines.

Mr. BLAIR. If you do not know them, say so.

The WITNESS. I am unable to enumerate those that are served by the Santa Fe and Western Pacific that are not reached by the Southern Pacific or Central Pacific.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

2449 Q. Do you think of any sizable places that are served by the Atchison or the Western Pacific that are not served by the Southern Pacific? If so, what are they?

A. I do not think of any important places, because the Atchison and Western Pacific have come into the important towns that the Southern Pacific-Central Pacific system had reached.

Mr. HERRIN. There is Eureka and all that country.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. There is a section, is there not, as suggested by Mr. Herrin lying north of Santa Rosa and running up to Eureka, that is served by the Northwestern Pacific, which is a joint line of the Atchison and the Southern Pacific?

A. Yes. I should have added this: Susanville and Westwood should be included in the Central Pacific enumeration.

Q. Is there anything of importance between Mojave and the Nevada line on the Central Pacific?

A. On the south end of it there is a heavy movement of construction material, such as was used in the Los Angeles aqueduct. In fact the south end of the line was built to move material for the Los Angeles aqueduct.

2450 Q. Now, will you look at the list which you have given of the Central Pacific important points, which you began with Fresno and ended with San Francisco, and state which of those are not reached by Southern Pacific rails?

A. Red Bluff, Los Molinos, Redding, and Dunsmuir.

Q. On the list of non-Central Pacific points, those beginning with Santa Barbara and running down as you gave them through Santa Cruz are on the coast line of the Southern Pacific, are they not?

A. Yes.

Q. In this list the places named by you from South Vallejo to Davis lie northerly of San Francisco Bay or San Pablo Bay?

A. Yes; they are on the line extending from Benicia to Sacramento.

Q. The largest shipping centers are those which are on the Central Pacific list?

A. The largest shipping centers of transcontinental freight are not those on the Central Pacific list.

Q. What are the conspicuous shipping centers on the Southern Pacific list which are not on the Central Pacific list?

2451 A. Nearly all the beans shipped from California originate on the coast line, which I have named here, and stations which I have not included. The barley originates on that line; every station produces some, including stations which I have mentioned and some which I have not mentioned. Considerable of the asphalt originates on that line, and on the north end of it considerable fruit; and that business originates at, you might say, every station. Watsonville produces 5,000 carloads of apples every year—the Watsonville district.

Q. Is Fresno a large shipping center?

A. Fresno proper is not a large shipping center. The business that comes out of Fresno originates principally in the Porterville district, served by the Southern Pacific rails.

Q. Is Madera a large shipping center?

A. No. All the traffic which comes from Madera originates in the Swiss-Italian colony on Southern Pacific rails.

Q. Is Merced a large shipping center?

A. I would not call it a large shipping center; no.

Q. Is Stockton?

A. Not of transcontinental traffic.

Q. Is Sacramento?

2452 A. No.

Q. Is Marysville?

A. No.

Q. Is San Jose?

A. San Jose ships more, I should say, than any of the other points you have enumerated.

Q. Is Oakland?

A. No.

Q. Is Red Bluff?

A. No.

Q. Is Dunsmuir?

A. Lumber comes from up in that country. I do not know as to the station, whether Dunsmuir ships much or not.

Q. Is San Francisco?

A. No.

Q. Are any of these points on the line beginning with Fresno and ending with San Francisco that I have just been over large receiving centers?

A. Yes; some of them.

Q. Which?

A. I speak of large receiving centers as receiving transcontinental traffic.

2453 Q. That is what I mean.

A. Stockton, Sacramento, San Jose, Oakland, and San Francisco.

Q. The competition between the Sunset Route and the Ogden route, in the sense that you have used the term in, remained just as strong all through the Union Pacific merger period as it was before?

A. I said yesterday, in response to your question, that so far as any instructions which I had received as the eastern representative of the Southern Pacific were concerned, the competition had remained as strong for the Atlantic seaboard traffic; but that I did not know what instructions the joint traffic director of the Union Pacific had given the Southern Pacific officers in California.

Q. Then you meant by that that you do not know whether it had remained as strong through that period?

A. No; I could only speak for part of it.

Q. And from your general knowledge of the traffic situation during that period, that is as extensively as you could state it?

A. Yes.

2454 Q. If the Central Pacific Railroad were operated separately the policy which you say has always been pursued by the Southern Pacific Company with reference to the Atchison would naturally give to the Central Pacific Company the same privileges and opportunities over the Southern Pacific rails that the Atchison has enjoyed?

A. I should say that the policy of the Southern Pacific Company in that respect would be as liberal as it has always been; but it takes two to make a bargain, and the policy would probably have to be reciprocal to make a bargain at all. I could not say what the other party to the bargain would do.

Q. In the natural course of events the Central Pacific, if it were separately owned and controlled—and I mean by that, not only separate from the Southern Pacific but from every other railroad—would naturally cooperate strongly with the Union Pacific and the Union Pacific with it?

A. Yes.

Q. And that cooperation would naturally bring a desire, at least on the part of both of those railroads, to avail themselves of the opportunities furnished by the terminal line of the Southern Pacific Company to California points not reached by the Central Pacific?

A. I think the desire would naturally be that.

2455 Q. The natural desire of the Southern Pacific Company would be towards moving through Ogden that freight which it could not successfully obtain for the Sunset-Gulf route or through El Paso?

A. I should say that the Southern Pacific Company might be indifferent as to whether the traffic moved through Ogden or through Salt Lake City.

Q. Do you think that if the Southern Pacific Company remained ambitious to serve the interests of its patrons it would be at all likely to prefer the service furnished over the Missouri Pacific and allied lines to that furnished over the Ogden route?

A. I do not think that it would be likely to prefer either. I think that the routes would be open, the revenue of the Southern Pacific Company would be the same, and the shipper would be invited to pay his money and take his choice.

Q. Having the two routes—the Central Pacific and the Western Pacific—open to it, the Southern Pacific Company would be left in a good position to handle freight that could not be controlled through the El Paso gateway? I refer to transcontinental freight.

A. It would be left in a position to get a short haul.

2456 Q. The Central Pacific Railroad, if it were separated and cooperating with the Union Pacific Railroad would become an active competitor of the Southern Pacific Company on transcontinental business, as a practical matter, would it not?

A. With the through route of the Southern Pacific the Central Pacific is an active competitor to-day.

Q. You forget that we are not arguing just that point now, but I am asking——

A. That is what I understood your question to be.

Q. I will have the question read, so that you can see just what it was.

Mr. McENERNEY. Did not your question carry an implication, which he has replied to? Is not that the trouble?

Mr. McCLENNEN. No; the witness argued the other side and ignored the question asked.

Mr. McENERNEY. Does not your question presuppose the nonexistence of a thing which exists, and is not that why he answered it in that way?

Mr. McCLENNEN. I will ask to have the question read, and you can see if it is not a perfectly fair question and susceptible of a perfectly definite, direct answer.

2457 Mr. McENERNEY. I thought that it was a question like "Have you quit beating your wife?" It may be that I am wrong.

Mr. McCLENNEN. It may be that your impression to that effect may have been caused by your not hearing it in full. Now, I will ask to have the question read, so that its character may be observ by my opponents, and its contents by the witness, and then answer directly, if possible.

(The reporter read the pending question, as follows:)

"Q. The Central Pacific Railroad, if it were separated and coo erating with the Union Pacific Railroad, would become an acti competitor of the Southern Pacific Company on transcontinent business, as a practical matter, would it not?"

The WITNESS. I could not answer that it would become becau it is.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. It would be, would it not?

A. It would be as it is.

Q. Will you describe just what you mean as the competition whi now exists by the Central Pacific Railroad against the South Pacific Railroad?

2458 A. All of the connections of the Central Pacific Railro with an army of forces, use the facilities of the Central Pac to-day to actively compete for all of the traffic.

Q. Perhaps I did not make my question clear enough. I did ask you whether the connections of the Central Pacific Railr were now competing with the Southern Pacific Railroad. I as you if the Central Pacific Railroad itself was now competing w the Southern Pacific Railroad—in and of itself.

A. I do not think that the Central Pacific could compete with Southern Pacific, in and of itself.

Q. Understanding by your answer that it could not, that mean incidentally, therefore, that it did not, I now ask you if Central Pacific Railroad were separated and were cooperating w the Union Pacific Railroad, it, the Central Pacific Railroad, wo become an active competitor of the Southern Pacific Railroad transcontinental business?

A. I must say that it would not become an active competitor.

Q. Why not?

A. Because it is an active competitor.

2459 Q. That is to say, you say it is now an active competi although you also say that you do not say how it could com with the Southern Pacific Railroad?

A. In and of itself, I said.

Q. If the Central Pacific Railroad were separately operated natural effort and competition in that sense would be to pers business to travel via Ogden? Now, I am not referring to what other connections would do, but what that road itself would do.

A. That would be its natural effort.

Q. And consequently its effort would be to persuade traffic not to move via El Paso?

A. That would be the effect of an affirmative solicitation of the other kind.

Q. Yes. The efforts of the Central Pacific Railroad, and of the Southern Pacific Railroad on transcontinental business, would then be directed against each other, and competitive in that sense, would they not?

A. Unless the Southern Pacific joined with and delivered this business to the Central Pacific, versus the Western Pacific.

Q. The effort, so far as it exists, of the Southern Pacific to 2460 get traffic via El Paso would naturally not be diminished if it did not own the Central Pacific or the Western Pacific, would it?

A. No.

Q. The effort would be as great as it is to-day in favor of El Paso?

A. I think so.

Q. And probably greater?

A. I do not know that it would be greater for the same insuperable reasons that exist to-day.

Q. Competition as a practical matter does furnish an inducement for the maintenance of good service and the improvement of service on the part of the competitors?

A. Yes.

Q. And competition has played a great part in the development and improvement of the service furnished by the railroads to the shippers?

A. Everywhere.

Q. And will in all probability continue to do so?

A. I expect so.

(Whereupon a recess was taken until two o'clock p. m.)

2461 AFTER RECESS.

LEWIS J. SPENCE, the witness under examination at the taking of recess, resumed the stand and testified further as follows:

Redirect examination by Mr. BLAIR:

Q. In mentioning the names of towns on and off the Central Pacific lines I notice you did not mention among the names on the Southern Pacific line and not on the Central Pacific, Monterey, Richmond, Bay Point, Benicia, and Petaluma. Those are all places on the Southern Pacific line?

A. Yes.

Q. And not on the Central Pacific?

A. No.

Q. And the originators of traffic in some amount?

A. Some traffic.

Q. They are as important places as many of the other places you named?

A. Yes; some of them.

Q. I notice also, in stating the names of places on the Central 2462 Pacific which were also reached by the Southern Pacific lines, you included Madera and Merced and Stockton. In what way are those three places reached by Southern Pacific lines?

A. By disconnected branches.

Q. By branches which have no connection with the other lines of the Southern Pacific system; not standing in the name of the Central Pacific?

A. Yes.

Q. In the cross-examination you were questioned in regard to the citrus fruit movement from southern California via the Ogden route, which you described as a seasonal movement, occurring regularly about two months of the year. I understood you to say that was due to climatic and commercial conditions.

A. Yes.

Q. Which overcame for the time being the natural disadvantages of the Central Pacific line?

A. Yes.

Q. When that movement occurred was it accompanied by a proportionate cessation of the movement via El Paso?

A. Yes; the movement via both routes is seasonal.

2463 Q. Was that movement due to any conditions which the rail carriers created or could create?

A. No.

Q. As far as it was influenced by any persons, by what persons was it controlled or influenced?

A. The shippers.

Q. Did any of that traffic have origin or destination on any line of the Central Pacific?

A. No.

Q. I understood you also to say that the Panama Canal was opened for business about what time?

A. August 15, 1914.

Q. And what effect did the opening of that canal and the inauguration of the steamship lines which you have referred to have upon the movement of transcontinental traffic, especially traffic between California and Atlantic seaboard territory?

A. I should say that it revolutionized the movement by a radical reduction of rates.

Q. It revolutionized the tonnage movement as it existed prior to that time?

A. Prior to that time; yes.

2464 Q. Is that effect likely to be temporary or is it likely to increase or decrease in the future?

A. It will be permanent, and is likely to increase.

Q. In regard to Nevada traffic via the El Paso route, westbound, there appears to have been a movement of some 539 tons. What is the explanation of that movement?

A. It consisted almost entirely of grinding pebbles which are used in the crushing of ore in the Tonopah district, and moved via the Sunset Route upon a rate which was created by a combination of a rate of fifty cents from New York to San Francisco originally made against sea competition and a rate from San Francisco to Tonopah.

Q. It consisted entirely, then, or almost entirely, of one commodity?

A. Yes.

Q. It appears, I believe, from the statement prepared by you, that there was no eastbound movement to Nevada?

A. No.

Q. Via the El Paso route?

A. None whatever.

Q. What kind of a route, Mr. Spence, is the all-rail route from northern and central California via New Orleans to and from Middle West territory?

2465 A. It may be regarded, under the existing conditions, as an impracticable route.

Q. Is it your recollection and understanding that the Santa Fe was ahead of the through route via Ogden formed by the Southern Pacific, the Union Pacific, and its eastern connections in getting into a position to offer as good service as the Sunset-Gulf route?

A. I have no such recollection. My understanding of the matter is that through billing and coordination of lines came about very much about the same time.

Q. Between all of the all-rail lines?

A. Yes.

Q. It is true, is it not, that the opening of this Sunset-Gulf route created, as it were, a great deal of transcontinental traffic which had not before that time been in existence?

A. It created it in the sense that it drew traffic from the schooner lines—sailing vessels.

Q. Did it not afford facilities for marketing traffic which did not before exist, so as to create a market which was not previously open to California products?

2466 A. It afforded better facilities than had ever before existed.

Q. Did not that have the effect of causing the movement of traffic which could not move under the existing conditions?

A. Under the conditions that previously existed?

Q. Yes.

A. I should think so.

Q. For fourteen years, from 1869 to 1883, the Southern Pacific had a 100 per cent interest in improving the transcontinental line through Ogden, did it not?

A. Yes.

Q. And naturally it must have made that effort?

A. I should think so.

Mr. McClennen. Petitioner objects to the question as excessively leading, as addressed to a witness who had nothing to do with the business prior to 1883.

By Mr. Blair:

Q. Now, Mr. Spence, if the difficulty as to coordinating the through all-rail lines was with the eastern carriers, at Omaha and farther east, which company would naturally be expected to assume the burden of arousing those connections and bringing about that coordination?

2467 Mr. McClennen. The petitioner objects to the question as calling for an opinion upon a question which is in part one of law as to the legal duty of the carriers, and as to a matter which is incompetent and immaterial, and as to which it does not appear that the witness is qualified to speak.

(By request, the reporter read the pending question as above recorded.)

The Witness. The immediate connection of those lines.

By Mr. Blair:

Q. Speaking of the Ogden route, would that mean the Union Pacific or the Southern Pacific?

A. The Union Pacific.

Q. That would be in accordance with the natural way in which railroads work under such circumstances?

A. Yes.

Q. The Union Pacific had a 100 per cent interest in securing such coordination, did it not?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know of any hypnotic influence exerted by Mr. Stubbs during that period, or by any one connected with the Southern Pacific, over the officials of the Union Pacific to prevent that natural action on their part?

2468 Mr. McCLENNEN. The petitioner objects to the question as introducing an immaterial realm of speculation as to what the defendants mean to describe as "hypnotic."

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. You may answer the question, and if you have any doubt as to what I mean I will explain it.

A. I do not know of any influence of any kind that was exercised, or could have been.

Q. Do you know Mr. Thomas Schumacher?

A. Yes.

Q. Was he connected with the Union Pacific during at least some considerable part of that period?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know Mr. John A. Monroe?

A. Yes.

Q. Was he connected with the Union Pacific during that time?

A. Yes.

Q. Those are the two gentlemen who have been witnesses for the petitioner in this case?

A. Yes.

2469 Q. If the Southern Pacific or Mr. Stubbs had failed to cooperate with the Union Pacific in securing proper coordination, or in improving the service by the Ogden route, would not those two witnesses have been likely to know it?

Mr. McCLENNEN. The petitioner objects to the question as leading, calling for an opinion upon a question as to which the witness is in no better position than the court upon the evidence to express an opinion, and upon a matter which is not properly a subject of opinion evidence.

The WITNESS. Undoubtedly.

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. During the period of the merger of the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific was there any independent Southern Pacific Company?

Mr. McCLENNEN. The petitioner objects to the question as calling upon the witness to express an opinion upon a question of law, not upon a matter which is proper matter for opinion evidence, as to which it does not appear that the witness is qualified to express an opinion.

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel for defendants explains to the witness that he is asking the question as to the actual practical operation of the Southern Pacific Company and its lines, and as to the fact.

2470 Mr. McCLENNEN. The question is further objected to as too general in form, and so phrased that a responsive answer to it will of necessity not indicate the facts as distinct from opinions of the witness based upon facts not stated.

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. You may answer the question.

A. There was no independent Southern Pacific policy.

Q. What do you mean by that?

A. I mean that there was no policy that was not dominated by the interests in control of the Southern Pacific.

Q. What interest was in control of the Southern Pacific?

A. The Union Pacific interest.

Q. Leaving aside the Ogden route, in what competitive fields were the Southern Pacific system and the Union Pacific system engaged at the time of and before the merger in 1901 in the contest for traffic?

A. Traffic between Atlantic seaboard and Colorado, between Atlantic seaboard and Utah; traffic between San Francisco and Portland, the Union Pacific having operated a steamship line between those ports and the Southern Pacific a rail line; transcontinental Oregon traffic; traffic between California and points in Ore-

2471 gon and Montana, and Asiatic traffic.

Q. How about traffic in the Willamette Valley?

A. The Union Pacific operated a steamship line on the Willamette River in competition with the rail lines of the Southern Pacific.

Q. In each of those competitive fields, was there actual competition at the time I have mentioned?

A. Yes.

Q. In regard to traffic substantial in amount?

A. Yes.

Q. I do not mean substantial in comparison with the total traffic of the two systems, but considered by itself.

A. Substantial in volume.

Q. Referring to the alternative rail routes via the Southern Pacific Ogden gateway and the Southern Pacific El Paso gateway, between California on the one hand and Middle West territory and Atlantic seaboard territory on the other, through what connections is the El Paso gateway made a practicable alternate route?

A. The El Paso & Southwestern and the Rock Island and eastern connections thereof; the Kansas City, Mexico & Orient, connecting at Alpine, and eastern connections thereof.

2472 Q. Are those the principal connections through which the El Paso gateway is for practical purposes an alternative route with the Ogden gateway?

A. Yes.

Q. When was the Rock Island connection made?

A. In 1902.

Q. Due to the construction of the Rock Island lines?

A. Due to the completion of the Rock Island lines to Santa Rosa.

Q. When were the Kansas City, Mexico & Orient connections made?

A. It connected with the Texas & Pacific in 1908 and with the Galveston, Harrisburg & San Antonio in 1913.

Q. At what points?

A. With the Texas & Pacific at Sweet Water and the Galveston, Harrisburg & San Antonio at Alpine.

Q. That was due to the construction of the Kansas City, Mexico & Orient?

A. Yes; it constructed first to Sweet Water and subsequently constructed beyond, to Alpine.

Q. In other words, those two lines tied on to you after your line had been constructed?

2473 A. Yes.

Mr. BLAIR. The witness is yours, if you have any recross.

Recross-examination by Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. The completion of the Rock Island connection was one of the things that rendered impracticable the getting of the movement of Middle West freight through New Orleans as a gateway, was it not?

A. I do not think so. It may have had some influence, but I think that the route through the New Orleans gateway had become impracticable as a competitor before the Rock Island was completed; that is, it could not meet the competition of the Santa Fe and the route through Ogden.

Q. The effort and substantial effect favorable to the New Orleans gateway continued up to the Union Pacific merger in 1901?

A. Yes; in 1901.

Q. The competition between the Southern Pacific and Union Pacific, between the Atlantic seaboard and Colorado and the Atlantic seaboard and Utah, and for transcontinental Oregon traffic 2474 and for California and Montana traffic, for the Asiatic traffic, and for the San Francisco and Portland traffic was very unsubstantial, comparatively, with the traffic through Ogden and El Paso; between the competitive western territory and the competitive eastern territory as to which we have heretofore been speaking in this case?

A. It represented a comparatively small percentage of the whole traffic, but was substantial in volume.

Q. Mr. Blair has just asked you, on redirect examination, substantially, whether the opening of the Sunset-Gulf route did not develop the movement of traffic from California to Atlantic seaboard territory which under previously existing conditions could not move; in other words, whether the creation of that sort of a line did not create traffic itself that did not before exist.

A. Yes.

Q. What was developed that could not be handled through Ogden?

A. I said that I thought it had the effect implied by the question, because the bringing closer together of producing and consuming markets almost invariably has that effect. By "bringing closer together" I mean it brought the producer and consumer within 2475 a little over two weeks apart instead of nearly a month apart.

Q. The through lines created by the Atchison junction with the Southern Pacific and by the Texas & Pacific junction with the Southern Pacific both preceded the completion of the through line of the Southern Pacific to New Orleans, did they not?

A. Yes.

Mr. McCLENNEN. I think that is all.

(Witness excused.)

(The following testimony of James Speyer, taken at the beginning of the afternoon session on Thursday, April 22, 1915, is inserted at this point to avoid interrupting the testimony of Lewis J. Spence.)

2476 JAMES SPEYER was called as a witness on behalf of the defendants, and, having been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. BLAIR:

Q. Are you a member of the firm of Speyer & Company, bankers?

A. I am.

Q. Were you a member of the firm in 1898 and 1899?

A. I was.

Q. How long have you been a resident of New York?

A. I was born in New York and have lived here about thirty years.

Q. Did your firm, Speyer & Company, participate in the settlement of the indebtedness of the Central Pacific Company to the United States?

A. Yes; they did.

Q. Did your firm participate in the readjustment of the affairs of the Central Pacific Company about the same time?

A. Yes; it did.

Q. With what parties or interests did you have negotia-

2477 tions and conferences in the course of the readjustment of the affairs of the Central Pacific Company?

A. Well, we had conferences with representatives of the bondholders, our own representatives, with the representatives of the shareholders, both here and in Europe, and with the representatives of the United States Government.

Q. And with representatives of the Southern Pacific Company?

A. And with representatives of the Southern Pacific Company.

Q. Did those negotiations and conferences extend over some time?

A. Yes; they did.

Q. Did you have negotiations and conferences with representatives of the United States Government and others in connection with the settlement of the indebtedness to the United States?

A. Yes, sir; we did.

Q. Were those two sets of negotiations and conferences being carried on concurrently?

A. Yes; more or less.

Q. And with reference to each other?

2478 A. Yes; they were.

Q. What was the occasion or purpose of the readjustment of the affairs of the Central Pacific Company?

A. The debt of the Central Pacific to the United States Government of about fifty-eight million dollars was due and payable, and this required a readjustment of the affairs of the company in order to satisfy the United States Government as to the payment of that debt within the limits of the law that had been passed for that purpose.

Q. Do you recall the act of Congress, passed in 1898, which referred the matter of the settlement of this Central Pacific indebtedness to a commission composed of the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of the Interior, and the Attorney General, who were authorized to make the settlement with the approval of the President?

A. In a general way I do.

Q. Do you remember the conditions imposed by the act of Congress itself, among other conditions, that the commission should not accept less than the full principal of the debt and interest?

A. I do.

2479 Q. And that there should be no extension granted for any longer period than ten years?

A. I do.

Q. And that the whole amount should be paid in equal semiannual payments within the period so limited?

A. Yes.

Q. Please state whether the Central Pacific could have complied with the conditions imposed by that act of Congress without a financial readjustment of their affairs of the kind contained in the readjustment which you arranged for?

Mr. McCLENNEN. Petitioner objects to the question as calling for an opinion upon a matter not the subject for opinion evidence, and which the witness does not appear to be qualified to express.

(By request, the reporter repeated the pending question as above recorded.)

The WITNESS. Without some kind of readjustment they could not have complied. I am not prepared to say that the adjustment we made was the only kind; but some kind of readjustment seemed absolutely necessary.

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. And you made a plan of readjustment?

A. We did.

2480 Q. I put before you, for convenience of reference, the plan of readjustment which was used when Mr. Ruhlender was testifying. You recognize that as the plan of readjustment which was arranged for?

A. I do.

Q. Mr. Speyer, when you started to work upon that plan of readjustment did you expect and count upon the intervention and aid of the Southern Pacific Company?

A. I knew I could not carry it through without the help of the Southern Pacific; or some other railroad company, in case the Southern Pacific had not come to assist.

Q. Did you ever contemplate or work upon any plan which did not involve the intervention and aid of the Southern Pacific Company!

A. I did not.

Q. And that plan could not have been carried through without the intervention and aid of the Southern Pacific Company?

Mr. McCLENNEN. Petitioner objects to the question as already covered by the answer of the witness, and as leading.

By Mr. BLAIR:

2481 Q. Mr. Speyer, considering the terms required by the act of Congress, namely, the requirement that the entire debt of fifty-eight million eight hundred thousand dollars, in round numbers, would have to be paid in ten years, in twenty semiannual installments, would any one at all familiar with the Central Pacific affairs know that the Central Pacific, with its own resources and credit, could not comply with those conditions?

A. He would.

Q. It would be obvious to anyone at all familiar with the affairs of the Central Pacific that it could not with its own resources and credit comply with the terms of that act?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In making the agreement which you participated in with the United States, what did you count upon to enable you to carry out the agreement with the United States?

A. The cooperation of the security holders of the Central Pacific and of the Southern Pacific Company.

Q. As outlined in your plan of readjustment?

A. Yes.

Q. Had you formulated your plan of readjustment before you executed the agreement with the United States?

2482 A. Yes, sir.

Q. Would you have signed that agreement if you had not had your plan of readjustment formulated?

A. No, sir.

Q. Would you have signed the agreement if you had not been reasonably assured of the operation of the plan?

A. No; I would not.

Q. With whom did you negotiate or confer as representing the United States Government in connection with the settlement agreement with the United States Government, which bears date February 1, 1899?

A. It is sixteen years ago, and I could not recall everybody with whom I conferred. I remember, however, that I principally conferred with the late President McKinley personally.

Q. Did you have any conference or communications with Attorney General Griggs?

A. I think I saw him, too; but the principal negotiations were with President McKinley personally.

Q. In your negotiations or conferences with the representatives of the Government, did you inform them of your plan of reorganization?

2483 A. I think I did. I could not recall the details of our conversations, but I do not see how I could have talked with them about anything else.

Q. Did they know the main features of the plan?

A. I should think so.

Q. Is that the best of your recollection, that they did?

A. It is.

Q. When it was formulated, do you remember furnishing them with a copy?

A. That is a detail I do not remember; but to the best of my knowledge and belief, I must have.

Mr. McCLENNEN. The part of the answer beginning "but to the best of my knowledge and belief" and thereafter, the petitioner moves to strike out as not responsive.

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. I will ask you: To the best of your knowledge and belief, you did furnish them with a copy of the plan?

Mr. MCCLENNEN. The petitioner objects to the question as incompetent, immaterial, and irrelevant.

The WITNESS. I did. Do you mean the President of the United States?

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. Or any representative of the United States.

2484 A. Well, we surely furnished a copy to the counsel that represented the United States commission; that is, Mr. Root.

Q. Mr. Root represented the commission in some of these transactions?

A. If I remember right, the mortgage securing the bonds which the United States Government got—I know that was done with his assent, and corrected by him, I think.

Q. Did the representatives of the Government know that the Southern Pacific was to guarantee the Central Pacific four per cent bonds which were to be pledged to secure the notes given to the Government, to the best of your recollection?

A. They did.

Q. I think you have answered this; but can you remember the details of your conversation with the representatives of the Government at this time?

A. In what particular? It is rather hard for me to remember. It is sixteen years ago. In what particular do you mean?

Q. I was just asking you whether they are fresh in your mind or whether you can remember them.

A. I can not remember the details.

2485 Q. You can not remember the language you used in your conversations with the representatives of the Government?

A. I remember certain parts of the first interview I had with the late President McKinley.

Q. It will come out in my series of questions, and whenever you can remember the language you can give it; otherwise you will have to do the best you can and answer to the best of your recollection.

A. Yes.

Q. What effect upon the value of the bonds as security did the Southern Pacific guaranty have?

A. It increased their value.

Q. Greatly?

A. I should say so.

Q. How did the resources and credit of the Southern Pacific Company compare with those of the Central Pacific?

A. They were superior to those of the Central Pacific.

Q. Was the superiority very great?

A. I suppose the quotations of those days, which I have not before me—the quotations of the bonds and stocks, which I do not remember—would show how great the difference was in public opinion.

486 Q. What is your recollection about it?

A. That it was very considerable.

Q. State what was the understanding as the result of your negotiations and conferences with the representatives of the Government as to the bonds which were to secure the Central Pacific notes bearing the guaranty of the Southern Pacific Company, to the best of your recollection.

Mr. McCLENNEN. Petitioner objects to the question on the ground that the understanding, except so far as incorporated in the agreement, is immaterial; and so far as incorporated in the agreement the question calls for the contents of a written instrument.

(By request the reporter repeated the pending question as above recorded.)

The WITNESS. You mean whether the Government understood they were to be guaranteed?

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. Yes.

A. Yes; they did.

Q. Would it have been in accordance with your understanding with the Government, as you recollect it, for you or the Central Pacific to have deposited as security bonds which 487 did not have the guaranty of the Southern Pacific Company?

Mr. McCLENNEN. The petitioner objects to the question on the ground that it calls upon the witness to determine a question of law, and so far as it relates to his understanding of his contract, if it varied from the written instrument, as a matter which is immaterial.

The WITNESS. No; it would not.

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. Mr. Speyer, I call your attention to a paragraph in the agreement with the Government of February 1, 1899, as follows:

"The mortgage securing such refunding bonds shall be prior in lien to any lease of the railroads of said Central Pacific Railroad Company or their appurtenances or any portion thereof."

What lease was there at that time of the Central Pacific properties?

A. The lease to the Southern Pacific.

Q. Was there any other lease?

A. Not that I remember.

Q. Did the Government know of that lease to the Southern Pacific Company?

2488 A. I should say so.

Q. Can you tell us any of the circumstances connected with the signing of this agreement which bears date February 1, 189 by the President and the members of the commission?

A. In what way?

Q. That will enable us to approximate the date. Or perhaps may ask it in this way: Were you present when President McKinl signed the agreement?

A. Yes; I was.

Q. How did you happen to be present?

A. As far as I remember it, I took the agreement there myse from New York shortly before the 20th of February. It was a w few days before the 20th of February.

Q. Yes.

A. We had intended to put the plan in effect before the 20th February; everything was ready, the circular and all, and the fi sentence in the circular said that the agreement had been executa It was not actually executed. So I took it there myself. I went fro New York to Washington with this agreement.

Q. You had begun to get nervous as to whether the agreeme would be signed by February 20th?

2489 A. Yes.

Q. And you took it to Washington?

A. Yes.

Q. And what occurred there?

A. I remember some of the circumstances, because it was almo a blizzard and traffic had stopped, and I got stalled in Elizabeth a spent a miserable night there, and then I got as far as Philadelphi and if I remember correctly Mr. Roberts, who was then president the Pennsylvania, gave me a special train to get to Washington. got there late in the afternoon and Mr. McKinley expected me. H signed it at once, and I went over to the office of Mr. Bliss and t office of Mr. Griggs. I think I went there, or Mr. McKinley se for them and they signed it; but Mr. Gage had left Washington a could not be reached. There was great excitement about that, b cause we had to have his signature. President McKinley was leavi that same night to make a speech somewhere, where Mr. Gage w going to speak, too, and I do not remember whether it was in Bost or Albany, but he was going to speak there the same night M McKinley spoke, and Mr. McKinley promised me that he would g it signed, and he called his private secretary and gave it t

2490 him to put in his bag, and the first thing when he got to h room, to the hotel, he was to go to Mr. Gage at once and have it it signed and then telegraph me to New York; and then he told me I could go back to New York and it would be all right. It was all done in a great hurry, and it must have been very shortly before the 20th, because this circular of the 20th said that the agreement had been executed, and it had not been then.

Q. You spoke of the intended publication of the plan of readjustment. Was that published?

A. Yes; it was published as it is dated here.

Q. Published in its present form?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was wide publicity given to it through the country?

A. It was widely advertised in Europe and in New York, and I suppose at other points. I can not remember; the record will show that.

Q. Were many copies mailed, and was it generally circulated?

A. Yes; it was a public document. It was published as a public document.

Mr. BLAIR. The witness is yours.

2491 Cross-examination by Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. Mr. Speyer, was this print that you have before you, which is the one that has been put in evidence in this case and is dated February 20, 1899, on the circular of promulgation, which perhaps you know as the plan of readjustment dated February 8, 1899, the first print of the plan of readjustment?

A. There were, no doubt, numerous proofs before that, but this was the first complete, final print.

Q. When was this put in print?

A. When?

Q. Yes.

A. In February, I should say.

Q. Can you tell me when in February?

A. No; I could not tell you any more than that. I should say that the original—these things are worked over, you know, and there were probably twenty or thirty proofs or revises, and I suppose that it was put in type before that time; but the final proof probably was made in February.

Q. When did you first take up with any member of the com-2492 mission, or with President McKinley, the matter of the readjustment?

A. I could not tell, off-hand, when I first began. I should say that I saw President McKinley probably half a dozen times. I could not recall now when I first saw him about it.

Q. Perhaps I should have asked you before this. When, after 1899, have you had occasion to consider the details of this matter that you are testifying to?

A. When after 1899?

Q. Yes. I mean what, if anything, has there been to call the matter to your attention since 1899 up to to-day?

A. Well, quite a number of things.

Q. When, first, within the last couple of years, did you have occasion to put your mind upon the question of the details of this readjustment?

A. I saw in the papers, I suppose some three years ago—I do not know how long ago—that the Government was contesting the ownership of the thing, and I saw that, and it came back to my mind about the acquisition of the company by the Southern Pacific.

Q. Did you, on observing that a suit was brought or was in contemplation, review the papers?

2493 A. No.

Q. Or go into the matter so that your mind would be particularly refreshed about it?

A. No. I looked through that day before yesterday.

Q. That is coming down to what I wanted to call your attention to. Up to a couple of days ago, had there been in the last sixteen years any occasion for you to review the matter of these dates, or the sequence of your negotiations, or any of the other matters you have testified to?

A. I have been thinking about it, but I have not reviewed it.

Q. What have you looked at, if anything, to enable you to fix the dates?

A. Nothing, except that I have a bound copy of these papers in my desk now, which contains the Government contract and all the papers. I looked that through. My partner was here as a witness three or four days ago, and he talked to me about it before he went. Otherwise I have not looked it up.

Q. What else have you done with a view of refreshing yourself on the subject?

A. We talked together, my partner and I, about it. He remembered some things that I did not.

2494 Q. Calling your attention to the fact that the act creating the commission for the settlement of the Central Pacific claims was approved July 7, 1898, will that enable you to fix at all, approximately, the time when you took up, either with the Attorney General or any other member of the commission or with the President, Mr. McKinley, the matter of readjustment?

A. I am sorry to say that I can not remember when I first saw

Q. Had you done anything with any of these gentlemen prior to the passage of the act creating the commission?

A. I do not think so.

Q. Should you say that you began your negotiations soon thereafter?

A. I think so, but I could not tell. I have not any recollection.

Q. You had been familiar with Central Pacific Railroad matters and Southern Pacific matters to some extent for a good many years at that time?

A. Yes; I was.

Q. When did you first have to do with any of the stock, bonds, or securities of either of these companies?

2495 A. I, personally?

Q. You, personally, or the office of Speyer & Company, in any way that would come to your attention.

A. Our firm took the first Central Pacific bonds long before I was in business, and that was, I think, in 1868 or 1867; but I have had to do with Central Pacific and Southern Pacific affairs ever since I have been active in our firm.

Q. When did you first enter the office of Speyer & Company?

A. I think it was in 1884. It may have been 1885 or it may have been 1883, but it was 1884, I think. I entered the office here in 1884, but before then I was in Frankfort, and I knew then, even, about it.

Q. That is, in Germany?

A. Yes; I knew even then about Central Pacific matters.

Q. What firm were you connected with in Frankfort?

A. My father's firm. The name of that was Teixeira de Mattos Brothers.

Q. That is one of the other names appearing on this agreement here?

A. Yes.

Q. When did you enter that office?

2496 A. In 1882; in 1881 or 1882.

Q. When you took up the matter of this readjustment in 1899, the securities of the Central Pacific Railroad Company were held very largely abroad, were they not?

A. They were.

Q. The bonds were scattered through Europe and England?

A. Well, through the Continent and England.

Q. The Continent and England?

A. Yes.

Q. And the stock was, also?

A. The stock was in England and Holland. I do not think there was any stock in Germany.

Q. The majority of the outstanding stock was held either in England or in Holland?

A. That I can not say, that it was the majority; I do not know about that.

Q. Do you bear in mind the details enough to know that there was either a majority or near to a majority?

A. I could not say that; I do not remember. A large amount had been held in Holland, but I could not say what proportion.

2497 Q. The greater part, or the balance of the stock, was more or less widely distributed in the United States?

A. I do not recall that. I do not remember how much was held by Mr. Huntington, or whether he had any or not. I do not remember the amount.

Q. You do remember that there was a very large outstanding holding in the hands of comparatively small holders throughout the United States, do you not, at the time of the reorganization plan?

A. I do not know what you call a comparatively large holding. I could not tell, now, whether there was more in Europe or here, and how much there was altogether I could not tell you. The records will show that, though. You can get that. The stock was deposited under this plan partly in Europe and partly here, and you could easily in that way get at the facts.

Q. Yes. You recall that at that time, in 1899, the Southern Pacific Company did not itself own any stock in the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. I do not remember. I could not tell.

Q. Do you not remember about that?

A. No; I could not tell. I should think that Mr. Huntington had some of the stock, but I could not tell.

2498 Q. I meant the company itself—the Southern Pacific Company.

A. Yes. I could not tell.

Q. Do you remember, in connection with carrying through the readjustment, that it became necessary to acquire a block of stock of the Stanford estate—some 32,000 shares?

A. Yes; from the estate of Leland Stanford. I remember distinctly about seeing Mrs. Stanford about it. She wanted to sell the stock, and at first when it was quite low. I think the stock was bought afterwards at a higher price. I can not remember whether it was bought by Mr. Huntington or by us. I can not remember that.

Q. Do you remember that there was an incident of that kind?

A. I know that Mrs. Stanford was very much worried about it, and she wanted to sell. This plan was just going forward then, and was going out, and I remember telling her to keep it, which she did.

Q. Speyer & Company had been the brokers for Mr. Huntington for some time prior to the time when you came here in 1885, and were so continuously through to his death, were they?

2499 A. Well, I should say we were his bankers. Brokers sell on commission. Of course we bought securities and we sold them. There is a little difference, as a rule.

Q. You understand, of course, that I was not using the term "brokers" in any invidious sense.

A. Yes; but there is a distinction there, as to whether you sell on commission or are the principal.

Q. Then, adopting your amendment, Speyer & Company had been the bankers for Mr. Huntington?

A. Yes.

Q. In his stock transactions, away back of 1885, had they not?

A. Well, I could not say "stock transactions". I mean that we were his bankers in the contract business, and he had very little stock transactions, except that at one time he bought a block of Central Pacific shares, and we sold them in Europe.

Q. That was a large block?

A. I could not remember now. It was before I was a partner.

Q. That is, that was somewhere back of 1884?

A. Before 1884, I think.

2500 Q. When you came into the New York office of Speyer & Company in 1883, 1884, or 1885, the stock of the Central Pacific Company was then already largely held in England and Holland?

A. Yes.

Q. And also quite widely distributed among holders in the United States?

A. I do not remember the United States part as well. I remember about Europe distinctly, because I came from Europe over here, and I knew more about the European situation.

Q. That is, you knew of the shares being over there before you came here?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember whether, before you came to this country, up in the vicinity of a majority of the stock of the Central Pacific Railroad Company was already distributed in England and Holland?

A. As I told you before, I can not remember the percentage at all, but that is a question of fact which can be looked up. I can not remember whether it was a majority or not.

Q. Are there any records of Speyer & Company of those 2501 early days, in the early eighties, which would shed any light on that matter?

A. I do not think so. Of course, the stockholders deposited under this agreement with the Central Trust Company, I think it is—

Q. Yes.

A. And the records would show that.

Q. Do you know to what extent the stock which in 1899 was held in England and in Holland had already been obtained by English and Holland investors, before you came to this country, in 1883, 1884, or 1885?

A. I do not know what you mean.

Q. I mean this: It has appeared already in this case, from the records of the Central Trust Company, to some extent at least, the deposits which were made under the plan of readjustment in 1899, and which came from Speyer Brothers in London and from Teixeira de Mattos Brothers in Amsterdam. It has already appeared—the deposits that came from those sources. Now, what I am trying to get at is your knowledge of the extent to which the stock so deposited from England and Holland was stock that had already got into the hands of England and Holland investors prior to 1884 or 1885 2502 when you came here.

A. There is not any person on earth who can answer that question.

Q. Was there, as far as you had any knowledge of it, any substantial activity in the sale of Central Pacific Railroad Company stock after you came to this country or after 1884 and after 1899?

A. I could not tell you.

Q. Do you remember whether Speyer & Company ever bought or sold any substantial amount of the stock of the Central Pacific Railroad Company after you came to this country?

A. I do not remember.

Q. Have you any dim recollection, either one way or the other, either that you did or did not?

A. Well, you recalled to my mind that stock of Mrs. Stanford. I do not remember whether we bought that stock or whether we did not; whether we bought it or whether Mr. Huntington bought it; but that is one thing that comes back which you have recalled to me.

Q. You knew, did you not, that at the time of the sale of the stock of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, in the early eighties, 2503 the Stanford-Huntington-Hopkins-Crocker interests were practically operated as one; that is, that the sales of Central Pacific Railroad Company stock were made for the four practically on joint account?

A. I could not answer that question now, because I think the Crocker stock was afterwards sold alone, and I could not answer that.

Q. The Crocker stock that was sold alone was, was it not, the stock that remained in the Crocker estate at the death of Mr. Crocker?

A. Yes, sir; that is true.

Q. That appears from an inventory filed in the case as of 1899 as something like 34,000 shares. Was that stock bought or sold by Speyer & Company?

A. I am just trying to think. I could not answer the question offhand.

Q. Have you books that would show that still extant?

A. I could not say. I could look it up. You understand certain records are kept in a business like ours that we consider important; but not everything is kept. Now, as to buying shares and selling them, we may have it and we may not. I could not tell.

2504 Q. Do you recall acquiring or dealing in any substantial amount of the stock of the Central Pacific Railroad Company from or for Mr. Huntington after you came to this country?

A. I do not recall it, but we may have. I do not recall it.

Q. You do not recall it?

A. No.

Q. And the same would be true as to Mr. Stanford or Mr. Crocker or the Hopkins estate?

A. I remember this transaction of the Crocker estate, and something about Mrs. Stanford; but I do not remember anything else, and you reminded me of those two.

Q. Then, to sum that up, do I understand you that you do not at the present time recall having bought any stock of the Central Pacific Railroad Company from Mr. Huntington or Mr. Stanford, Mr. Crocker, or the Hopkins estate, after you came to this country, except the holding of the Crocker estate, possibly, and the holding of Mrs. Stanford, possibly?

A. I do not recall it. I might say, in that connection, that I do not recall any single transaction—any single bond transaction—at that time, although they amounted to a great many millions of 2505 dollars, and I could not, without refreshing my memory, tell you what bonds were bought and sold up to 1899 of the Central Pacific Railroad Company.

Q. Do you remember how early it was in your career in Frankfurt that the Central Pacific Railroad Company stock was sold abroad, either in England, Holland, or Germany?

A. There was no Central Pacific stock sold in Germany at all, so far as I remember. I do not remember. I do not think there ever was any sold. I remember about the bonds of the Central Pacific Company when I was at Frankfurt.

Q. The stock sales, so far as they were in Europe, were, as far as you know, confined to England and Holland?

A. To England particularly.

Q. Then, to amend my question that much, can you shed any light on how early the sales were first made in England?

A. It was before 1884, I should think.

Q. But how much before you are unable to state?

A. I could not tell you. It was in 1881, possibly. I could not tell.

Q. In putting through this readjustment in 1899, with whom did you deal, representing the English and other European stockholders? Did they have a representative?

2506 A. There was a stockholders' committee, of which Mr. Banbury was the chairman.

Q. Do you remember whether Mr. Banbury's committee controlled a majority of the stock?

A. I do not remember.

Q. Do you remember anything about the amount of the holdings represented by the Banbury committee?

A. I can easily look that up, but I do not remember it.

Q. Did the outside stockholders in the United States—and by "outside" I mean those not directly connected with the Central Pacific Company's interests, or the Huntington interests, or the Stanford interests, or the Crocker interests, or the Hopkins estate interests—have a committee representing them?

A. As I remember, they had; and I think Mr. August Belmont was the chairman of it.

Q. And that stock which what we will call the Belmont committee represented was the outside stock, of persons not connected with the Southern Pacific Company or with these four large interests that we have spoken of?

A. I could not remember. I could not tell you how that was.

Q. Mr. Belmont's committee did not represent in any way

2507 the Huntington interests, did it?

A. I do not think so.

Q. Or the Stanford interests?

A. No; I do not think so.

Q. Or the Crocker interests or the Hopkins interests?

A. If I remember correctly—I have not looked it up, but it can easily looked up—the Belmont committee was the committee which represented shareholders in the United States, and they would represent any stock that should be deposited with them. Now, whether any of the interests mentioned had that Central Pacific stock and deposited it with them, I do not know. My recollection is not quite clear on that situation, but I think the Belmont committee was a committee just like the London committee; they would represent any stock that was deposited with them.

Q. Was not Mr. Huntington himself representing directly such stock as he still held in the Central Pacific Railroad Company, without the intervention of any committee?

A. Representing where?

Q. In the negotiations. That is, Mr. Huntington, so far as he was a stockholder in the Central Pacific Railroad, did not deal 2508 with you through Mr. Belmont's committee in any way, did he?

A. I do not think he dealt with me at all as a stockholder in the Central Pacific. My dealings with Mr. Huntington were, as I say, as to the Southern Pacific Company. I do not remember dealing with him at all as a Central Pacific stockholder.

Q. Do you know whether Mr. Huntington continued to hold any stock of the Central Pacific Company at that time?

A. I do not recall it now.

Q. Do you recall that the stock represented by the Belmont committee and the stock represented by the Banbury committee, together, amounted to very much more than a majority of the stock of the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. I do not recall it; but it is no doubt true, if you have got it there. I would like to say, about this stock part, that, apart from my not remembering things generally so very well, that stock I did not have very much to do with. The stock was handled very largely in Europe, and the negotiations with the stock committee were carried on by the London house. I had very much more to do with the bonds and in connection with the Southern Pacific Company.

2509 Q. The Banbury committee you had known of as being in existence for some time before the reorganization, had you not, as a committee representing the interests of the Central Pacific Railroad stockholders in England?

A. I can not recall that. As I said just now, I did not have very much to do with the London end or with the stockholders' negotiations. They were conducted by my London partners, and I do not recall that.

Q. Do you remember that in the period of a number of years before 1899 there had been more or less mutterings from the English stockholders of the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. I do.

Q. And do you remember that Mr. Banbury's committee was a committee formed in the effort to focus the interests of the British stockholders?

A. I remember that the British stockholders were dissatisfied; the stock had declined very considerably, the Central Pacific stock, since it had been sold, and they were dissatisfied; and I suppose they formed this committee and relied on the guidance of the committee to see what could be done.

Q. Do you remember at one time that Mr. Banbury's com-2510 mittee caused to be organized the Central Pacific Railroad Shareholding Company (Limited), a British corporation?

A. I do not remember it; but, of course, the fact that I do not remember it is not saying that it was not so.

Q. Do you remember anything about the prices at which the stock was sold in England and Holland originally?

A. It was before I was there; it was before I was a partner. I should think it was sold above fifty, but I could not tell. It was before I was there. I came to London, and there was a panic—one of the panics—I think it was the panic of 1883, and the stock had then declined to thirty-six, or something like that, and went down lower. It was selling considerably below the price at which it had been sold, and everything else was, too. It was not alone in that.

Q. Did it ever rise again, substantially?

A. Well, when the settlement with the Government was carried through and the debt paid, the Southern Pacific had given its shares and bonds for the Central Pacific, the stockholders came out all right.

Q. I was not referring to the profitableness of the transaction. Of course, after this reorganization went through, then there was 2511 no longer any Central Pacific Railroad stock on the market?

A. No.

Q. But I mean after this decline in the panic that you spoke of, 1883, so far as you recall, did the stock of the Central Pacific Railroad Company ever come up again?

A. I could not tell that. You mean from 1884 to 1899?

Q. Yes.

A. I could not tell that.

Q. Do you remember that at the time the stock was put out it was a dividend-paying stock, a substantial dividend-paying stock?

A. I do not remember it myself; but, as I say, it was before I was in business, and I do not remember. It used to pay six per cent, at one time, I think—six per cent dividends, and then it stopped.

Q. And it was during that six per cent dividend period that the great bulk of the stock was sold in England and Holland?

A. It was certainly during the period that it paid dividends; I do not know whether it paid six per cent dividends or not, at that time; but we would not have sold it unless it had paid dividends.

2512 Q. In this reorganization matter, when it came to 1898 or 1899, the problem that was presented to you as a banker to deal with was that the Central Pacific Railroad was going to be sold under the Government foreclosure unless some means was found of paying the Government debt?

A. I do not remember the legal status, but I know that we feared a receivership or bankruptcy of the company unless the Government debt was settled.

Q. Do you remember that the very act which created the commission; that is, the act of July 7, 1898, directed that if the Government debt was not settled within the terms prescribed by the act, then action was to be taken to foreclose the lien of the Government on the bond-aided part of the railroad?

A. I do not remember it; but I think you are right.

Q. There is no question about the facts. I simply wanted to get at the extent of your recollection. You remember, do you, that there was a portion of the road that was subject to a lien for the Government debt, what was commonly called the bond-aided part of the road?

A. Yes; I remember that.

Q. Do you remember that that part of the road was also 2513 subject to a first mortgage equal to the amount of the principal of the Government debt?

A. I remember there was a first mortgage on it. I do not remember about the amounts.

Q. Then you remember that there were various other bonds of the Central Pacific Railroad Company outstanding?

A. Yes.

Q. The debts that you had to deal with, or had to take into consideration, were the bonds as set out under deposit securities in the plan, plus the Government debt of fifty-eight million odd dollars?

A. Yes.

Q. Which seems to make perhaps a little upward of one hundred and fifteen million dollars, dealing roughly?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall that the average annual net income of the Central Pacific Railroad itself for some years had been adequate to furnish a substantial return on one hundred and fifteen million dollars?

A. The company always paid all its fixed charges. I remember that.

Q. Perhaps that does not quite cover it, because, do 2514 you recall that the interest on the Government debt had not been treated as an annual fixed charge?

A. No. When I speak of fixed charges, I mean the bonds in the hands of the public.

Q. My question to you is: Do you recall that the net income of the Central Pacific Railroad Company had been, on the average, for, say, ten years, adequate to pay not only the fixed charges on the bonds outstanding, but also a substantial rate of interest on fifty-eight million dollars beside?

A. You mean ten years prior to 1899?

Q. On the average for ten years.

A. I could not remember.

Q. You had to do with the making up or approval of the financial statements in the reorganization prospectus, did you not?

A. Yes.

Q. And the average net income of the railroad——

A. You have it right there [indicating printed pamphlet]. There is the figure.

Q. And the average net income of the railroad before the payment of the fixed charges had been $4,893,259.17?

A. Yes.

2515 Q. That is to say, if you funded the Government debt at par, and funded the other outstanding bonds at par, the average return for the past ten years in net income would have shown approximately four per cent per annum for the entire refund?

A. I suppose that is so.

Q. The question answers itself, does it not—$4,893,000 plus is substantially four per cent on $115,000,000?

A. Yes.

Q. When you spoke of the possibility of refunding, you said, as I understood you, that it was obvious that the Central Pacific Railroad Company could not meet the terms of the act of July 7, 1898, from its own resources or without the assistance of the credit of the Southern Pacific Company or some other railroad. Is that a correct statement of your attitude?

A. Yes; that is correct.

Q. And as a banker, in 1899 you had necessarily, or in fact whether necessarily or not, become familiar with railroad securities to a great extent?

A. Yes.

2516 Q. And that necessitated your having some general knowledge of railroad situations, earnings, positions, prospects?

A. That is, very general knowledge. I do not claim any great knowledge of those things.

Q. Did you, in connection with the reorganization schemes, enter into any investigation to see whether there were any other railroads connections of the Central Pacific Railroad, or other competitors with the Southern Pacific Company, who could be interested in acquiring the Central Pacific Railroad or underwriting its bonds?

A. No; I did not enter into any investigation.

Q. Did you know anything about the desires of Mr. Harriman, or the companies with which he was affiliated, to acquire the Central Pacific Railroad in 1899?

A. I do not recall anything of that kind, because Mr. Harriman in those days was not the Mr. Harriman of later years. The Union Pacific had been unable—or had great trouble in paying its own debt in full to the Government, and was not the concern it is to-day; and it did not require any investigation on our part to show us there was not much help to be had from that quarter. The Union Pacific was being reorganized itself; the stock was being assessed 2517 heavily, and sold at six or seven cents on the dollar.

Q. You are not speaking of 1899, are you?

A. When was the date of the Union Pacific—I forget when that was due. It was due about the same time as the other.

Q. Do you not bear in mind, Mr. Speyer, from your recollection of the reorganization scheme, that the Union Pacific's debt to the Government had already been disposed of before you took up the matter of this reorganization of the Central Pacific?

A. I do not think it could have been finally disposed of, because I remember that one of my first interviews with President McKinley, the first time I saw him, he had an idea that the Central Pacific was not going to pay in full. It had not been forgotten that the Union Pacific had compromised itself by not paying in full; and the first interview I had with President McKinley he evidently thought we were trying to compromise—not to pay in full the debt of the Central Pacific. I remember that distinctly, and I remember distinctly my telling him that the Central Pacific was going to pay in full in some way. So the thing can not have been finally settled then.

2518 Q. Do you not remember, now that I call it to your attention, that the impression of President McKinley, which he indicated to you in his conversation, that you were seeking to compromise, was due to the efforts that had been made to have the Central Pacific debt compromised?

A. I do not think so, because I do not believe that was the case. The papers were full at the time of the Union Pacific trying not to pay in full, and the Government, through energetic action, having prevented this; and there was a great "hullabaloo" about it about that time. I do not remember the details, but I remember that I told the President that we were going to pay in full.

Q. Do you not remember that the reorganization of the Union Pacific—Mr. Harriman's connection with it—was completed in 1898?

A. Well, you see this was the end of 1898.

Q. This was the beginning of 1899. You are referring to a paper——

A. The first time I saw President McKinley was in 1898. I can not fix the exact date, but it must have been pretty near together.

Q. Do you not think, now, having these things called to 2519 your attention, that when you put through, or when you promulgated this plan of reorganization in February, 1899, that the Union Pacific debt had already been paid?

A. Yes. Then it had.

Q. And Mr. Harriman, in 1898, was recognized as a substantial, powerful factor in railroad financing here in New York at that time?

A. I think he was.

Q. Now, my question is not asking you specifically about the Union Pacific, but was any effort made to see whether any other railroad or any other financial interest than the Southern Pacific Company was ready to acquire the Central Pacific Railroad, or to underwrite the refunding obligations of the Central Pacific Railroad, as far as you know?

A. It is sixteen years ago, but as far as I can remember, we did not think there could be anybody, outside of the Southern Pacific, except the Union Pacific; and the Union Pacific was just emerging from reorganization itself. Nobody could tell how it was to work out, and it was our judgment that we could get more assistance from the Southern Pacific Company in settling that debt than from anybody else.

Q. You knew the railroad and geographical condition in 2520 California at that time enough to know the great value to the Southern Pacific Company of preventing the Central Pacific Railroad from going into any hands other than the Southern Pacific Company's, did you not?

A. Well, I was not thinking so much of that as I was thinking: Where could we get the best financial and the strongest financial backing, and the Southern Pacific backing at that time would be a great deal more valuable than that of the Union Pacific. I do not want to compare Mr. Huntington and Mr. Harriman at all, but the Union Pacific was just then emerging from the receivership.

Q. As a matter of fact, was the problem of putting through some kind of a reorganization first presented to you by the representatives of the Central Pacific Railroad or by the representatives of the Southern Pacific Company?

A. Well, I should say by neither. I think it naturally suggested itself to us as bankers, having sold such a large amount of securities and the company being threatened with bankruptcy, we naturally sat up nights thinking how we could save it, because these bonds were all out, all over Europe, and stock too; and we tried to find some means to work it out so that these people would not lose 2521 their money. So that I think that originally when this debt came nearer and nearer, when it got so that it became a threatening thing to the Central Pacific security holders, we naturally began to look around to see how we could stave off receivership and bankruptcy. I think the initiative probably came just as much from us as from any of the railroad companies. I am sure it did.

Q. When you had determined upon the desirability of preventing a foreclosure or receivership or bankruptcy, as you put it, did you take it up with the Central Pacific Railroad Company or did you take it up with the Southern Pacific Company, in the first instance?

A. There was not any wide difference. Mr. Huntington——

Q. Whichever you took it up with, it meant that you went to see Mr. Huntington?

A. Yes; that is it.

Q. And you did not know, when you were talking with him, just whether you were talking with him as looking out for the Central Pacific Railroad or looking out for the Southern Pacific Company's interests primarily?

A. Well, in a way that is true. I would like to say here 2522 that I had absolute confidence in Mr. Huntington, whether he represented the Southern Pacific or the Central Pacific or whether he looked out for the bonds or for his shares, or anything. I had absolute faith in Mr. Huntington. It would not have made much difference to me whom he represented.

Q. Of course a reorganization plan of this kind was in this case, as it always is, a gradual growth—one thing after another being added?

A. Yes.

Q. The vital thing about it was to get some kind of a refunding security which either would be taken by the existing security holders, or else could be put upon the market to raise money for the existing security holders. That was it, was it not?

A. And satisfy the Government debt. That was fundamental. The existing security holders were perfectly safe. Their bonds were not due except a little later, so that the first reason for this plan was to satisfy the United States Government.

Q. If the United States Government had foreclosed its lien, the stockholders abroad who had got their stock through your con-2523 cern originally would have been virtually entirely out?

A. Every stockholder, whether he got his stock through our concern or not, would be; it would make no difference where he got it.

Q. So that the importance of getting some way of satisfying the Government debt was to save that stock or to save the interests represented by that stock?

A. If the Government had foreclosed its lien and there had been a receivership, you could not tell how far it would go. You never can tell how far it will go. While primarily the stock would have suffered, I am not prepared to say that the other bonds of the system would not have been in some difficulty. In the case of a receivership you can never tell where it will end when it once starts.

Q. Then, to preserve the market values, both of the stock and the bonds, it was necessary to find some way of getting rid of this Government debt?

A. That is right; that is it, yes.

Q. And in order to do that it seemed to you necessary to get some security which would be satisfactory to the security holders—and by "security holders" I include the Government, having its lien.

2524 A. Yes.

Q. Or would be so marketable that you could get money with which to satisfy it?

A. Yes.

Q. Who hit first upon the fundamentals of this reorganization plan? By "fundamentals" I mean a new issue which should be a first lien and take the place of all the old securities, including the Government lien.

A. Well, if it is not going to be used against me I am willing to confess that I did it. I think I probably talked it over with either one of my partners. I think we probably talked it over, but it was worked out in our office.

Q. It is seldom that any railroad is so good that the addition of a valid guaranty by another railroad will not increase, at least slightly, the value of its securities? That is true, is it not?

A. There would not be any reason for giving it unless it did increase it.

Q. It would have been evident to you in this case, whether the Government wanted the guaranty of the Southern Pacific Company or not, that it would benefit the sale of the refunding bonds if 2525 they were backed by the guaranty of the Southern Pacific Company?

A. Yes; very much so.

Q. Did you take the matter up with President McKinley first before dealing at all with any members of the commission?

A. My memory is that I saw President McKinley first. I may be wrong about that.

Q. And when you saw him first, did you lay before him this possibility of a refunding issue which should be a first lien?

A. No; at the first interview I did not go into that detail with him at all.

Q. In this fundamental respect that I speak of, was the plan of reorganization ever changed after the first time that you did present it to President McKinley?

A. You mean that the bonds should be guaranteed?

Q. No; that they should be a new issue of refunding bonds which should be a first lien.

A. I do not think the plan was ever changed in that respect after the idea was once formulated.

Q. So that the first time you came to state any proposed 2526 terms to the United States Government those terms included at least that the refunding securities should be a first lien on the existing properties of the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. I should think so.

Q. Who drafted the final agreement which was made with the commission; that is, the agreement of February 1, 1899?

A. You mean the language, the formal agreement?

Q. The formal agreement.

A. The lawyers did that.

Q. Whose lawyers, in the first instance?

A. I think Mr. Beaman; Charles C. Beaman represented us, and I think Mr. Charles Steele. Mr. Tweed represented Mr. Huntington, and Mr. Root, I think, represented the commission. I could not recall who took part in which part of the documents.

Q. Do you have any recollection whether Mr. Root took any part in passing upon this agreement of February 1, 1899, upon the phraseology, the draftsmanship of it?

A. I do not remember it; but my partner told me that he did, distinctly.

Q. By your partner you mean whom?

A. Mr. Ruhlender, who remembers Mr. Root being at our 2527 office, and so on.

Q. You, of course, read this agreement of February 1, 1899, with some care before you executed it?

A. I suppose I did.

Q. And do you remember whether it included all the terms that you understood that you had agreed upon with the United States Government?

A. I do not remember it; but I take it for granted that it did.

Q. You recall that a part of the arrangement with the United States Government was that you were yourselves going to take off the hands of the Government almost immediately one-fifth of the debt?

A. There were, I think, four installments of the notes we were going to take up right away. I think it was about ten million dollars that we were going to take up right away.

Q. That is, there were twenty notes of two million nine hundred and odd thousand dollars and you were going to take up four of them?

A. I think it was——

Mr. McENERNEY. It was $11,800,000.

The WITNESS. $11,800,000; that is right. That was part 2528 of the plan.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. And in that way the Government, on the execution of this agreement, acquired the personal responsibility of Speyer & Company to take care of that much of the debt?

A. Well, I do not know about that.

Q. I mean, the personal responsibility of Speyer & Company to take care of the debt, assuming that the conditions of the agreement were met.

Mr. BLAIR. Section 7 of the agreement speaks for itself.

Mr. McCLENNEN. I am asking for his memory of his situation.

Mr. McENERNEY. Show him the clause.

The WITNESS (after referring to pamphlet). That is all right. It says so, so it must be. I do not remember all these things.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. At that time, in 1899, the financial condition of Speyer & Company was such that its obligation was, in itself, a valuable thing for the Government to obtain, was it not?

A. I do not know. I suppose they would not have done it if they did not think it was all right.

2529 Q. I am not putting this by way of paying compliments at all; but I mean this: Assuming, for the time being, that the bonds of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, guaranteed by the Southern Pacific Company, were not worth the paper they were written on, still the obligation of Speyer & Company was a valuable obligation to the Government in itself?

A. Well, if the bonds had not been good, our obligation would not have been quite as good either.

Q. You understand, Mr. Speyer, we are making a record for a court that does not necessarily know Speyer & Company.

A. I was only trying to see what you were trying to get at.

Q. What I meant was that the obligation of Speyer & Company to pay eleven million dollars to the Government was a valuable thing in itself.

A. Yes; no doubt.

Q. Did either Mr. Griggs, Mr. Bliss, Mr. Gage, Mr. Root, or President McKinley receive a copy of this reorganization plan that was promulgated by your circular of February 20, 1899?

A. I have no doubt they did.

2530 Q. By that you mean that you reason that they must have, but that you have no recollection one way or the other? Is that it?

A. I have no positive recollection; but it would be illogical to suppose that they did not get it.

Q. Since you can not help us by recollection, can you by reasoning indicate about when any of the five men that I have just mentioned received this?

A. If you will allow me to answer this in my own way, I will tell you.

These whole negotiations were carried on absolutely on the table. Everything that was done was known to everybody interested, and I am perfectly satisfied that they had this plan and the provisos of it, and knew exactly what we were doing all the time. I am satisfied that they knew about the Southern Pacific guaranty, and thought it a valuable thing. I could not tell you when I gave them this plan, or how many copies they got, or who got it. I can not remember. I do remember, however, distinctly that everything we did and everything I did was done just in that way; that they got everything; they knew everything we were doing, because I remember that President McKinley particularly thanked me when it was all 2531 over—I do not want to repeat his words, but he was very flattering about the way I had conducted this negotiation. He knew everything I was doing, and he showed me the greatest confidence, and let me do it in my own way.

Q. Don't you see, Mr. Speyer, that my question is not——

A. I answer with no feeling at all. I can not remember details of things like that sixteen years ago, but I can remember the general course of events.

Q. What I have asked you, Mr. Speyer, is this: Using both your recollection and your reasoning, simply to give me the best you can as to the time—which you have not put into this answer you have just given at all—the time when that plan which you promulgated February 20, 1899, was delivered to any of those gentlemen.

A. My answer is that the plan was handed to them as soon as it was ready, and while it was being made they were being kept posted as to what was going to be in it. They got the copy as soon as it was ready, and while we were making it up they were being kept posted as to all essential features. I do not think we told them about an item of fifty dollars or all little details like that, but the essential features of the plan they knew and were kept informed of.

2532 Q. Do you mean by that that you would be positive that they received this plan first, I will say, at least by the first of March, 1899?

A. I would be positive.

Q. You would be positive of that?

A. Yes. When I speak of them I include Mr. Root, their counsel, who probably got it first.

Q. I meant to include in these questions Mr. Bliss, Mr. Gage, Mr. Griggs, President McKinley, and Mr. Root—any one of them.

A. Yes.

Q. Now, would you be positive that they received the plan at least as early as the first of January, 1899?

A. Well, it was not ready, was it?

Q. Would you be positive that they received the plan at least as early as the first of February, 1899?

A. I would be positive that they had the plan before they signed the agreement with us.

Q. When did they sign the agreement with you?

A. It must have been a few days before the 20th of February for the reason I stated before.

Q. Then you would be positive that they had the plan a few days at least before the 20th of February, 1899?

2533 A. I can not swear to it. I should think so. I do not remember; I can not remember.

Q. Now, can you be positive of any date earlier than a few days before the 20th of February, 1899?

A. I can not be positive; no.

Q. Did you ever suggest to any of these five gentlemen their taking these bonds, or any bonds, without a guaranty?

A. Never.

Q. Did they ever talk to you about the possibility of taking any of these bonds without a guaranty?

A. You mean when I offered them the guaranty that they said they did not want it?

Q. No; I mean exactly the question.

(By request the reporter repeated the question, as follows:)

"Q. Did they ever talk to you about the possibility of taking any of these bonds without a guaranty?"

The WITNESS. No; I do not remember.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. The first time, as far as you recall it, that the guaranty was matter of conversation between you and any of these five gen-

2534 tlemen was when you informed them that the bonds were going to be guaranteed by the Southern Pacific Company; is that right?

A. I do not quite understand.

(By request the reporter repeated the question as above recorded.)

The WITNESS. If you mean to say that they had not asked for the guaranty or mentioned it to me first, I could not say.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. You can not say, one way or the other?

A. I could not remember whether I spoke to them first about the guaranty or whether somebody mentioned it to me.

A. Are you entirely without recollection as to whether any of the five gentlemen suggested the guaranty, or whether the first time it was mentioned it was on your suggestion?

A. I always thought the guaranty was absolutely necessary to carry through this scheme. It never occurred to me to dispense with the guaranty; so I do not attach any importance to whether they mentioned it to me or not. I knew I had to have the guaranty in order to make these bonds go.

2535 Q. That is, you knew that in order to market the bonds it would be, in your judgment, necessary to have the guaranty; is that true?

A. Well, in order to carry through the plan.

Q. In order to carry through the plan?

A. Yes.

Q. The plan provided, as indicated in it, for certain exchanges of securities?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember at all to what extent the old security holders took the new securities?

A. They took them very largely; a very large percentage, I think.

Q. Was there any substantial amount of the refunding bonds sold at the time, in 1899?

A. By us?

Q. By you.

A. Those we took from the Government we had to sell.

Q. That is, those you took when you took up the first four notes?

A. The eleven million dollars; and there may be some others; but that much was sure.

2536 Q. Did you have anything to do with the sale of the remaining forty-seven million dollars of those bonds as they were received back by the company from the Government when the debts were paid?

A. Yes; some of them were sold.

Q. In addition to the bonds which had been deposited with the Government, and which amounted in the aggregate to about fifty-eight million dollars, were any substantial number of the refunding bonds sold by you, or were they taken directly by the old security holders?

A. $1,690,000 we bought and resold. The security holders, I think mostly took the new securities. I could not tell that, but I think that is what it was.

Q. A good many of those security holders who took these new re funding bonds were holders of first mortgage bonds already?

A. Yes.

Q. Of issues which were considerably less than one hundred mil lion dollars in the aggregate?

A. Yes.

Q. In order to get the security holders who held some fifty-seve million dollars of bonds to take the new bonds it was necessary t have those new bonds abundantly secured?

A. Yes.

2537 Q. In your judgment, in order to get those fifty-seven mil lion dollars of bondholders to take these new refunding bond it was necessary to have the guaranty of the Southern Pacific Com pany, or some other adequate guaranty?

A. Yes, sir; the reason being that the mortgage which they had w very considerably increased in amount by the bonds that went to th Government. If it had just been the question of extending the lie which they had, that probably could have been done without a gua anty; but the fact that the existing lien was so much increased in th bonds given to the Government, necessitated the guaranty of th Southern Pacific in order to make them good.

Q. That is, one of the effects of this arrangement was—if it is not to flippant a use of language—to let the Government down from th second story on to the ground floor, so far as security was concerned

A. Yes.

Q. And that had the effect of greatly increasing the securities wi which the old security holders would have to pro rate in case deficient assets?

A. Well, if it was not the Government, people would call 2538 diluting them. I would say the security was diluted; but long as the Government gets it, I do not use that word.

Q. Do you recall, now, whether any of the three commissioner the President, or Mr. Root suggested or required any substanti change in the plan which you originally proposed?

A. I do not recall it.

Q. Would it meet your recollection, as best you can give it, th they did not, and that the plan, in its essential features, as you fir presented it was the one which went through?

A. I rather think so.

Mr. McCLENNEN. That is all.

Mr. BLAIR. No questions.
(Witness excused.)

2539 JAMES A. SIMPSON was called as a witness on behalf of the defendants and, having been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. BLAIR:

Q. Mr. Simpson, what is your occupation?

A. Transfer agent for the Southern Pacific Company.

Q. Do you remember that after the unmerger the stock of the Southern Pacific Company which was owned by the Union Pacific——

A. The Oregon Short Line.

Q. Or rather, by the Oregon Short Line. That part of it which was not transferred to the Pennsylvania Railroad was transferred to the Central Trust Company of New York, as trustee, under the decree?

A. Yes.

Q. Are you able to state, or have you prepared a statement from your records, showing the exact amount of the stock which was so transferred to the Central Trust Company of New York, as trustee, and which was in its name in that way on July 17, 1913?

A. Yes; I have.

2540 Q. Please state the number of shares which were so in the name of the Central Trust Company as trustee on July 17, 1913.

A. 883,576 shares.

Q. How many shares were left in the name of the Central Trust Company as trustee on August 17, 1913?

A. There was no change; 883,576.

Q. Can you explain why there was no change in that period?

A. The date of subscription to those certificates of interest which were issued by the Central Trust Company against the deposit of that stock was fixed as September 2, 1913, and no subscriptions had been anticipated on that date.

Q. How many of the shares which we have been referring to remained in the name of the Central Trust Company on September 17, 1913?

A. 353,192 shares.

Q. And on October 17, 1913?

A. 215,837 shares.

Q. And on November 17, 1913?

A. 179,911 shares.

Q. And on February 11, 1914?

A. 103,114 shares.

2541 Q. And what is the difference between the last figures you have named and the first figures—the original deposit? Just subtract that.

A. I make it 780,462 shares.

Q. Is it true to say that the number of shares you have last named had, during the period which you have covered by your testimony, been sold into the hands of the public generally?

A. I should say so.

Q. What was the increase in the number of stockholders between July 17, 1913, and February 11, 1914?

Answer my question first, and then I will ask you to give it to me by months.

A. The difference between the number of stockholders on July 17, 1913, and February 11, 1914, was 8,650.

Q. Give the number of stockholders on July 17, 1913.

A. 17,088.

Q. And on August 17?

A. 17,731.

Q. And on September 17?

A. 19,747.

Q. And on October 17?

2542 A. 21,553.

Q. And on November 17?

A. 23,100.

Q. And on February 11, 1914?

A. 25,738.

Q. How many shares which stood in the name of the Union Pacific, which were by it under the terms of the decree transferred to the Central Trust Company of New York as trustee, now remain in the name of the Central Trust Company of New York as trustee?

A. On April 17, 1915, the number was 36,513 shares.

Mr. BLAIR. The witness is yours.

Cross-examination by Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. Do you remember how long a time elapsed after the Attorney General informed the Southern Pacific Company of his intention to file an unmerger suit as to the Central Pacific Railroad before the first sales were made to which you have testified here?

A. I can not tell the time. The time the first sales were made, I think, was of record about thirty days prior to the date of subscription. I am not certain of that.

2543 Q. And how many of these shares have been sold since the unmerger suit now on trial was actually begun, namely, since February 11, 1914?

A. 66,601 shares.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. That is all.

Mr. BLAIR. That is all.

(Witness excused.)

Mr. MCENERNEY. The Commercial and Financial Chronicle is a weekly newspaper devoted to commercial and financial affairs, published weekly on Saturday in the city of New York, and has been in existence for twenty-five years, the first issue of the year 1899 being volume 68 and No. 1750. This paper had throughout the year 1899, and had for many years before that time, a large circulation amongst commercial and financial people and bankers in the United States of America and was one of the leading commercial and financial papers of the country, and the volumes that I have here are volumes 68 and 69 of that newspaper, covering the year 1899.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. The petitioner objects to this statement as immaterial, incompetent, and irrelevant; but, subject to this ob-2544 jection, concedes that the statement may be taken to be proof of the facts stated.

Mr. MCENERNEY. We desire to offer in evidence from the issue of February, 1899, the item appearing in volume 68, page 329, at the foot of the second column, commencing with the words "Central Pacific R. R.," and ending on the next page, 330, with "V. 67, p. 1157, 1163."

Mr. MCCLENNEN. The petitioner objects to the introduction in evidence of this article and the others about to be offered by the defendants from the "Chronicle," and on the ground that the publications are immaterial, incompetent, and irrelevant, and are hearsay as to the facts narrated in the articles, and do not appear to have reached the eyes of anyone whose reading of them would be of consequence in this case.

Mr. MCENERNEY. The next one is an article in volume 68 of the "Chronicle", page 352, under date of February 25, 1899, entitled "The Central Pacific reorganization plan," occupying practically all of page 352, all of page 353, and a little over half of the first column of page 354.

The next one is under date of February 25, 1899, volume 68 of the "Chronicle", page 378, headed "Central Pacific R. R.–Southern 2545 Pacific Company," and running down to the second line of page 379, first column.

Under date of March 4, 1899, the next one appears in volume 68 of the "Chronicle", page 397, commencing with the sixth line on page 397, column one: "As expected, the Central Pacific readjustment is proving an unqualified success," and ending on the tenth line of the second column of the same page with the words "could have been attained in any other way".

The next one is March 4, 1899, volume 68, page 427, commencing with "Central Pacific R. R.–Southern Pacific Co.," in the first column of page 427, and running to the third paragraph of that item, ending with the words "or at the offices of their agents in Europe," but not putting in the paragraph: "Extension to be completed."

The next one is under date of March 11, 1899, volume 68, page 472, a five-line item headed "Central Pacific R. R.—Listed."

The next one is under date of March 18, 1899, volume 68, page 523, column two, an item of five lines headed "Central Pacific R. R.—Four notes paid."

2546 The next one is under date of April 1, 1899, volume 68, page 617, second column, commencing with: "Central Pacific R. R.—Southern Pacific Co.," down to and including the small type in the paragraph ending with the words: "They have been issued in accordance with the plan", but excluding the paragraph headed "Large sale of stock."

The next one is under date of April 15, 1899, volume 68, of the "Chronicle", at the foot of page 721, column two, headed "Central Pacific R. R.," which extends over to the next page, column one, down to the seventh line, inclusive, ending "V. 68, p. 617."

Next, from the Investor's Supplement, issued by the "Chronicle" April 29, 1899, page 24, column one, all of the matter commencing with "Central Pacific R. R." and ending with a series of page numbers, the last one being "721"; that is, down to but not including "Central Ry. of New Brunswick".

The next one is from the Investor's Supplement for July, 1899, page 24, volume 69, commencing, in column one, with "Central Pacific R. R. Co.," down to a series of page numbers ending with "V. 69, p. 26"; that is, just before "Central Ry. of New Brunswick".

2547 The next one is under date of August 5, 1899, volume 69, of the "Chronicle", page 282, at the foot of the second column, headed "Central Pacific Railway", an item of five lines.

The next is under date of September 23, 1899, volume 69, of the "Chronicle", page 645, column one, an item headed "Central Pacific R. R.—reorganization notice", an item of seven lines.

Then, the Supplement for October, issued October 28, 1899, page 22, commencing in column one, down to the end of the subdivision in the second column, ending just before the heading "Central Ry. of New Brunswick."

(The foregoing extracts from the Commercial and Financial Chronicle and the Investor's Supplement were marked, collectively, "Defendants' Exhibit No. 95, April 24, 1915," and will be found in the volume of defendants' exhibits.)

Mr. McCLENNEN. It is stipulated that the following are extracts from the Congressional Record at the volume and page from which they purport to be taken, namely:

"Proceedings of the United States Senate, Monday, February 20, 1899.

"'Pacific railroads.

"'The Vice President laid before the Senate a communication 2548 from Hon. L. J. Gage, Secretary of the Treasury, Hon. Cornelius N. Bliss, Secretary of the Interior, and Hon. John W. Griggs, Attorney General, the commission appointed by the act of Congress of July 7, 1898, to settle the indebtedness of the Government growing out of the issue of bonds in aid of the construction of the Central Pacific and Western Pacific Railroads, which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Pacific Railroads and ordered to be printed.' (Congressional Record, 3rd session, 55th Congress, volume 32, p. 2082.)"

"Proceedings of the House of Representatives February 20, 1899.

"'Executive communications, etc.

"'Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, the following executive and other communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows: * * *

"'Report of the commissioners appointed to settle the indebtedness to the Government growing out of the issue of the bonds in aid of the construction of the Central Pacific and Western Pacific Railroads—to the Committee on Pacific Railroads and ordered to be printed.' (Congressional Record, 3rd session, 55th Congress, volume 32, p. 2121.)"

2549 Mr. McCLENNEN. It is stipulated that there is a record in the United States Department of Agriculture Weather Bureau files in New York as follows, and that these statements concerning the conditions narrated in that report are correct:

U. S. Department of Agriculture. Weather Bureau. Forecast district and marine center.

NEW YORK, N. Y., April 22, 1915.

Mr. CHARLES FRANKLIN,
Attorney Southern Pacific Railway,
165 Broadway, New York, N. Y.

DEAR SIR: In reply to your letter of this date relative to weather conditions of February 11–19, 1899, as affecting travel by railroad, I have the honor to report as follows:

During the three days preceding the 11th there was an unusually severe cold wave, the temperature reaching its lowest point, six degrees below zero, at 7.30 a. m. of the 11th. This caused practically a blockade of all the traffic in the waters about New York be-2550 cause of the heavy ice. At 8 p. m. of the 11th there remained on the ground from previous snowstorms 8.5 inches of snow where not removed or disturbed. Snow began falling at 9.10 p. m. of the 11th, continuing through the 12th, becoming heavier during the night of the 12th–13th, continuing through the 13th, and ending before daybreak of the 14th. The total fall of fresh snow in the storm was 15.5 inches, which, together with the old snow, made a total of 24.0 inches when measured at 8 p. m. of the 14th.

The following quotations from the Daily Journal of this station, under date of February 13, 1899, will show the severity of the storm:

"About 4 a. m. a gale set in from the northeast, which continued with increasing force till 4.30 p. m., when it shifted to northwest and continued through the night with hurricane velocity.

"The dry character of the snow caused it to drift heavily. Local traffic, which had not before been seriously interrupted, was thrown into utter confusion and finally abandoned altogether, with the exception of two cable lines; on these an occasional car was sent out.
behind a snow plough, for the purpose of keeping the line clear.
2551 "The street cleaning department was overwhelmed with the storm. As fast as the snow was piled in mounds it would be scattered adrift by the high winds. At noon, all efforts to oppose the storm having been futile, the department stopped work until the wind should subside.

"All railroad lines centering here received ample warning from this office, but they were powerless in the face of such odds. By night the city was absolutely cut off from railway communication in every direction.

"The New York Central Railroad Company informed this office that the tracks of that line were covered in places with ten feet of snow. The Empire State Express, a noted fast train of that line, running between New York and Buffalo, failed to get through from Albany to New York for the first time since the initial trip was made, about seven years ago.

"The hurricane winds, which prevailed at night, were forecast in ample time, and every effort was made by the station force to communicate with every interest involved. As the day was generally observed as a holiday, much difficulty was met in trying to reach some of the shipping companies. Happily, however, the ice gorge so effectually checked the entrances to the ocean and sound 2552 that not a vessel left this port, which is the first instance of the kind in eleven years.

"The temperature at 7 p. m. was 10 degrees, the highest reached since 2 a. m. February 9, making a record of exceptional severity which is unequaled in point of duration in the history of this station."

Under date of February 14 the following is recorded:

"Northwest gale from midnight of the 13th till 5.30 p. m.; maximum velocity, 61 miles, at 3.45 a. m."

The temperature, though showing a slight rising tendency, did not rise above the freezing point, 32 degrees, till the 16th, and gales of sufficient strength to drift the snow continued through the 19th.

Very respectfully,

JAMES H. SCARR,
District Forecaster.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. Counsel for the defendants having called to the attention of counsel for the petitioner certain newspaper items of the New York Herald of February 16, 17, and 19, 1899, it is on the faith of these stipulated that President McKinley left Washington on the evening of Wednesday, February 15, 1899, for the Home Market Club dinner in Boston with his secretaries, including 2553 Mr. Cortelyou, and Cabinet officers, and other public men, and that the party reached Washington on its return journey on the morning of Saturday, February 18, 1899, at seven o'clock a. m.; and that it appears that Secretary Bliss was one of the party, but that Secretary Gage is not mentioned.

Mr. HERRIN. I wish to add, concerning the petitioner's offer in evidence of the inventory of the estate of Charles Crocker, another fact having reference to that offer. I wish to add the item concerning the ownership of shares of the stock of the Pacific Improvement Company, that 12,500 shares of the Pacific Improvement Company's stock was also shown as stock owned by that estate.

I make the same offer of an item appearing from the decree of distribution of the Stanford estate, from which counsel for the petitioner read, showing that there were owned by the Stanford estate 12,500 shares of the stock of the Pacific Improvement Company.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. The petitioner stipulates that the inventory of the estate of Charles Crocker, referred to, and the decree of distribution of the Stanford estate, referred to, contain the items referred to by counsel of 12,500 shares in each case of the stock of the Pacific Improvement Company.

2554 Mr. HERRIN. If it does not appear in the testimony into how many shares the capital stock of the Pacific Improvement Company was divided, we will submit that by an exhibit or memorandum of some kind. I think it is shown that there were 50,000 shares of the capital stock of the Pacific Improvement Company. If it does not so appear, I will get a certified copy from the auditor and file it.

In other words, the Stanford estate and the Crocker estate each held one-quarter of the capital stock of the Pacific Improvement Company, 12,500 shares; and Mr. Huntington and Mr. Mark Hopkins owned one-quarter each of the capital stock, making up between them the other half.

Mr. McCLENNEN. On Mr. Herrin's statement, the petitioner stipulates, without further proof, but under objection, that the capital stock of the Pacific Improvement Company consisted of 50,000 shares of stock.

Mr. HERRIN. We offer in evidence a certified copy of a bill in equity or petition filed in the Circuit Court of the United States for the 9th Circuit, Southern District of California, by the United States of America, by direction of the Attorney General thereof, represented by George J. Denis, United States attorney, and Joseph H.
2555 Call, special attorney, it being a petition in equity against the Southern Pacific Company and a number of other companies and parties, which in substance sets forth that the Southern Pacific Company had obtained a lease of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company's line, and also of the lines of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, copies of which leases are in evidence as exhibits to the bill, thereby constituting a combination in restraint of trade or commerce, and praying the setting aside of those leases and the dissolution of that combination.

The bill is signed by Richard Olney, Attorney General of the United States, and by George J. Denis, United States attorney for the southern district of California, and by Joseph H. Call, special attorney.

I also offer in evidence the order made by the judge of the court, E. M. Ross, judge of the District court, on the filing of the petition, directing that subpœnas issue, and so forth.

I offer this bill with all the exhibits, and all other proceedings shown in the case. This is a certified copy of the record, with the certificate of the clerk of the court.

Mr. McCLENNEN. It is stipulated that in copying this cer-2556 tified copy of the record as an exhibit there may be omitted from the copy the lease dated February 10, 1885, of the Central Pacific Railroad Company and others to the Southern Pacific Company, and that the copy attached to the bill is the same as the copy of that lease which has heretofore been put in evidence by the defendants.

It is also stipulated that the lease of February 17, 1885, of the Central Pacific Railroad Company to the Southern Pacific Company, which is a copy of the lease of that date, constituting Exhibit A of the petition in the present case, may be omitted in copying defendants' Exhibit No. 96.

It is also stipulated that the exhibit entitled "Articles of Association, Incorporation, Amalgamation, and Consolidation," of May 4, 1888, need not be copied as a part of defendants' Exhibit No. 96, because the substance thereof appears in a petitioner's exhibit.

It is also stipulated that the indenture of August 25, 1888, between the Southern Pacific Railroad Company and the Southern Pacific Company and the Central Trust Company of New York need not be copied as a part of defendants' Exhibit No. 96.

These stipulations are made tentatively. I should like to get 2557 hold of this defendants' Exhibit No. 96 and read it through, and then see if I have any objection to any of it.

The petitioner objects to the introduction of this copy on the ground that it is immaterial, irrelevant, and incompetent, and does not tend in support of any allegations contained in the answer of the defendants or in denial of any allegation contained in the petition.

(The bill in equity referred to was thereupon marked "Defendants' Exhibit No. 96, April 24, 1915," and, with the exceptions above specified, will be found in the volume of defendants' exhibits.)

Mr. BLAIR. So far as counsel for defendants can see, that is all that we have. Of course the case is not formally closed, and we claim the right, if anything is brought to our attention that we think should go in, to offer it.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. The petitioner puts in evidence the fact that between June 30, 1913, and June 30, 1914, there were declared two regular three per cent dividends on the preferred stock of the Central Pacific Railway Company, amounting, in the aggregate, to $1,044,000, and a six per cent dividend on the common stock of the Central Pacific Railway Company, amounting, in the aggregate, to $4,036,530, and that, in addition to this, a special dividend, referred to by 2558 Mr. Kruttschnitt in his testimony, was declared on December 29, 1913, amounting to twenty per cent on the preferred stock and twenty per cent on the common stock, namely, $16,935,100.

(Whereupon an adjournment was taken, subject to notice, counsel for the defendants announcing that they, as far as they know, have no further testimony, but will give the matter further detailed consideration and formally announce the closing of their testimony hereafter.)

(Counsel for the petitioner stated that it is at present their belief that they will have no rebuttal to offer, but that they reserve the right to give definite notice on that subject after the defendants have definitely rested, it being understood that if nothing is said to the examiner as to further offers by counsel before the first of June, 1915, he may then place upon the record an automatic closing of the case.)

NEW YORK CITY, May 29, 1915.

Stipulation.

Counsel for defendants put in evidence a copy of the lease made March 1, 1912, by and between the Central Pacific Railway Company and the Southern Pacific Company.

Counsel for petitioner, while objecting to the offering of said lease in evidence on the ground that it is immaterial, incompetent, and irrelevant, and should not be taken as evidence of the facts recited in it, yet, subject to said objections, stipulate that the said copy may be put in evidence with the same effect as if it were the original of said lease; and it is 2560 Further stipulated that said offer of evidence will have the same effect as if it were made before the examiner with all parties present.

CITY AND COUNTY OF NEW YORK, ss.:

John V. B. Thayer, being duly sworn, deposes and says: That 2566 he is one of the vice presidents of the Union Trust Company of New York, one of the defendants in the above-entitled action.

That on August 1, 1899, a certain mortgage or deed of trust was made by and between the defendant Southern Pacific Company and the Union Trust Company of New York.

That the original of said mortgage or deed of trust is in the possession of the Union Trust Company of New York; that he has compared a printed copy of said mortgage with the said original mortgage; that he has prefixed to said copy a certificate dated May 21, 1915, and signed by him, to the effect that said printed copy is a true copy of the original mortgage, and that the said printed copy is, in fact, a true copy of said mortgage.

That the stock of the Central Pacific Railway Company deposited with the defendant Union Trust Company of New York, as trustee of the said mortgage, consists of certificates of preferred stock to the amount, at its face value, of seventeen million, four hundred thousand dollars ($17,400,000), and certificates of common stock to the amount, at its face value, of sixty-seven million, two hundred seventy-four thousand two hundred dollars ($67,274,200), and that the said 2567 certificates are all assigned in blank with irrevocable power to transfer the same.

That bonds secured by said mortgage have been issued, and that there are now outstanding such bonds secured by the said mortgage to the amount of thirty-four million, two hundred eighteen thousand, five hundred dollars ($34,218,500).

Challiss, Josiah Miller, of Kansas; Gilbert C. Monell and Augustus Kountz, T. M. Marquette, William H. Taylor, Alvin Saunders, of Nebraska; John Evans, of Colorado; together with five commissioners to be appointed by the Secretary of the Interior, and all persons who shall or may be associated with them, and their successors, are hereby created and erected into a body corporate and politic in deed and in law, by the name, style, and title of "The Union Pacific Railroad Company"; and by 5 that name shall have perpetual succession, and shall be able to sue and to be sued, plead and be impleaded, defend and be defended in all courts of law and equity within the United States, and may make and have a common seal; and the said corporation is hereby authorized and empowered to lay out, locate, construct, furnish, maintain, and enjoy a continuous railroad and telegraph, with the appurtenances, from a point on the one hundredth meridian of longitude west from Greenwich, between the south margin of the valley of the Republican River and the north margin of the valley of the Platte River, in the Territory of Nebraska, to the western boundary of Nevada Territory, upon the route and terms hereinafter provided, and is hereby vested with all the powers, privileges, and immunities necessary to carry into effect the purposes of this act as herein set forth. The capital stock of said company shall consist of one hundred thousand shares of one thousand dollars each, which shall be subscribed for and held in not more than two hundred shares by any one person, and shall be transferable in such manner as the by-laws of said corporation shall provide. The persons hereinbefore named, together with those to be appointed by the Secretary of the Interior, are hereby constituted and appointed commis-6 sioners, and such body shall be called the board of commissioners of the Union Pacific Railroad and Telegraph Company, and twenty-five shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business. The first meeting of said board shall be held at Chicago at such time as the commissioners from Illinois herein named shall appoint, not more than three nor less than one month after the passage of this act, notice of which shall be given by them to the other commissioners by depositing a call thereof in the post office at Chicago, post paid, to their address at least forty days before said meeting, and also by publishing said notice in one daily newspaper in each of the cities of Chicago and St. Louis. Said board shall organize by the choice from its number of a president, secretary, and treasurer, and they shall require from said treasurer such bonds as may be deemed proper, and may from time to time increase the amount thereof as they may deem proper. It shall be the duty of said board of commissioners to open books, or cause books to be opened, at such times and in such principal cities in the United States as they or a quorum of them shall determine, to receive subscriptions to the capital stock of said corporation, and a cash payment of ten per centum on all subscriptions, and to receipt 7 therefor. So soon as two thousand shares shall be in good faith subscribed for, and ten dollars per share actually paid into the treasury of the company the said president and secretary of said board of commissioners shall appoint a time and place for the first meeting of the subscribers to the stock of said company, and shall give notice thereof in at least one newspaper in each State in which subscription books have been opened at least thirty days previous to the day of meeting, and such subscribers as shall attend the meeting so called, either in person or by proxy, shall then and there elect by ballot not less than thirteen directors for said corporation; and in such election each share of said capital shall entitle the owner thereof to one vote. The president and secretary of the board of commissioners shall act as inspectors of said election, and shall certify under their hands the names of the directors elected at said meeting; and the said commissioners, treasurer, and secretary shall then deliver over to said directors all the properties, subscription books, and other books in their possession, and thereupon the duties of said commissioners and the officers previously appointed by them shall cease and determine forever, and thereafter the stock-8 holders shall constitute said body politic and corporate. At the time of the first and each triennial election of directors by the stockholders two additional directors shall be appointed by the President of the United States, who shall act with the body of directors, and to be denominated directors on the part of the Government; any vacancy happening in the Government directors at any time may be filled by the President of the United States. The directors to be appointed by the President shall not be stockholders in the Union Pacific Railroad Company. The directors so chosen shall, as soon as may be after their election, elect from their own number a president and vice president, and shall also elect a treasurer and secretary. No person shall be a director in said company unless he shall be a bona fide owner of at least five shares of stock in the said company, except the two directors to be appointed by the President as aforesaid. Said company, at any regular meeting of the stockholders called for that purpose, shall have power to make by-laws, rules, and regulations as they shall deem needful and proper touching the disposition of the stock, property, estate, and effects of the company not inconsistent herewith, the transfer of shares, the term of office, duties and conduct of their officers and servants, and all matters whatsoever which may appertain to the concerns of 9 said company; and the said board of directors shall have power to appoint such engineers, agents, and subordinates as may from time to time be necessary to carry into effect the object of this act, and to do all acts and things touching the location and construction of said road and telegraph. Said directors may require payment of subscriptions to the capital stock after due notice, at such times and in such proportions as they shall deem necessary to complete the railroad and telegraph within the time in this act prescribed. Said president, vice president, and directors shall hold their office for three years, and until their successors are duly elected and qualified, or for such less time as the by-laws of the corporation may prescribe; and a majority of said directors shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business. The secretary and treasurer shall give such bonds, with such security, as the said board shall from time to time require, and shall hold their offices at the will and pleasure of the directors. Annual meetings of the stockholders of the said corporation for the choice of officers (when they are to be chosen) and for the transaction of annual business shall be hold at such time and place and upon such notice as may be prescribed in the by-laws.

10 SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the right of way through the public lands be, and the same is hereby, granted to said company for the construction of said railroad and telegraph line; and the right, power, and authority is hereby given to said company to take from the public lands adjacent to the line of said road earth, stone, timber, and other materials for the construction thereof; said right of way is granted to said railroad to the extent of two hundred feet in width on each side of said railroad where it may pass over the public lands, including all necessary grounds for stations, buildings, workshops, and depots, machine shops, switches, side tracks, turntables, and water stations. The United States shall extinguish as rapidly as may be the Indian titles to all lands falling under the operation of this act and required for the said right of way and grants hereinafter made.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That there be, and is hereby, granted to the said company, for the purpose of aiding in the construction of said railroad and telegraph line and to secure the safe and speedy transportation of the mails, troops, munitions of war, and public stores thereon, every alternate section of public land, designated by odd numbers, to the amount of five alternate 11 sections per mile on each side of said railroad, on the line thereof and within the limits of ten miles on each side of said road, not sold, reserved, or otherwise disposed of by the United States, and to which a preemption or homestead claim may not have attached at the time the line of said road is definitely fixed: Provided, That all mineral lands shall be excepted from the operation of this act; but where the same shall contain timber, the timber thereon is hereby granted to said company. And all such lands so granted by this section which shall not be sold or disposed of by said company within three years after the entire road shall have been completed shall be subject to settlement and preemption like other lands at a price not exceeding one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre, to be paid to said company.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That whenever said company shall have completed forty consecutive miles of any portion of said railroad and telegraph line, ready for the service contemplated by this act, and supplied with all necessary drains, culverts, viaducts, crossings, sidings, bridges, turnouts, watering places, depots, equipments, furniture, and all other appurtenances of a first-class railroad, the rails and all the other iron used in the construction

12 and equipment of said road to be American manufacture of the best quality, the President of the United States shall appoint three commissioners to examine the same and report to him in relation thereto; and if it shall appear to him that forty consecutive miles of said railroad and telegraph line have been completed and equipped in all respects as required by this act, then, upon certificate of said commissioners to that effect, patents shall issue conveying the right and title to said lands to said company, on each side of the road as far as the same is completed, to the amount aforesaid; and patents shall in like manner issue as each forty miles of said railroad and telegraph line are completed, upon certificate of said commissioners. Any vacancies occurring in said board of commissioners by death, resignation, or otherwise shall be filled by the President of the United States: Provided, however, That no such commissioners shall be appointed by the President of the United States unless there shall be presented to him a statement, verified on oath by the president of said company that such forty miles have been completed, in the manner required by this act, and setting forth with certainty the points where such forty miles begin and where the same end; which oath shall be taken before a 13 judge of a court of record.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That for the purposes herein mentioned the Secretary of the Treasury shall, upon the certificate in writing of said commissioners of the completion and equipment of forty consecutive miles of said railroad and telegraph, in accordance with the provisions of this act, issue to said company bonds of the United States of one thousand dollars each, payable in thirty years after date, bearing six per centum per annum interest (said interest payable semiannually), which interest may be paid in United States Treasury notes or any other money or currency which the United States have or shall declare lawful money and a legal tender, to the amount of sixteen of said bonds per mile for such section of forty miles; and to secure the repayment to the United States as hereinafter provided, of the amount of said bonds so issued and delivered to said company, together with all interest thereon which shall have been paid by the United States, the issue of said bonds and delivery to the company shall ipso facto constitute a first mortgage on the whole line of the railroad and telegraph, together with the rolling stock, fixtures, and property of every kind and description, and 14 in consideration of which said bonds may be issued; and on the refusal or failure of said company to redeem said bonds, or any part of them, when required so to do by the Secretary of the Treasury, in accordance with the provisions of this act, the said road, with all the rights, functions, immunities, and appurtenances thereunto belonging, and also all lands granted to the said company by the United States, which, at the time of said default, shall remain in the ownership of the said company, may be taken possession of by the Secretary of the Treasury for the use and benefit of the U[illegible]

States: Provided, This section shall not apply to that part of any road now constructed.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That the grants aforesaid are made upon condition that said company shall pay said bonds at maturity, and shall keep said railroad and telegraph line in repair and use, and shall at all times transmit despatches over said telegraph line, and transport mails, troops, and munitions of war, supplies, and public stores upon said railroad for the Government, whenever required to do so by any department thereof, and that the Government shall at all times have the preference in the use of the same for all the purposes aforesaid (at fair and reasonable rates of compensation, not to exceed the amounts paid by private parties for the same kind of service); and all compensation for services rendered for the Government shall be applied to the payment of said bonds and interest until the whole amount is fully paid. Said company may also pay the United States, wholly or in part, in the same or other bonds, Treasury notes, or other evidences of debt against the United States, to be allowed at par; and after said road is completed, until said bonds and interest are paid, at least five per centum of the net earnings of said road shall also be annually applied to the payment thereof.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That said company shall file their assent to this act, under the seal of said company, in the Department of the Interior, within one year after the passage of this act, and shall complete said railroad and telegraph from the point of beginning as herein provided, to the western boundary of Nevada Territory before the first day of July, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four: Provided, That within two years after the passage of this act said company shall designate the general route of said road, as near as may be, and shall file a map of the same in the Department of the Interior, whereupon the Secretary of the Interior shall cause the lands within fifteen miles of said designated route or routes to be withdrawn from preemption, private entry, and sale; and when any portion of said route shall be finally located, the Secretary of the Interior shall cause the said lands hereinbefore granted to be surveyed and set off as fast as may be necessary for the purposes herein named: Provided, That in fixing the point of connection of the main trunk with the eastern connections, it shall be fixed at the most practicable point for the construction of the Iowa and Missouri branches, as hereinafter provided.

SEC. 8. And be it further enacted, That the line of said railroad and telegraph shall commence at a point on the one hundredth meridian of longitude west from Greenwich, between the south margin of the valley of the Republican River and the north margin of the valley of the Platte River, in the Territory of Nebraska, at a point to be fixed by the President of the United States, after actual surveys; thence running westerly upon the most direct, central, and practicable route through the territories of the United States to the western boundary of the Territory of Nevada, there to meet and connect with the line of the Central Pacific Railroad Company of California.

SEC. 9. And be it further enacted, That the Leavenworth, 17 Pawnee, and Western Railroad Company of Kansas are hereby authorized to construct a railroad and telegraph line from the Missouri River, at the mouth of the Kansas River on the south side thereof, so as to connect with the Pacific Railroad of Missouri to the aforesaid point on the one hundredth meridian of longitude west from Greenwich, as herein provided, upon the same terms and conditions in all respects as are provided in this act for the construction of the railroad and telegraph line first mentioned, and to meet and connect with the same at the meridian of longitude aforesaid; and in case the general route or line of road from the Missouri River to the Rocky Mountains should be so located as to require a departure northwardly from the proposed line of said Kansas railroad before it reaches the meridian of longitude aforesaid, the location of said Kansas road shall be made so as to conform thereto; and said railroad through Kansas shall be so located between the mouth of the Kansas River, as aforesaid and the aforesaid point, on the one hundredth meridian of longitude, that the several railroads from Missouri and Iowa, herein authorized to connect with the same, can make connection within the limits prescribed in this act, provided the same can be done without deviating from the general direction of 18 the whole line to the Pacific coast. The route in Kansas west of the meridian of Fort Riley to the aforesaid point, on the one hundredth meridian of longitude, to be subject to the approval of the President of the United States and to be determined by him on actual survey. And said Kansas company may proceed to build said railroad to the aforesaid point, on the one hundredth meridian of longitude west from Greenwich, in the Territory of Nebraska. The Central Pacific Railroad Company of California, a corporation existing under the laws of the State of California, are hereby authorized to construct a railroad and telegraph line from the Pacific coast at or near San Francisco or the navigable waters of the Sacramento River to the eastern boundary of California upon the same terms and conditions in all respects as are contained in this act for the construction of said railroad and telegraph line first mentioned, and to meet and connect with the first-mentioned railroad and telegraph line on the eastern boundary of California. Each of said companies shall file their acceptance of the conditions of this act in the Department of the Interior within six months after the passage of this act.

SEC. 10. And be it further enacted, That the said company
19 chartered by the State of Kansas shall complete one hundred miles of their said road, commencing at the mouth of the Kansas River, as aforesaid, within two years after filing their assent to the conditions of this act, as herein provided, and one hundred miles per year thereafter until the whole is completed; and the said Central Pacific Railroad Company of California shall complete fifty miles of their said road within two years after filing their assent to the provisions of this act, as herein provided, and fifty miles per year thereafter until the whole is completed; and after completing their roads, respectively, said companies, or either of them, may unite upon equal terms with the first-named company in constructing so much of said railroad and telegraph line and branch railroads and telegraph lines in this act hereinafter mentioned through the Territories from the State of California to the Missouri River as shall then remain to be constructed on the same terms and conditions as provided in this act in relation to the said Union Pacific Railroad Company. And the Hannibal and St. Joseph Railroad, the Pacific Railroad Company of Missouri, and the first-named company, or either of them, on filing their assent to this act, as aforesaid, may unite upon equal terms under this act with the said Kansas 20 company in constructing said railroad and telegraph to said meridian of longitude, with the consent of the said State of Kansas; and in case said first-named company shall complete their line to the eastern boundary of California before it is completed across said State by the Central Pacific Railroad Company of California, said first-named company is hereby authorized to continue in constructing the same through California, with the consent of said State, upon the terms mentioned in this act, until said roads shall meet and connect and the whole line of said railroad and telegraph is completed; and the Central Pacific Railroad Company of California, after completing its road across said State, is authorized to continue the construction of said railroad and telegraph through the Territories of the United States to the Missouri River, including the branch roads specified in this act, upon the routes hereinbefore and hereinafter indicated, on the terms and conditions provided in this act in relation to the said Union Pacific Railroad Company, until said roads shall meet and connect and the whole line of said railroad and branches and telegraph is completed.

SEC. 11. And be it further enacted, That for three hundred miles of said road, most mountainous and difficult of construction, to wit: one hundred and fifty miles westwardly from the eastern base of the Rocky Mountains, and one hundred and fifty miles eastwardly from the western base of the Sierra Nevada Mountains, said points to be fixed by the President of the United States, the bonds to be issued to aid in the construction thereof shall be treble the number per mile hereinbefore provided, and the same shall be issued, and the lands herein granted be set apart, upon the construction of every twenty miles thereof, upon the certificate of the commissioners as aforesaid that twenty consecutive miles of the same are completed; and between the sections last named of one hundred and fifty miles each, the bonds to be issued to aid in the construction thereof shall be double the number per mile first mentioned, and the same shall be issued, and the lands herein granted be set apart, upon the construction of every twenty miles thereof, upon the certificate of the commissioners as aforesaid that twenty consecutive miles of the same are completed: Provided, That no more than fifty thousand of said bonds shall be issued under this act to aid in constructing the main line of said railroad and telegraph.

SEC. 12. And be it further enacted, That whenever the route of said railroad shall cross the boundary of any State or Territory, or said meridian of longitude, the two companies meeting or uniting there shall agree upon its location at that point, with reference to the most direct and practicable through route, and in case of difference between them as to said location the President of the United States shall determine the said location; the companies named in each State and Territory to locate the road across the same between the points so agreed upon, except as herein provided. The track upon the entire line of railroad and branches shall be of uniform width, to be determined by the President of the United States, so that, when completed, cars can be run from the Missouri River to the Pacific coast; the grades and curves shall not exceed the maximum grades and curves of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad; the whole line of said railroad and branches and telegraph shall be operated and used for all purposes of communication, travel, and transportation, so far as the public and Government are concerned as one connected, continuous line; and the companies herein named in Missouri, Kansas, and California, filing their assent to the provisions of this act, shall receive and transport all iron rails, chairs, spikes, ties, timber, and all materials required for constructing and furnishing said first mentioned line between the aforesaid point, on the one-hundredth meridian of longitude and western boundary of Nevada Territory, whenever the same is required by said first-named company, at cost, over that portion of the roads of said companies constructed under the provisions of this act.

SEC. 13. And be it further enacted, That the Hannibal and Saint Joseph Railroad Company of Missouri may extend its roads f

Saint Joseph, via Atchison, to connect and unite with the road through Kansas, upon filing its assent to the provisions of this act, upon the same terms and conditions in all respects, for one hundred miles in length next to the Missouri River, as are provided in this act for the construction of the railroad and telegraph line first mentioned, and may for this purpose use any railroad charter which has been or may be granted by the Legislature of Kansas: Provided, That if actual survey shall render it desirable, the said company may construct their road, with the consent of the Kansas Legislature, on the most direct and practicable route west from St. Joseph, Missouri, so as to connect and unite with the road leading from the western boundary of Iowa at any point east of the one hundredth meridian of west longitude or with the main trunk road at said point; but in no event shall lands or bonds be given to said company, as herein directed, to aid in the construction of their said road for a greater distance than one hundred miles. And the Leavenworth, Pawnee and Western Railroad Company of Kansas may construct their road from Leavenworth to unite with the road through Kansas.

SEC. 14. And be it further enacted, That the said Union Pacific Railroad Company is hereby authorized and required to construct a single line of railroad and telegraph from a point on the western boundary of the State of Iowa, to be fixed by the President of the United States, upon the most direct and practicable route, to be subject to his approval, so as to form a connection with the lines of said company at some point on the one hundredth meridian of longitude aforesaid, from the point of commencement on the western boundary of the State of Iowa, upon the same terms and conditions in all respects as are contained in this act for the construction of the said railroad and telegraph first mentioned; and the said Union Pacific Railroad Company shall complete one hundred miles of the road and telegraph in this section provided for in two years after filing their assent to the conditions of this act, as by the terms of this act required, and at the rate of one hundred miles per year thereafter until the whole is completed: Provided, That a failure upon the part of said company to make said connection in the time aforesaid and to perform the obligations imposed on said company by this section and to operate said road in the same manner as the main line shall be operated shall forfeit to the Government of the United States all the rights, privileges, and franchises granted to and conferred upon said company by this act. And whenever there shall be a line of railroad completed through Minnesota or Iowa to Sioux City, then the said Pacific Railroad Company is hereby authorized and required to construct a railroad and telegraph from said Sioux City upon the most direct and practicable route to a point on and so as to connect with the branch railroad and telegraph in this section hereinbefore mentioned or with the said Union Pacific Railroad, said point of junction to be fixed by the President of the United States, not further west than the one hundredth meridian of longitude aforesaid, and on the same terms and conditions as provided in this act for the construction of the Union Pacific Railroad as aforesaid, and to complete the same at the rate of one hundred miles per year; and should said company fail to comply with the requirements of this act in relation to the said Sioux City railroad and telegraph, the said company shall suffer the same forfeitures prescribed in relation to the Iowa branch railroad and telegraph hereinbefore mentioned.

26 SEC. 15. And be it further enacted, That any other railroad company now incorporate, or hereafter to be incorporated, shall have the right to connect their road with the road and branches provided for by this act, at such places and upon such just and equitable terms as the President of the United States may prescribe. Wherever the word company is used in this act it shall be construed to embrace the words, their associates, successors, and assigns, the same as if the words had been properly added thereto.

SEC. 16. And be it further enacted, That at any time after the passage of this act all of the railroad companies named herein, and assenting hereto, or any two or more of them, are authorized to form themselves into one consolidated company; notice of such consolidation, in writing, shall be filed in the Department of the Interior, and such consolidated company shall thereafter proceed to construct said railroad and branches and telegraph line upon the terms and conditions provided in this act.

SEC. 17. And be it further enacted, That in case said company or companies shall fail to comply with the terms and conditions of this act, by not completing said road and telegraph and branches within a reasonable time, or by not keeping the same in repair and use,

27 but shall permit the same, for an unreasonable time, to remain unfinished or out of repair and unfit for use, Congress may pass any act to insure the speedy completion of said road and branches, or put the same in repair and use, and may direct the income of said railroad and telegraph line to be thereafter devoted to the use of the United States, to repay all such expenditures caused by the default or neglect of such company or companies: Provided, That is, said roads are not completed, so as to form a continuous line of railroad, ready for use, from the Missouri River to the navigable waters of the Sacramento River in California, by the first day of July, eighteen hundred and seventy-six, the whole of all of said railroads before mentioned and to be constructed under the provisions of this act, together with all their furniture, fixtures, rolling stock machine shops, lands, tenements, and hereditaments, and property of every kind and character, shall be forfeited to and be taken possession of by the United States: Provided, That of the bonds of the United States in this act provided to be delivered for any and all parts of the roads to be constructed east of the one hundredth meridian of west longitude from Greenwich, and for any part of the road west of the west foot of the Sierra Nevada Mountain, there shall be reserved of each part and installment twenty-five 28 per centum, to be and remain in the United States Treasury, undelivered, until said road and all parts thereof provided for in this act are entirely completed; and of all the bonds provided to be delivered for the said road, between the two points aforesaid, there shall be reserved out of each installment fifteen per centum, to be and remain in the Treasury until the whole of the road provided for in this act is fully completed; and if the said road or any part thereof shall fail of completion at the time limited therefor in this act, then and in that case the said part of said bonds so reserved shall be forfeited to the United States.

SEC. 18. And be it further enacted, That whenever it appears that the net earnings of the entire road and telegraph, including the amount allowed for services rendered for the United States, after deducting all expenditures, including repairs, and the furnishing, running, and managing of said road, shall exceed ten per centum upon its cost, exclusive of the five per centum to be paid to the United States, Congress may reduce the rates of fare thereon, 29 if unreasonable in amount, and may fix and establish the same by law. And the better to accomplish the object of this act, namely, to promote the public interest and welfare by the construction of said railroad and telegraph line, and keeping the same in working order, and to secure to the Government at all times (but particularly in time of war) the use and benefits of the same for postal, military, and other purposes, Congress may at any time, having due regard for the rights of said companies named herein, add to, alter, amend, or repeal this act.

SEC. 19. And be it further enacted, That the several railroad companies herein named are authorized to enter into an arrangement with the Pacific Telegraph Company, the Overland Telegraph Company, and the California State Telegraph Company, so that the present line of telegraph between the Missouri River and San Francisco may be moved upon or along the line of said railroad and branches as fast as said roads and branches are built; and if said arrangement be entered into and the transfer of said telegraph line be made in accordance therewith to the line of said railroad and branches, such transfer shall, for all purposes of this act, be held and considered a fulfillment on the part of said railroad companies of the provisions of this act in regard to the construction of 30 said lines of telegraph. And, in case of disagreement, said telegraph companies are authorized to remove their line of telegraph along and upon the line of railroad herein contemplated without prejudice to the rights of said railroad companies named herein.

SEC. 20. And be it further enacted, That the corporation hereby created and the roads connected therewith, under the provisions of this act, shall make to the Secretary of the Treasury an annual report wherein shall be set forth—

First. The names of the stockholders and their places of residence, so far as the same can be ascertained;

Second. The names and residences of the directors and all other officers of the company;

Third. The amount of stock subscribed and the amount thereof actually paid in;

Fourth. A description of the lines of road surveyed, of the lines thereof fixed upon for the construction of the road, and the cost of such surveys;

Fifth. The amount received from passengers on the road;

Sixth. The amount received for freight thereon;

Seventh. A statement of the expense of said road and its fixtures;

31 Eighth. A statement of the indebtedness of said company, setting forth the various kinds thereof, which report shall be sworn to by the president of the said company, and shall be presented to the Secretary of the Treasury on or before the first day of July in each year.

Approved July 1, 1862.

32 PETITIONER'S EXHIBIT NO. 3, SEPTEMBER 21, 1914.

[Extract from U. S. Statutes at Large, volume 13, pp. 356-365.]

CHAP. CCXVI.—An act to amend an act entitled "An act to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Missouri River to the Pacific Ocean, and to secure to the Government the use of the same for postal, military, and other purposes", approved July first, eighteen hundred and sixty-two.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the capital stock of the company entitled the Union Pacific Railroad Company, authorized by the act of which this act is amendatory, shall be in shares of one hundred dollars, instead of one thousand dollars, each;

that the number of shares shall be one million instead of one hundred thousand; and that the number of shares which any person shall hold to entitle him to serve as a director in said company (except the five directors to be appointed by Government) shall be fifty shares instead of five shares; and that every subscriber to said capital stock for each share of one thousand dollars, heretofore subscribed, shall be entitled to a certificate for ten shares of one hundred dollars each; and that the following words in section first of said act, "which shall be subscribed for and held in not more than two hundred shares by any one person", be, and the same are hereby, repealed.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the Union Pacific Railroad Company shall cause books to be kept open to receive subscriptions to the capital stock of said company (until the entire capital of one hundred millions of dollars shall be subscribed), at the general office of said company in the city of New York, and in each of the cities of Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Chicago, Cincinnati, and Saint Louis, at such places as may be designated by the President of the United States, and in such other localities as may be directed by him. No subscription for said stock shall be deemed valid unless the subscriber therefor shall, at the time of subscribing, pay or remit to the treasurer of the company an amount per share subscribed by him equal to the amount per share previously paid by the then existing stockholders. The said company shall make assessments upon its stockholders of not less than five dollars per share, and at intervals of not exceeding six months from and after the passage of this act, until the par value of all shares subscribed shall be fully paid; and money only shall be receivable for any such assessment, or as equivalents for any portion of the capital stock hereinbefore authorized. The capital stock of said company shall not be increased beyond the actual cost of said road. And the stock of the company shall be deemed personal property, and shall be transferable on the books of the company, at the general office of said company in the city of New York, or at such other transfer office as the company may establish.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the Union Pacific Railroad Company, and all other companies provided for in this act and the act to which this is an amendment, be, and hereby are, empowered to enter upon, purchase, take, and hold any lands or premises that may be necessary and proper for the construction and working of said road, not exceeding in width one hundred feet on each side of its center line, unless a greater width be required for the purpose of excavation or embankment; and also any lands or premises that may be necessary and proper for turnouts, standing places for cars, depots, station house(s), or any other structures required in the construction and operating of said road. And each of said companies shall have the right to cut and remove trees or other materials that might by falling encumber its roadbed, though standing or 35 being more than one hundred feet therefrom. And in case the owner or claimant of such lands or premises and such company can not agree as to the damages, the amount shall be determined by the appraisal of three disinterested commissioners, who may be appointed upon application by any party to any judge of a court of record in any of the territories in which the lands or premises to be taken lie; and said commissioners, in their assessments of damages, shall appraise such premises at what would have been the value thereof if the road had not been built; and upon return into court of such appraisement, and upon the payment to the clerk thereof of the amount so awarded by the commissioners for the use and benefit of the owner thereof, said premises shall be deemed to be taken by said company, which shall thereby acquire full title to the same for the purposes aforesaid. And either party feeling aggrieved by said assessment may, within thirty days, file an appeal therefrom, and demand a jury of twelve men to estimate the damage sustained; but such appeal shall not interfere with the rights of said company to enter upon the premises taken, or to do any act necessary in the construction of its road. And said party appealing shall give bonds with sufficient surety or sureties for the payment of any 36 costs that may arise upon such appeal. And in case the party appealing does not obtain a more favorable verdict, such party shall pay the whole cost incurred by the appellee, as well as its own. And the payment into court for the use of the owner or claimant of a sum equal to that finally awarded shall be held to vest in said company the title of said land and the right to use and occupy the same for the construction, maintaining, and operating of the road of said company. And in case any of the lands to be taken as aforesaid shall be held by any person residing without the territory, or subject to any legal disability, the court may appoint a proper person who shall give bonds with sufficient surety or sureties for the faithful execution of his trust, and who may represent in court the person disqualified or absent as aforesaid, when the same proceeding shall be had in reference to the appraisement of the premises to be taken and with the same effect as have been already described. And the title of the company to the land taken by virtue of this act shall not be affected nor impaired by reason of any failure by any guardian to discharge faithfully his trust. And in case it shall be necessary for either of the said companies to enter upon lands which are unoccupied, and of which there is no apparent owner or in manner described for the purpose of ascertaining the value of and acquiring a title to the same; and the court may determine the kind of notice to be served on such owner or owners, and may, in its discretion, appoint an agent or guardian to represent such owner or owners in case of his or their incapacity or nonappearance. But in case no claimant shall appear within six years from the time of the opening of said road across any land, all claim to damages against said company shall be barred. It shall be competent for the legal guardian of any infant, or any other person under guardianship, to agree with the proper company as to damages sustained by reason of the taking of any lands of any such person under disability as aforesaid for the use as aforesaid; and upon such agreement being made and approved by the court having supervision of the official acts of said guardian, the said guardian shall have full power to make and execute a conveyance thereof to the said company and shall vest the title thereto in the said company.

37 claimant, it may proceed to take and use the same for the purpose of its said railroad, and may institute

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That section three of said act be hereby amended by striking out the word "five", where it the same occurs in said section, and by inserting in lieu thereof the word "ten"; and by striking out the word "ten", where the same occurs in said section, and by inserting in lieu thereof the word "twenty". And section seven of said act is hereby amended by striking out the word "fifteen", where the same occurs in said section, and inserting in lieu thereof the word "twenty-five". And the term "mineral land", wherever the same occurs in this act, and the act to which this is an amendment, shall not be construed to include coal and iron land. And any lands granted by this act, or the act to which this is an amendment, shall not defeat or impair any preemption, homestead, swamp land, or other lawful claim, nor include any Government reservation or mineral lands, or the improvements of any bona fide settler, or any lands returned and denominated as mineral lands, and the timber necessary to support his said improvements as a miner or agriculturalist, to be ascertained under such rules as have been or may be established by the Commissioner of the General Land Office in conformity with the provisions of the preemption laws: Provided, That the quantity thus exempted by the operation of this act, and the act to which this act is an amendment, shall not exceed one hundred and sixty acres for each settler who claims as an agriculturalist, and such quantity for each settler who claims as a miner, as the same commissioner may establish by general regulation: Provided also, That the phrase "but where the same shall contain timber, the timber thereon is hereby granted to said company", in the proviso to said section three, shall not apply to the timber growing or being on any land farther than [illegible] miles from the center line of any one of said roads or branches mentioned in said act or in this act. And all lands shall be excluded from the operation of this act, and of the act to which this act is an amendment, which were located, or selected to be located, under the provisions of an act entitled "An act donating lands to the several States and Territories which may provide colleges for the benefit of agriculture and the mechanic arts", approved July second, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, and notice thereof given at the proper land office.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That the time for designating the general route of said railroad, and of filing the map of the same, and the time for the completion of that part of the railroads required by the terms of said act of each company, be, and the same is hereby, extended one year from the time in said act designated; and that the Central Pacific Railroad Company of California shall be required to complete twenty-five miles of their said road in each 40 year thereafter, and the whole to the State line within four years, and that only one-half of the compensation for services rendered for the Government by said companies shall be required to be applied to the payment of the bonds issued by the Government in aid of the construction of said roads.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That the proviso to section four of said act is hereby modified as follows, viz.: And the President of the United States is hereby authorized, at any time after the passage of this act, to appoint for each and every of said roads three commissioners, as provided for in the act to which this is amendatory; and the verified statement of the president of the California company, required by said section four, shall be filed in the office of the United States surveyor-general for the State of California, instead of being presented to the President of the United States; and the said surveyor-general shall thereupon notify the said commissioners of the filing of such statement, and the said commissioners shall thereupon proceed to examine the portion of said railroad and telegraph line so completed, and make their report thereon to the President of the United States, as provided by the act of which this is amendatory. And such statement may be filed, and such rail-41 road and telegraph line be examined and reported on, by the said commissioners and the requisite amount of bonds may be issued and the lands appertaining thereto may be set apart, located, entered, and patented, as provided in this act and the act to which this is amendatory, upon the construction by said railroad company of California of any portion of not less than twenty consecutive miles of their said railroad and telegraph line, upon the certificate of said commissioners that such portion is completed as required by the act to which this is amendatory. And section ten of the act of which this is amendatory is hereby amended by inserting, after the words "United States", in the last clause, the words "and States intervening".

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That so much of section seventeen of said act as provides for a reservation by the Government of a portion of the bonds to be issued to aid in the construction of the said railroads is hereby repealed. And the failure of any one company to comply fully with the conditions and requirements of this act, and the act to which this is amendatory, shall not work a forfeiture of the rights, privileges, or franchise of any other company or companies that shall have complied with the same.

SEC. 8. And be it further enacted, That for the purpose of facilitating the work on said railroad, and of enabling the said company as early as practicable to commence the grading of said railroad in the region of the mountains, between the eastern base of the Rocky Mountains and the western base of the Sierra Nevada Mountains, so that the same may be finally completed within the time required by law, it is hereby provided that whenever the chief engineer of the said company, and said commissioners, shall certify that a certain proportion of the work required to prepare the road for the superstructure on any such section of twenty miles is done (which said certificate shall be duly verified), the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and required, upon the delivery of such certificate, to issue to said company a proportion of said bonds, not exceeding two-thirds of the amount of bonds authorized to be issued under the provisions of the act, to aid in the construction of such section of twenty miles, nor in any case exceeding two-thirds of the value of the work done, the remaining one-third to remain until the said section is fully completed and certified by the commissioners appointed by the President, according to the terms and provisions of the said act; and no such bonds shall issue to the Union Pacific Railroad Company for work done west of Salt Lake City under this section, more than three hundred miles in advance of the completed continuous line of said railroad from the point of beginning on the one hundredth meridian of longitude.

SEC. 9. And be it further enacted, That to enable any one of said corporations to make convenient and necessary connections with other roads, it is hereby authorized to establish and maintain all necessary ferries upon and across the Missouri River and other rivers which its road may pass in its course; and authority is hereby given said corporation to construct bridges over said Missouri River, and all other rivers for the convenience of said road: Provided, That any bridge or bridges it may construct over the Missouri River, or any other navigable river on the line of said road, shall be constructed with suitable and proper draws for the passage of steamboats, and shall be built, kept, and maintained at the expense of said company in such manner as not to impair the usefulness of said rivers for navigation to any greater extent than such structures of the most approved character necessarily do: And provided further, That any company authorized by this act to construct its road and telegraph line from the Missouri River to the initial point aforesaid may 44 construct its road and telegraph line so as to connect with the Union Pacific Railroad at any point westwardly of such initial point, in case such company shall deem such westward connection more practicable or desirable; and in aid of the construction of so much of its road and telegraph line as shall be a departure from the route hereinbefore provided for its road, such company shall be entitled to all the benefits, and be subject to all the conditions and restrictions, of this act: Provided further, however, That the bonds of the United States shall not be issued to such company for a greater amount than is hereinbefore provided, if the same had united with the Union Pacific Railroad on the 100th degree of longitude; nor shall such company be entitled to receive any greater amount of alternate sections of public lands than are also herein provided.

SEC. 10. And be it further enacted, That section five of said act be so modified and amended that the Union Pacific Railroad Company, the Central Pacific Railroad Company, and any other company authorized to participate in the construction of said road, may, on the completion of each section of said road, as provided in this act and the act to which this act is an amendment, issue their first mortgage bonds on their respective railroad and telegraph 45 lines to an amount not exceeding the amount of the bonds of the United States, and of even tenor and date, time of maturity, rate and character of interest with the bonds authorized to be issued to said railroad companies, respectively. And the lien of the United States bonds shall be subordinate to that of the bonds of any or either of said companies hereby authorized to be issued on their respective roads, property, and equipments, except as to the provisions of the sixth section of the act to which this act is an amendment, relating to the transmission of despatches and the transportation of mails, troops, munitions of war, supplies, and public stores for the Government of the United States. And said section is further amended by striking out the word "forty" and inserting in lieu thereof the words "on each and every section of not less than twenty".

SEC. 11. And be it further enacted, That if any of the railroad companies entitled to bonds of the United States, or to issue their first mortgage bonds herein provided for has, at the time of the ap[illegible] of this act issued, or shall thereafter issue, any of its own bonds or securities in such form or manner as in law or equity to entitle the same to priority or preference of payment to the said guaranteed bonds, or said first mortgage bonds, the amount of such corporate bonds outstanding and unsatisfied, or uncancelled, shall be deducted from the amount of such Government and first mortgage bonds which the company may be entitled to receive and issue; and such an amount only of such Government bonds and such first mortgage bonds shall be granted or permitted as, added to such outstanding, unsatisfied, or uncancelled bonds of the company, shall make up the whole amount per mile to which the company would otherwise have been entitled: And provided further, That before any bonds shall be so given by the United States, the company claiming them shall present to the Secretary of the Treasury an affidavit of the president and secretary of the company, to be sworn to before the judge of a court of record, setting forth whether said company has issued any such bonds or securities, and, if so, particularly describing the same, and such other evidence as the secretary may require, so as to enable him to make the deduction herein required; and such affidavit shall then be filed and deposited in the office of the Secretary of the Interior. And any person swearing falsely to any such affidavit shall be deemed guilty of perjury and, on conviction thereof, shall be punished as aforesaid: Provided, also, That no land granted by this act shall be conveyed to any party or parties, and no bonds shall be issued to any company or companies, party or parties, on account of any road or part thereof, made prior to the passage of the act to which this act is an amendment, or made subsequent thereto under the provisions of any act or acts other than this act and the act amended by this act.

SEC. 12. And be it further enacted, That the Leavenworth, Pawnee, and Western Railroad Company, now known as the Union Pacific Railroad Company, eastern division, shall build the railroad from the mouth of Kansas River by the way of Leavenworth or, if that be not deemed the best route, then the said company shall, within two years, build a railroad from the city of Leavenworth to unite with the main stem at or near the city of Lawrence; but to aid in the construction of said branch the said company shall not be entitled to any bonds. And if the Union Pacific Railroad Company shall not be proceeding in good faith to build the said railroad through the territories when the Leavenworth, Pawnee, and Western Railroad Company, now known as the Union Pacific Railroad Company, eastern division, shall have completed their road to the hundredth degree of longitude, then the last-named company may proceed to make said road westward until it meets and connects with the Central Pacific Railroad Company on the same line. And the said railroad from the mouth of Kansas River to the one hundredth meridian of longitude shall be made by the way of Lawrence and Topeka or on the bank of the Kansas River opposite said towns: Provided, That no bonds shall be issued or land certified by the United States to any person or company for the construction of any part of the main trunk line of said railroad west of the one hundredth meridian of longitude and east of the Rocky Mountains until said road shall be completed from or near Omaha on the Missouri River to the said one hundredth meridian of longitude.

SEC. 13. And be it further enacted, That at and after the next election of directors the number of directors to be elected by the stockholders shall be fifteen; and the number of directors to be appointed by the President shall be five; and the President shall appoint three additional directors to serve until the next regular election, and thereafter five directors. At least one of said Government directors shall be placed on each of the standing committees of said company and at least one on every special committee that may be appointed. The Government directors shall, from time to time, report to the Secretary of the Interior, in answer to any inquiries he may 49 make of them, touching the condition, management, and progress of the work, and shall communicate to the Secretary of the Interior at any time such information as should be in the possession of the department. They shall, as often as may be necessary to a full knowledge of the condition and management of the line, visit all portions of the line of road, whether built or surveyed; and while absent from home attending to their duties as directors shall be paid their actual travelling expenses and be allowed and paid such reasonable compensation for their time actually employed as the board of directors may decide.

SEC. 14. And be it further enacted, That the next election for directors of said railroad shall be held on the first Wednesday of October next, at the office of said company in the city of New York, between the hours of ten o'clock a. m. and four o'clock p. m. of said day; and all subsequent regular elections shall be held annually thereafter at the same place; and the directors shall hold their offices for one year, and until their successors are qualified.

SEC. 15. And be it further enacted, That the several companies authorized to construct the aforesaid roads are hereby required
50 to operate and use said roads and telegraph for all purposes of communication, travel, and transportation, so far as the public and the Government are concerned, as one continuous line; and, in such operation and use, to afford and secure to each equal advantages and facilities as to rates, time, and transportation, without any discrimination of any kind in favor of the road or business of any or either of said companies, or adverse to the road or busine[illegible] or either of the others, and it shall not be lawful for the proprietors of any line of telegraph authorized by this act or the act amended by this act to refuse or fail to convey for all persons requiring the transmission of news and messages of like character on pain of forfeiting to the person injured for each offence the sum of one hundred dollars and such other damage as he may have suffered on account of said refusal or failure, to be sued for and recovered in any court of the United States or of any State or Territory of competent jurisdiction.

SEC. 16. And be it further enacted, That any two or more of the companies authorized to participate in the benefits of this act are hereby authorized at any time to unite and consolidate their organizations, as the same may or shall be, upon such terms and conditions, and in such manner as they may agree upon, and as shall not be incompatible with this act or the laws of the State or States in which the roads of such companies may be, and to assume and adopt such corporate name and style as they may agree upon, with a capital stock not to exceed the actual cost of the roads so to be consolidated, and shall file a copy of such consolidation in the Department of the Interior; and thereupon such organization so formed and consolidated shall succeed to, possess, and be entitled to receive from the Government of the United States all and singular the grants, benefits, immunities, guarantees, acts, and things to be done and performed, and be subject to the same terms, conditions, restrictions, and requirements which said companies respectively, at the time of such consolidation, are or may be entitled or subject to under this act, in place and substitution of said companies so consolidated, respectively. And all other provisions of this act, so far as applicable, relating or in any manner appertaining to the companies so consolidated, or either thereof, shall apply and be of force as to such consolidated organization. And in case upon the completion by such consolidated organization of the roads, or either of them, of the companies so consolidated, any other of the road or roads of either of the other companies authorized as aforesaid (and forming or intended or necessary to form a portion of a continuous line from each of the several points on the Missouri River hereinbefore designated to the Pacific coast) shall not have constructed the number of miles of its said road within the time herein required, such consolidated organization is hereby authorized to continue the construction of its road and telegraph in the general direction and route upon which such incomplete or unconstructed road is hereinbefore authorized to be built until such continuation of the road of such consolidated organization shall reach the constructed road and telegraph of said other company, and at such point to connect and unite therewith; and for and in aid thereof the said consolidated organization may do and perform, in reference to such portion of road and telegraph as shall so be in continuation of its constructed road and telegraph, and to the construction and equipment thereof, all and singular, the several acts and things hereinbefore provided, authorized, or granted to be done by the company herinbefore authorized to construct and equip the same, and shall be entitled to similar and like grants, benefits, immunities, guarantees, acts, and things to be done and performed by the Government of the United States, by the President of the United States, by the Secretaries of the Treasury and Interior, and by 53 commissioners in reference to such company, and to such portion of the road hereinbefore authorized to be constructed by it, and upon the like and similar terms and conditions, so far as the same are applicable thereto. And said consolidated company shall pay to said defaulting company the value to be estimated by competent engineers of all the work done and material furnished by said defaulting company, which may be adopted and used by said consolidated company in the progress of the work under the provisions of this section: Provided, nevertheless, That said defaulting company may at any time, before receiving pay for its said work and material, as hereinbefore provided, on its own election, pay said consolidated company the value of the work done and material furnished by said consolidated company, to be estimated by competent engineers, necessary for and used in the construction of the road of said defaulting company, and resume the control of its said road; and all the rights, benefits, and privileges which shall be acquired, possessed, or exercised pursuant to this section shall be to that extent an abatement of the rights, benefits, and privileges hereinbefore granted to such other company. And in case any company authorized thereto shall not enter into such consolidated organization, such company, upon the completion of its road as hereinbefore pro-54 vided, shall be entitled to, and is hereby authorized to, continue and extend the same under the circumstances and in accordance with the provisions of this section, and to have all the benefits thereof, as fully and completely as are herein provided touching such consolidated organization. And in case more than one such consolidated organization shall be made pursuant to this act, the terms and conditions of this act hereinbefore recited as to one shall apply in like manner, force, and effect to the other: Provided, however, That rights and interests at any time acquired by one such consolidated organization shall not be impaired by another thereof. It is further provided that, should the Central Pacific Railroad Company of California complete their line to the eastern line of the State of California before the line of the Union Pacific Railroad Company shall have been extended westward so as to meet the of said first-named company, said first-named company may extend their line of road eastward one hundred and fifty miles on the established route so as to meet and connect with the line of the Union Pacific road, complying in all respects with the provisions and restrictions of this act as to said Union Pacific road, and upon doing so shall enjoy all the rights, privileges, and benefits conferred by this act on said Union Pacific Railroad Company.

SEC. 17. And be it further enacted, That so much of section fourteen of said act as relates to a branch from Sioux City be, and the same is hereby, amended so as to read as follows: That whenever a line of railroad shall be completed through the States of Iowa or Minnesota to Sioux City, such company, now organized, or may hereafter be organized, under the laws of Iowa, Minnesota, Dakota, or Nebraska as the President of the United States, by its request, may designate or approve for that purpose, shall construct and operate a line of railroad and telegraph from Sioux City, upon the most direct and practicable route, to such a point on, and so as to connect with, the Iowa branch of the Union Pacific Railroad from Omaha, or the Union Pacific Railroad, as such company may select, and on the same terms and conditions as are provided in this act and the act to which this is an amendment, for the construction of the said Union and Pacific Railroad and telegraph line and branches; and said company shall complete the same at the rate of fifty miles per year: Provided, That said Union Pacific Railroad Company shall be, and is hereby, released from the construction of said branch. And said company constructing said branch shall not be entitled to receive in bonds an amount larger than the said Union Pacific Railroad Company would be entitled to receive if it had constructed the branch under this act and the act to which this is an amendment; but said company shall be entitled to receive alternate sections of land for ten miles in width on each side of the same along the whole length of said branch: And provided further, That if a railroad should not be completed to Sioux City, across Iowa or Minnesota, within eighteen months from the date of this act, then said company designated by the President, as aforesaid, may commence, continue, and complete the construction of said branch as contemplated by the provisions of this act: Provided, however, That if the said company so designated by the President as aforesaid shall not complete the said branch from Sioux City to the Pacific Railroad within ten years from the passage of this act, then, and in that case, all of the railroad which shall have been constructed by said company shall be forfeited to, and become the property of, the United States.

SEC. 18. And be it further enacted, That the Burlington and Missouri River Railroad Company, a corporation organized under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Iowa, be, and hereby is, authorized to extend i[t]s road through the Territory of Nebraska from the point where it strikes the Missouri River, south of the mouth 57 of the Platte River, to some point not further west than the one-hundredth meridian of west longitude, so as to connect by the most practicable route with the main trunk of the Union Pacific Railroad, or that part of it which runs from Omaha to the said one-hundredth meridian of west longitude. And, for the purpose of enabling said Burlington and Missouri River Railroad Company to construct that portion of their road herein authorized, the right of way through the public lands is hereby granted to said company for the construction of said road. And the right, power, and authority is hereby given to said company to take from the public lands adjacent to the line of said road earth, stone, timber, and other materials for the construction thereof. Said right of way is granted to said company to the extent of two hundred feet where it may pass over the public lands, including all necessary grounds for stations, buildings, workshops, depots, machine shops, switches, side-tracks, turntables, and water stations. And the United States shall extinguish, as rapidly as may be consistent with public policy and the welfare of the said Indians, the Indian titles to all lands falling under the operation of this section and required for the said right of way and grant of land herein made.

SEC. 19. And be it further enacted, That for the purpose
58 of aid in the construction of said road there be, and hereby is, granted to the said Burlington and Missouri River Railroad Company every alternate section of public land (excepting mineral lands as provided in this act) designated by odd numbers, to the amount of ten alternate sections per mile on each side of said road, on the line thereof, and not sold, reserved, or otherwise disposed of by the United States, and to which a preemption or homestead claim may not have attached at the time the line of said road is definitely fixed: Provided, That said company shall accept this grant within one year from the passage of this act, by filing such acceptance with the Secretary of the Interior, and shall also establish the line of said road and file a map thereof with the Secretary of the Interior within one year of the date of said acceptance, when the said Secretary shall withdraw the lands embraced in this grant from market.

SEC. 20. And be it further enacted, That whenever said Burlington and Missouri River Railroad Company shall have completed twenty consecutive miles of the road mentioned in the foregoing section, in the manner provided for other roads mentioned in this act and the act to which this is an amendment, the President of the United States shall appoint three commissioners to examine 59 and report to him in relation thereto; and if it shall appear

him that twenty miles of said road have been completed, as required by this act, then, upon certificate of said commissioner(s) to that effect, patents shall issue conveying the right and title to said lands to said company on each side of said road, as far as the same is completed, to the amount aforesaid; and such examination, report, and conveyance, by patents, shall continue from time to time in like manner until said road shall have been completed. And the President shall appoint said commissioners, fill vacancies in said commission, as provided in relation to other roads mentioned in the act to which this is an amendment. And the said company shall be entitled to all the privileges and immunities granted to the Hannibal and Saint Joseph's Railroad Company by the said last-mentioned act, so far as the same may be applicable: Provided, That no Government bonds shall be issued to the said Burlington and Missouri River Railroad Company to aid in the construction of said extension of its road: And provided further, That said extension shall be completed within the period of ten years from the passage of this act.

SEC. 21. And be it further enacted, That before any land granted by this act shall be conveyed to any company or party entitled to thereto under this act, there shall first be paid into the Treasury of the United States the cost of surveying, selecting, and conveying the same, by the said company or party in interest, as the titles shall be required by said company, which amount shall, without any further appropriation, stand to the credit of the proper account, to be used by the Commissioner of the General Land Office for the prosecution of the survey of the public lands along the line of said road, and so from year to year until the whole shall be completed as provided under the provisions of this act.

SEC. 22. And be it further enacted, That Congress may at any time alter, amend, or repeal this act.

Approved July 2, 1864.

[Extract from U. S. Statutes at Large, volume 13, page 504.]

CHAP. LXXXVIII.—An act to amend an act entitled "An act to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Missouri River to the Pacific Ocean and to secure to the Government the use of the same for postal, military, and other purposes," approved July first, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, and to amend an act amendatory thereof, approved July second, eighteen hundred and sixty-four.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled. That section ten of said act of July second, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, be so modified and amended as to allow the Central Pacific Railroad Company and the Western Pacific Railroad Company, of California; the Union Pacific Railroad Company; the Union Pacific Railroad Company, eastern division; and all other companies provided for in the said act of the second of July, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, to issue their six per centum thirty years' bonds, interest payable in any lawful money of the United States, upon their separate roads.

62 And the same companies are hereby authorized to issue, respectively, their bonds to the extent of one hundred miles in advance of a continuous completed line of construction.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the assignment made by the Central Pacific Railroad Company of California to the Western Pacific Railroad Company of said State of the right to construct all that portion of said railroad and telegraph from the city of San Jose to the city of Sacramento is hereby ratified and confirmed to the said Western Pacific Railroad Company, with all the privileges and benefits of the several acts of Congress relating thereto and subject to all the conditions thereof: Provided, That the time within which the said Western Pacific Railroad Company shall be required to construct the first twenty miles of their said road shall be one year from the first day of July, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, and that the entire road shall be completed from San Jose to Sacramento, connecting at the latter point with the said Central Pacific Railroad, within four years thereafter.

Approved, March 3, 1865.

[14 Statutes at Large, pp. 79, 80.]

CHAP. CLIX.—An act to amend an act entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Missouri River to the Pacific Ocean, and to secure to the Government the use of the same for postal, military, and other purposes,' approved July 1, 1862," approved July 2, 1864.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Union Pacific Railway Company, eastern division, is hereby authorized to designate the general route of their said road and to file a map thereof, as now required by law, at any time before the first day of December, eighteen hundred and sixty-six; and upon the filing of the said map, showing the general route of said road, the lands along the entire line thereof, so far as the same may be designated, shall be reserved from sale by order of the Secretary of the Interior: Provided, That said company shall be entitled to only the same amount of the bonds of the United States to aid in the construction of their line of railroad and telegraph as they would have been entitled to if they had connected their said line with the Union Pacific Railroad on the one hundredth degree of longitude as now required by law: And provided further, That said company shall connect their line of railroad and telegraph with the Union Pacific Railroad, but not at a point more than fifty miles westwardly from the meridian of Denver in Colorado.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the Union Pacific Railroad Company, with the consent and approval of the Secretary of the Interior, are hereby authorized to locate, construct, and continue their road from Omaha, in Nebraska Territory, westward, according to the best and most practicable route, and without reference to the initial point on the one hundredth meridian of west longitude, as now provided by law, in a continuous completed line, until they shall meet and connect with the Central Pacific Railroad Company of California; and the Central Pacific Railroad Company of California, with the consent and approval of the Secretary of the Interior, are hereby authorized to locate, construct, and continue their road eastward, in a continuous completed line, until they shall meet and connect with the Union Pacific Railroad: Provided, That each of the above-named companies shall have the right, when the nature of the work to be done, by reason of deep cuts and tunnels, shall for the expeditious construction of the Pacific Railroad require it, to work for an extent of not to exceed three hundred miles in advance of their continuous completed lines.

Approved, July 3, 1866.

The said company shall have the right to construct a branch from the point at which the road strikes the Canadian River eastwardly, along the most suitable route as selected, to a point in the western boundary line of Arkansas, at or near the town of Van Buren. And the said company is hereby vested with all the powers, privileges, and immunities necessary to carry into effect the purposes of this act as herein set forth. The capital stock of said company shall consist of one million shares of one hundred dollars each, which shall in all respects be deemed personal property, and shall be transferable in such manner as the laws of said corporation shall provide. The persons hereinbefore named are hereby appointed commissioners, and shall be called the board of commissioners of the "Atlantic and Pacific Railroad Company," and fifteen shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business. The first meeting of said board of commissioners shall be held at the Turner Hall, in the city of St. Louis, on the first day of October, anno Domini eighteen hundred and sixty-six, or at such time within three months thereafter as any ten commissioners herein named from Missouri shall appoint, notice of which shall be given by them to the other commissioners by publishing said notice in at least one daily newspaper in the cities of Boston, New York, Cincinnati, Saint Louis, stockholders of the said corporation for the choice of officers (whe they are to be chosen) and for the transaction of business shall holden at such time and place and upon such notice as may be pr scribed in the by-laws.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the right of wa 73 through the public lands be, and the same is hereby, grant to the said Atlantic and Pacific Railroad Company, its cessors and assigns, for the construction of a railroad and telegraph as proposed; and the right, power, and authority is hereby given to said corporation to take from the public lands adjacent to the line of said road material of earth, stone, timber, and so forth, for the construction thereof. Said way is granted to said railroad to the extent of one hundred feet in width on each side of said railroad where it may pass through the public domain, including all necessary grounds for station buildings, workshops, depots, machine shops, switches, sidetracks, turntables, and water stations; and the right of way shall be exempt from taxation within the Territories of the United States. The United States shall extinguish, as rapidly as may be consistent with public policy and the welfare of the Indians, and only by their voluntary cession, the Indian title to all lands falling under the operation of this act and acquired in the donation to the road named in the act.

Sec. 3. And be it further enacted, That there be, and hereby is, granted to the Atlantic and Pacific Railroad Company, its successors and assigns, for the purpose of aiding in the construction of said railroad and telegraph line to the Pacific coast, and to secure to the safe and speedy transportation of the mails, troops, munitions of war, and public stores over the route of said line of railway and its branches, every alternate section of public land, not mineral, designated by odd numbers, to the amount of twenty alternate sections per mile, on each side of said railroad line, as said company may adopt, through the Territories of the United States, and ten alternate sections of land per mile on each side of said railroad whenever it passes through any State, and whenever, on the line thereof, the United States have full title, not reserved, sold, granted, or otherwise appropriated, and free from preemption or other claims or rights, at the time the line of said road is designated by a plat thereof, filed in the office of the Commissioner of the General Land Office; and whenever, prior to said time, any of said sections or parts of sections shall have been granted, sold, reserved, occupied by homestead settlers, or preempted, or otherwise disposed of, other lands shall be selected by said company in lieu thereof, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, in alternate sections, and designated by odd numbers, not more than ten miles beyond the limits of said alternate sections, and not including the reserved numbers: Provided, That if said route shall be found upon the line of any other railroad route, to aid in the construction of which lands have been heretofore granted by the United States, as far as said routes are upon the same general line, the amount of land heretofore granted shall be deducted from the amount granted by this act: Provided further, That the railroad company receiving the previous grant of land may assign their interest to said "Atlantic and Pacific Railroad Company," or may consolidate, confederate, and associate with said company upon the terms named in the first and seventeenth sections of this act: Provided further, That all mineral lands be, and the same are hereby, excluded from the operations of this act, and in lieu thereof a like quantity of unoccupied and unappropriated agricultural lands in odd-numbered sections nearest to the line of said road, and within twenty miles thereof, may be selected as above provided: And provided further, That the word "mineral," when it occurs in this act, shall not be held to include iron or coal: And provided further, That no money shall be drawn from the Treasury of the United States to aid in the construction of the said "Atlantic and Pacific Railroad."

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That whenever said Atlantic and Pacific Railroad Company shall have twenty-five 76 consecutive miles of any portion of said railroad and telegraph line ready for the service contemplated the President of the United States shall appoint three commissioners to examine the same, who shall be paid a reasonable compensation for their services by the company, to be determined by the Secretary of the Interior; and if it shall appear that twenty-five consecutive miles of said road and telegraph line have been completed in a good, substantial, and workmanlike manner, as in all other respects required by this act, the commissioners shall so report under oath to the President of the United States, and patents of lands, as aforesaid, shall be issued to said company, confirming to said company the right and title to said lands situated opposite to and coterminous with said completed section of said road. And from time to time, whenever twenty-five additional consecutive miles have been constructed, completed, and in readiness as aforesaid, and verified by said commissioners to the President of the United States, then patents shall be issued to said company conveying the additional sections of land as aforesaid, and so on as fast as every twenty-five miles of said road is completed as aforesaid.

77 SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That said Atlantic and Pacific Railroad shall be constructed in a substantial and workmanlike manner, with all the necessary draws, culverts, bridges, viaducts, crossings, turn-outs, stations, and watering places, and all other appurtenances, including furniture and rolling stock, equal in all respects to railroads of the first class when prepared for business, with rails of the best quality, manufactured from American iron. And a uniform gauge shall be established throughout the entire length of the road. And there shall be constructed a telegraph line of the most substantial and approved description, to be operated along the entire line: Provided, That the said company shall charge the Government higher rates than they do individuals for like transportation and telegraphic service. And it shall be the duty of the Atlantic and Pacific Railroad Company to permit any other railroad which shall be authorized to be built by the United States, or by the legislature of any Territory or State in which the same may be situated, to form running connections with it, on fair and equitable terms.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That the President of the United States shall cause the lands to be surveyed for forty miles in width on both sides of the entire line of said road after the general route shall be fixed, and as fast as may be required by the construction of said railroad; and the odd sections of land hereby granted shall not be liable to sale or entry or preemption before or after they are surveyed, except by said company, as provided in this act; but the provisions of the act of September, eighteen hundred and forty-one, granting preemption rights, and the acts amendatory thereof, and of the act entitled "An act to secure homesteads to actual settlers on the public domain," approved May twenty, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, shall be, and the same are hereby, extended to all other lands on the line of said road when surveyed, excepting those hereby granted to said company.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That the said Atlantic and Pacific Railroad Company be, and is hereby, authorized and empowered to enter upon, purchase, take, and hold any lands or premises that may be necessary and proper for the construction and working of said road, not exceeding in width one hundred feet on each side of the line of its railroad, unless a greater width be required for the purpose of excavation or embankment; and also any lands or premises that may be necessary and proper for turnouts, standing places for cars, depots, station houses, or any other structures required in the construction and working of said road. And the said company shall have the right to cut and remove trees and other material that might, by falling, encumber its roadbed, though standing or being more than two hundred feet from the line of said road. And in case the owner of such lands or premises and the said company cannot agree as to the value of the premises taken, or to be taken, for the use of said road, the value thereof shall be determined by the appraisal of three disinterested commissioners, who may be appointed upon application by either party to any court of record in any of the Territories in which the lands or premises to be taken lie; and said commissioners, in their assessment of damages, shall appraise such premises at what would have been the value thereof if the road had not been built. And upon return into court of such appraisement, and upon the payment into the same of the assessed value of the premises taken for the use and benefit of the owner thereof, said premises shall be deemed to be taken by said company, which shall thereby acquire full title to the same for the purposes aforesaid. And either party feeling aggrieved at said 80 appraisement may, within thirty days after the same has been returned into court, file an appeal therefrom, and demand a jury of twelve men to estimate the damage sustained; but such appeal shall not interfere with the rights of said company to enter upon the premises taken, or to do any act necessary and proper in the construction of its road. And said party appealing shall give bonds, with sufficient surety or sureties, for the payment of any cost that may arise upon such appeal; and in case the party appealing does not obtain a verdict more favorable, such party shall pay the whole cost incurred by the appellee, as well as his own, and the payment into court, for the use of the owner of said premises taken, at a sum equal to that finally awarded, shall be held to vest in said company the title of said land, and the right to use and occupy the same for the construction, maintenance, and operation of said road. And in case any of the lands to be taken as aforesaid shall be held by an infant, femme covert, non compos, insane person, or persons residing without the Territory within which the lands to be taken lie, or persons subjected to any legal disability, the court may appoint a guardian, for any party under any disqualification, to appear in proper person,

81 who shall give bonds, with sufficient surety or sureties, for the proper and faithful execution of his trust, and who may represent in court the person disqualified, as aforesaid, from appearing, when the same proceedings shall be had in reference to the appraisement of the premises to be taken for the use of said company, and with the same effect as has been already described; and the title of the company to the lands taken by virtue of this act shall not be affected or impaired by reason of any failure by any guardian to discharge faithfully his trust. And in case any party shall have a right or claim to any land for a term of years, or any interest therein, in possession, reversion, or remainder, the value of any such estate, less than a fee simple, shall be estimated and determined in the manner hereinbefore set forth. And in case it shall be necessary for the company to enter upon any lands which are unoccupied, and of which there is no apparent owner or claimant, it may proceed to take and use the same for the purposes of said railroad, and may institute proceedings, in manner described, for the purpose of ascertaining the value of, and of acquiring a title to, the same; but the judge of the court hearing said suit shall determine the kinds of notice to be served on such owner or owners, and he may, in his discretion, 82 appoint an agent or guardian to represent such owner or owners in case of his or their incapacity or nonappearance. But in case no claimant shall appear within six years from the opening of said road across any land, all claims to damages against said company shall be barred.

Sec. 8. And be it further enacted, That each and every grant, right, and privilege herein are so made and given to and accepted by said Atlantic and Pacific Railroad Company upon and subject to the following conditions, namely: That the said company shall commence the work on said road within two years from the approval of this act by the President, and shall complete not less than fifty miles per year after the second year, and shall construct, equip, furnish, and complete the main line of the whole road by the fourth day of July, anno Domini eighteen hundred and seventy-eight.

Sec. 9. And be it further enacted, That the United States make the several conditional grants herein, and that the said Atlantic and Pacific Railroad Company accept the same upon the further condition that if the said company make any breach of the conditions thereof and allow the same to continue for upwards of one year, then in such case, at any time hereafter, the United States may do any and all acts and things which may be needful and necessary to insure a speedy completion of the said road.

Sec. 10. And be it further enacted, That all people of the United States shall have the right to subscribe to the stock of the Atlantic and Pacific Railroad Company until the whole capital named in this act of incorporation is taken up by complying with the terms of subscription.

Sec. 11. And be it further enacted, That said Atlantic and Pacific Railroad, or any part thereof, shall be a post route and military road, subject to the use of the United States for postal, military, naval, and all other Government service, and also subject to such regulations as Congress may impose restricting the charges for such Government transportation.

Sec. 12. And be it further enacted, That the acceptance of the terms, conditions, and impositions of this act by the said Atlantic and Pacific Railroad Company shall be signified in writing under the corporate seal of said company, duly executed pursuant to the direction of its board of directors first had and obtained, which acceptance shall be made within two years after the passage of this act, and not afterwards, and shall be deposited in the office of the Secretary of the Interior.

Sec. 13. And be it further enacted, That the directors of said company shall make and publish an annual report of their proceedings and expenditures, verified by the affidavits of the president and at least six of the directors, a copy of which shall be deposited in the office of said Secretary of the Interior, and they shall, from time to time, fix, determine, and regulate the fares, tolls, and charges to be received and paid for transportation of persons and property on said road, or any part thereof.

SEC. 14. And be it further enacted, That the directors chosen in pursuance of the first section of this act shall, so soon as may be after their election, elect from their own number a president and vice president; and said board of directors shall, from time to time, and so soon as may be after their election, choose a treasurer and secretary, who shall hold their offices at the will and pleasure of the board of directors. The treasurer and secretary shall give such bonds, with such security as the said board from time to time may require. The secretary shall, before entering upon his duty, be sworn to the faithful discharge thereof, and said oath shall be made 85 a matter of record upon the books of said corporation. No person shall be a director of said company unless he shall be a stockholder, and qualified to vote for directors at the election at which he shall be chosen.

SEC. 15. And be it further enacted, That the president, vice president, and directors shall hold their offices for the period indicated in the by-laws of said company, not exceeding three years, respectively, and until others are chosen in their place, and qualified. In case it shall so happen that an election of directors shall not be made on any day appointed by the by-laws of said company, the corporation shall not for that excuse be deemed to be dissolved, but such election may be holden on any day which shall be appointed by the directors. The directors, of whom seven, including the president, shall be a quorum for the transaction of business, shall have full power to make and prescribe such by-laws, rules, and regulations as they shall deem needful and proper touching the disposition and management of the stock, property, estate, and effects of the company, the transfer of shares, the duties and conduct of their officers and servants touching the election and meeting of the directors, and all matters whatsoever which may appertain 86 to the concerns of said company; and the said board of directors may have full power to fill any vacancy or vacancies that may occur from any cause or causes from time to time in their said board. And the said board of directors shall have power to appoint such engineers, agents, and subordinates as may from time to time be necessary to carry into effect the object of the company, and to do all acts and things touching the location and construction of said road.

SEC. 16. And be it further enacted, That it shall be lawful for the directors of said company to require payment of the sum of ten per centum cash assessment upon all subscriptions received of all subscribers, and the balance thereof at such times and in such proportions and on such conditions as they shall deem to be ne[illegible] complete the said road and telegraph lines within the time in this act prescribed. Sixty days' previous notice shall be given of the payments required and of the time and place of payment by publishing a notice once a week in one daily newspaper in each of the cities of Boston, New York, Cincinnati, Saint Louis, Memphis, and Nashville, and in case any stockholder shall neglect or refuse to pay in pursuance of such notice the stock held by such person shall be forfeited absolutely to the use of the company, and also any payment or payments that shall have been made on account thereof, subject to the condition that the board of directors may allow the redemption on such terms as they may prescribe.

SEC. 17. And be it further enacted, That the said company is authorized to accept to its own use any grant, donation, loan, power, franchise, aid, or assistance which may be granted to or conferred on said company by the Congress of the United States, by the legislature of any State, or by any corporation, person, or persons, or by any Indian tribe or nation through whose reservation the road herein provided for may pass; and said corporation is authorized to hold and enjoy any such grant, donation, loan, power, franchise, aid, or assistance, to its own use for the purpose aforesaid: Provided, That any such grant or donation, power, aid, or assistance from any Indian tribe or nation shall be subject to the approval of the President of the United States.

SEC. 18. And be it further enacted, That the Southern Pacific Railroad, a company incorporated under the laws of the State of California, is hereby authorized to connect with the said Atlantic and Pacific Railroad, formed under this act, at such point near the boundary line of the State of California, as they shall deem most suitable for a railroad line to San Francisco, and shall have a uniform gauge and rate of freight or fare with said road; and in consideration thereof, to aid in its construction, shall have similar grants of land, subject to all the conditions and limitations herein provided, and shall be required to construct its road on the like regulations as to time and manner with the Atlantic and Pacific Railroad herein provided for.

SEC. 19. And be it further enacted, That unless the said Atlantic and Pacific Railroad Company shall obtain bona fide subscriptions to the stock of said company to the amount of one million of dollars, with ten per centum paid, within two years after the passage of and approval of this act, it shall be null and void.

SEC. 20. And be it further enacted, That the better to accomplish the object of this act, namely, to promote the public interest and welfare by the construction of said railroad and telegraph line, and keeping the same in working order, and to secure to the Government at all times, but particularly in time of war, the use and benefits of the same for postal, military, and other purposes, Congress 89 may, at any time, having due regard for the rights of said Atlantic and Pacific Railroad Company, add to, alter, amend, or repeal this act.

SEC. 21. And be it further enacted, That whenever in any grant of land or other subsidies, made or hereafter to be made, to railroads or other corporations, the United States has reserved the right, or shall reserve it, to appoint directors, engineers, commissioners, or other agents, to examine said roads, or act in conjunction with other officers of said company or companies, all the costs, charges, and pay of said directors, engineers, commissioners, or agents, shall be paid by the respective companies. Said directors, engineers, commissioners, or agents shall be paid for said services the sum of ten dollars per day for each and every day actually and necessarily employed, and ten cents per mile for each and every mile actually and necessarily travelled, in discharging the duties required of them, which per diem and mileage shall be in full compensation for said services. And in case any company shall refuse or neglect to make such payments, no more patents for lands or other subsidies shall be issued to said company until these requirements are complied with.

Approved, July 27, 1866.

90 PETITIONER'S EXHIBIT NO. 7, SEPTEMBER 21, 1914.

[Extract from U. S. Statutes at Large, volume 15, page 79.]

CHAP. LXXVII.—An act relative to filing reports of railroad companies.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the reports required to be made to the Secretary of the Treasury on or before the first day of July of each year, by the corporations created by or entitled to subsidies under the provisions of an act entitled "An act to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Missouri River to the Pacific Ocean, and to secure to the Government the use of the same for postal, military, and other purposes," approved July first, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, and the acts supplemental to and amendatory thereof, shall hereafter be made to the Secretary of the Interior, on or before the first day of October of each year. Said reports shall furnish full and specific information upon the several points mentioned in the twentieth section of the said act of eighteen hundred and sixty-two, and shall be verified as 91 therein prescribed, and on failure to make the same as he[illegible]

uired the issue of bonds or patents to the company in default ll be suspended until the requirements of this act shall be comd with by such company. And the reports hitherto made to the retary of the Treasury under the said act of July first, eighteen ndred and sixty-two, shall be transferred and delivered by him to Secretary of the Interior to be filed by him.

Sec. 2. And be it further enacted, That the corporations created by provisions of the acts of Congress approved July second, eighteen ndred and sixty-four, and July twenty-seventh, eighteen hundred d sixty-six, and known as the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, Atlantic and Pacific Railroad Company, and the Southern Pacific ilroad Company, shall make reports to the Secretary of the Inter on or before the first of October of each year, as are required to made by the Union Pacific Railroad and branches, under the pro-ions of the first section of this act, and on failure so to do shall ubject to the like suspension.

Sec. 3. And be it further enacted, That the reports required from commissioners appointed to examine and report in relation to the road of any of the corporations whereto reference is made in this act shall be addressed to and filed in the Department of the Interior; and all such reports heretofore made shall be nsferred to and filed in said Department of the Interior: and so ch of any and all acts as requires any reports from such comnies, or any officers thereof, to be made to the Secretary of the reasury, is hereby repealed.

Sec. 4. And be it further enacted, That, in addition to the eight bjects referred to in section twenty of the act of July, eighteen ndred and sixty-two, to be reported upon, there shall also be fur-shed annually to the Secretary of the Interior all reports of engiers, superintendents, or other officers who make annual reports to y of said railroad companies.

Approved, June 25, 1868.

PETITIONER'S EXHIBIT No. 8, SEPTEMBER 21, 1914.

[U. S. Statutes at Large, vol. 16, pp. 56–57.]

No. 19.) Joint resolution for the protection of the interests of the United States in the Union Pacific Railroad Company, the Central Pacific Railroad Company, and for other purposes.

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the stockholders of the Union Pacific Railroad Company, at a meeting to be held on the twenty-second day of April, eighteen hundred and sixty-nine, at the city of Boston (with power to adjourn from day to day), shall elect a board of directors for the ensuing year; and said stockholders are hereby authorized to establish their general office at such place in the United States as they may select at said meeting: Provided, That the passage of this resolution shall not confer any other right upon said Union Pacific Railroad Company than to hold such election, or be held in any manner to relinquish or waive any rights of the United States to take advantage of any act or neglect of said Union Pacific Railroad Company heretofore done or omitted whereby the rights of the general Government have been or may be prejudiced: And provided further, That the common terminus of the Union Pacific and the Central Pacific railroads shall be at or near Ogden; and the Union Pacific Railroad Company shall build, and the Central Pacific Railroad Company pay for and own the railroad from the terminus aforesaid to Promontory Summit, at which point the rails shall meet and connect and form one continuous line.

SEC. 2. And be it further resolved, That to ascertain the condition of the Union Pacific Railroad and the Central Pacific Railroad, the President of the United States is authorized to appoint a board of eminent citizens, not exceeding five in number, and who shall not be interested in either road, to examine and report upon the condition of, and what sum or sums, if any, will be required to complete each of said roads, for the entire length thereof, to the said terminus as a first-class railroad, in compliance with the several acts relating to said roads; and the expense of such board, including an allowance of ten dollars to each for their services for each day employed in such examination or report, to be paid equally by such companies.

SEC. 3. And be it further resolved, That the President is hereby authorized and required to withhold from each of said companies an amount of subsidy bonds authorized to be issued by the United States under said acts sufficient to secure the full completion as a first-class road of all sections of such road upon which bonds have already been issued, or in lieu of such bonds he may receive as such security an equal amount of the first mortgage bonds of such company; and if it shall appear to the President that the amount of subsidy bonds yet to be issued to either of said companies is insufficient to insure the full completion of such road, he may make requisition upon such company for a sufficient amount of bonds already issued to said company, or in his discretion of their first mortgage bonds, to secure the full completion of the same. And in default of obtaining such security as (is) in this section provided, the President may authorize and direct the Attorney General to stitute such suits and proceedings on behalf and in the name of United States, in any court of the United States having jurisdiction, as shall be necessary or proper to compel the giving of such security, and thereby, or in any manner otherwise, to protect the interests of the United States in said road, and to insure the full completion thereof as a first-class road, as required by law and the statutes in that case made.

SEC. 4. And be it further resolved, That the Attorney General of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to investigate whether or not the charter and all the franchises of the Union Pacific Railroad Company and of the Central Pacific Railroad Company have not been forfeited, and to institute all necessary and proper legal proceedings; also, to investigate whether or not said companies have or have not made any illegal dividends upon their stock, and if so to institute the necessary proceedings to have the same reimbursed; and also to investigate whether any of the directors or any other agents or employees of said companies have or not violated any penal law, and if so to institute the proper criminal proceedings against all persons who have violated such laws.

Approved, April 10, 1869.

Fosdick, Harry Hays, P. S. Forbes, John T. Sprague, L. R. Marsh, A. W. Beckwith, J. C. Stanton, Cyrus H. Baldwin, A. J. Hamilton, Rush R. Sloan, Silas C. Colgrove, Samuel D. Jones, N. H. Decker, William N. Leet, B. F. Allen, J. B. Chaves, Augustus Kountze, John N. Goodwin, William S. Rosecrans, Michael Hahn, H. C. Warmouth, J. S. Williams, G. M. Spencer, L. J. Higby, W. C. Kimball, and all such persons as shall or may be associated with them, and their successors, are hereby created a body politic and corporate in fact and in law, by the name, style, and title of the Texas Pacific Railroad Company, and by that name shall have perpetual succession, and shall be able to sue and be sued, plead
99 and be impleaded, defend and be defended, in all courts of law and equity within the United States, and may make and use a common seal; and the said corporation is hereby authorized and empowered to lay out, locate, construct, furnish, maintain, and enjoy a continuous railroad and telegraph line, with the appurtenances, from a point at or near Marshall, county of Harrison, State of Texas; thence by the most direct and eligible route, to be determined by said company, near the thirty-second parallel of north latitude, to a point at or near El Paso; thence by the most direct and eligible route, to be selected by said company, through New Mexico and Arizona, to a point on the Rio Colorado at or near the southeastern boundary of the State of California; thence by the most direct and eligible route to San Diego, California, to ship's channel, in the bay of San Diego, in the State of California, pursuing in the location thereof, as near as may be, the thirty-second parallel of north latitude, and is hereby vested with all the powers, privileges, and immunities necessary to carry into effect the pur(po)ses of this act.

SEC. 2. That the persons named in the first section of this act shall constitute a board of commissioners (twenty of whom shall con-100 stitute a quorum for the transaction of business), to be known as the Texas Pacific Railroad commissioners, who shall meet in the city of New York within ninety days after the passage of this act, at a time to be designated in a notice to be signed by the person first named in the list of corporators and six of his associates, and to be published for two weeks in, at least, one daily newspaper in New York, New Orleans, and Washington; and, when so met, they may cause books to be opened for the subscription of the capital stock of said company, and when twenty thousand shares, amounting to two millions of dollars, shall have been subscribed, and ten per centum actually paid thereon, in money, to the treasurer, to be elected by said commissioners, who shall give bond for its safe-keeping and payment to the treasurer of the company when organized, then it shall be lawful for such subscribers or stockholders, or a majority thereof, to organize said company in accordance with the provisions of this act, and to elect not less than seven nor more than seventeen directors, a majority of whom shall be necessary to the transaction of business, and who shall hold their offices for one year and until their successors shall be elected and qualified; and the said di-101 rectors shall immediately proceed to elect a president, vice president, secretary, and treasurer; the president and vice president shall be directors. At all elections for directors each share of stock shall be entitled to one vote, which may be given by the holders in person, or by proxy, who shall also be a shareholder. The directors shall hold their offices for any term not exceeding three years, as may be provided in the by-laws; and the annual meetings of stockholders shall take place as provided for in said by-laws.

SEC. 3. That the capital stock of the Texas Pacific Railroad Company shall be fixed by the board of directors, at a sum not exceeding fifty millions of dollars, in shares of one hundred dollars; and when the amount is so fixed, it shall never be increased, except by consent of Congress. Assessments upon said stock shall only be made by a majority vote of the whole number of directors at a regular meeting, which said assessments shall be paid at the expiration of thirty days after a notice given in one newspaper in each of the cities of Washington, Philadelphia, New York, and New Orleans.

SEC. 4. That the said Texas Pacific Railroad Company shall have power and lawful authority to purchase the stock, land grants, 102 franchises, and appurtenances of, and consolidate on such terms as may be agreed upon between the parties, with any railroad company or companies heretofore chartered by congressional, State, or Territorial authority, on the route prescribed in the first section of this act; but no such consolidation shall be with any competing through line of railroads to the Pacific Ocean.

SEC. 5. That the said company shall have power and authority to make running arrangements with any railroad company or companies heretofore chartered, or that may hereafter be chartered by congressional, State, or Territorial authority; also to purchase lands, or to accept donations, or grants of lands, or other property from States or individuals, for the purpose of aiding in carrying out the object of this company.

SEC. 6. That the rights, lands, land grants, franchises, privileges, and appurtenances, and property of every description, belonging to each of the consolidated or purchased railroad company or companies, as herein provided, shall vest in and become absolutely the property of the Texas Pacific Railroad Company: Provided, That in all contracts made and entered into by said company with any and all other railroad company or companies, to perfect such 103 aforesaid consolidation or purchase, the indebtedness or other legal obligations of said company or companies shall be assumed by the said Texas Pacific Railroad Company as may be agreed upon, and no such consolidation or purchase shall impair any lien which may exist on any of the railroads so consolidated or purchased; but said company shall not assume the debts or obligations of any company with which it may consolidate or purchase as aforesaid, to an amount greater than the cash value of the assets received from the same.

SEC. 7. That the said Texas Pacific Railroad Company shall have power to make and enforce rules and by-laws for the election of its officers and the government and management of the business of the company, and to do and perform all needful and proper things to be done and performed to promote the objects of the company hereby incorporated, not inconsistent with the laws of the United States and the provisions of this charter.

SEC. 8. That the right of way through the public lands be, and the same is hereby, granted to the said company for the construction of the said railroad and telegraph line, and the right, power, and authority is hereby given to said company to take, from the pub-104 lic lands adjacent to the line of said road, earth, stone, timber and other materials for the construction thereof. Said right of way is granted to said company to the extent of two hundred feet in width on each side of said railroad where it may pass over the public lands; and there is also hereby granted to said company grounds for stations, buildings, workshops, wharves, switches, side tracks, turntables, water stations, and such other structures as may be necessary for said railroad, not exceeding forty acres of land at any one point.

SEC. 9. That for the purpose of aiding in the construction of the railroad and telegraph line herein provided for there is hereby granted to the said Texas Pacific Railroad Company, its successors and assigns, every alternate section of public land, not mineral, designated by odd numbers, to the amount of twenty alternate sections per mile, on each side of said railroad line, as such line may be adopted by said company, through the Territories of the United States, and ten alternate sections of land per mile on each side of said railroad in California, where the same shall not have not have been sold served, or otherwise disposed of by the United States, and to which a preemption or homestead claim may not have attached at the time the line of said road is definitely fixed. In case any of said lands shall have been sold, reserved, occupied, or pre-empted, or otherwise disposed of, other lands shall be selected in lieu thereof by said company, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, in alternate sections, and designated by odd numbers, not more than ten miles beyond the limits of said alternate sections first above named and not including the reserved numbers. If, in case too near approach of the said railroad line to the boundary of Mexico, the number of sections of land to which the company is entitled can not be selected immediately on the line of said railroad, in lieu of mineral lands excluded from this grant, a like quantity of unoccupied and unappropriated agricultural lands, in odd-numbered sections nearest the line of said railroad, may be selected as above provided; and the word "mineral" where it occurs in this act shall not be held to include iron or coal: Provided, however, That no public lands are hereby granted within the State of California further than twenty miles on each side of road, except to make deficiencies as aforesaid, and then not to exceed twenty miles from the lands originally granted. The term "ship's channel" as used in this bill shall not be construed as conveying any greater right to said company to the water front of San Diego Bay than it may acquire by gift, grant, purchase, or otherwise, except the right of way, as herein granted: And provided further, that all such lands, so granted by this section to said company, which shall not be sold or otherwise disposed of as provided in this act within three years after the completion of the entire road, shall be subject to settlement and preemption like other lands at a price to be fixed by and paid to said company, not exceeding an average of two dollars and fifty cents per acre for all the lands herein granted.

Sec. 10. That when the route of said railroad and telegraph line shall pass through the lands of private persons, or where it may be necessary for said railroad company to take any lands belonging to private persons for any of the purposes herein mentioned necessary for said road, such right of way through or title to such lands shall be secured in accordance with the laws of the State or Territory in which they may be situated.

Sec. 11. That the Texas Pacific Railroad Company shall have power and authority to issue two kinds of bonds, secured by mortgage, namely: First, construction bonds; second, land bonds. Construction bonds shall be secured by mortgage, first, on all or any portion of the franchises, roadbed, or track of said railroad, and all the appurtenances thereto belonging, when constructed in the course of construction, from a point at or near Marshall to ship's channel, in the bay of San Diego, in the State of California, a aforesaid. Land bonds shall be secured by mortgage, first, on all or an portion of the lands hereby granted in aid of the construction of sai railroad as is provided for in this act; second, on lands acquired b any arrangement or purchase or terms of consolidation with any rail road company or companies to whom grants of lands may have bee made, or may hereafter be made, by any congressional, State, o Territorial authority, or who may have purchased the same previou to any such arrangement or consolidation: Provided, That all th mortgages made and executed by said railroad company shall be file and recorded in the Department of the Interior, which shall be sufficient evidence of their legal execution, and shall confer all th rights and property of said company as therein expressed: And pr vided also, That the proceeds of the sales of the aforesaid constru tion and land bonds shall be applied only in the construction, oper tion, and equipment of the contemplated railroad line: And provide further, That said mortgage shall in no wise impair or affect any li existing on the property of said company or companies at 108 before the time of such consolidation.

SEC. 12. That whenever the said company shall comple
the first and each succeeding section of twenty consecutive miles said railroad and put it in running order as a first-class road in its appointments, it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Interi to cause patents to be issued conveying to said company the numb of sections of land opposite to and coterminus with said complet road to which it shall be entitled for each section so completed. Sa company, within two years after the passage of this act, shall desi nate the general route of its said road, as near as may be, and sh file a map of the same in the Department of the Interior; and wh the map is so filed the Secretary of the Interior immediately the after shall cause the lands within forty miles on each side of sa designated route within the Territories and twenty miles within t
State of California to be withdrawn from preemption, private ent and sale: Provided, however, That the provisions of the act of Se tember, eighteen hundred and forty-one, granting preempti 109 rights, and the acts amendatory thereof, and of the act titled "An act to secure homesteads to actual settlers on t public domain," approved May twenty, eighteen hundred and six two, and the amendments thereto, shall be, and the same are herel extended to all other lands of the United States on the line of s road when surveyed, except those hereby granted to said company

SEC. 13. That the president of the company shall annually, by t first day of July, make a report and file it with the Secretary of t Interior, which report shall be under oath, exhibiting the financ situation of the company, the amount of money received and ended, and the number of miles of road constructed each year; and further, the names and residences of the stockholders, of the directors, and of all other officers of the company, the amount of stock subscribed, and the amount thereof actually paid in, a description of the lines of road surveyed and fixed upon for construction, the amount received from passengers and for freight, respectively, on the road, a statement of the expenses of said road and its features, and a true statement of the indebtedness of said company and the various kinds thereof.

SEC. 14. That the certificates of the capital stock must be 110 signed by the president and secretary, and attested by the seal of the company, and shall contain an extract from the proceedings of the board of directors fixing the amount thereof, as well as from this act, authorizing such issue. All the bonds and mortgages issued by said company must be signed by the president and secretary, and attested by the seal of said company, and shall contain an extract from the law authorizing them to be issued. The face value of said bonds shall be one thousand dollars in gold, and shall be redeemable at such times and to bear such rate of interest, payable semiannually in gold, as may be determined by the directors. The total value of the construction bonds to be issued shall not exceed thirty thousand dollars per mile of said railroad, and the total face value of the land bonds shall not exceed two dollars and fifty cents per acre for all lands mortgaged; the total amount of each to be determined by the board of directors.

SEC. 15. That all railroads constructed, or that may be hereafter constructed, to intersect said Texas Pacific Railroad shall have a right to connect with that line; that no discrimination as regards charges for freight or passengers, or in any other matter, shall be made by said Texas Pacific Railroad Company against any of the said connecting roads; but that the same charges per mile as 111 to passengers and per ton per mile as to freight passing from the said Texas Pacific Railroad over any of said connecting roads, or passing from any of said connecting roads over any part of said Texas Pacific Railroad, shall be made by said company as they make for freight and passengers over their own road: Provided also, That said connecting roads shall reciprocate said right of connection and equality of charges with said Texas Pacific Railroad: And provided further, That the rates charged for carrying passengers and freight per mile shall not exceed the prices which may be fixed by Congress for carrying passengers and freight on the Union Pacific and Central Pacific Railroads.

SEC. 16. That said road shall be constructed of iron or steel rails manufactured from American ore, except such as may have heretofore been contracted for by any railroad company which may be purchased or consolidated with by the company hereby incorporated, as provided by this act.

SEC. 17. That the said Texas Pacific Railroad Company shall commence the construction of its road simultaneously at San Diego, in the State of California, and from a point at or near Marshall, Texas as hereinbefore described, and so prosecute the same as to have 112 at least fifty consecutive miles of railroad from each of said points complete and in running order within two years after the passage of this act; and to so continue to construct each year thereafter a sufficient number of miles to secure the completion of the whole line from the aforesaid point on the eastern boundary of the State of Texas to the Bay of San Diego, in the State of California, as aforesaid, within ten years after the passage of this act; and upon failure to so complete it, Congress may adopt such measures as it may deem necessary and proper to secure its speedy completion.

SEC. 18. That the President of the United States, upon the completion of the first section of twenty miles, shall appoint one commissioner, whose duty it shall be to examine the various sections of twenty miles as they shall be completed and report thereon to him in writing; and if from such report he be satisfied that said company has fully completed each section of its road, as in this act provided, he shall direct the Secretary of the Interior to issue patents to said company for the lands it is entitled to under this act, as far as each section of said road is completed.

SEC. 19. That the Texas Pacific Railroad Company shall be, and it is hereby, declared to be a military and post road; and for 113 the purpose of insuring the carrying of the mails, troops, munitions of war, supplies, and stores of the United States no act of the company nor any law of any State or Territory shall impede, delay, or prevent the said company from performing its obligations to the United States in that regard: Provided, That said road shall be subject to the use of the United States for postal, military, and all other governmental services at fair and reasonable rates of compensation not to exceed the price paid by private parties for the same kind of service, and the Government shall at all times have the preference in the use of the same for the purpose aforesaid.

SEC. 20. That it shall not be lawful for any of the directors, either in their individual capacity or as members of an incorporated or joint-stock company, to make any contracts or agreements with the said Texas Pacific Railroad Company for the construction, equipment, or running of its road, or to have any interest therein; and all such contracts or agreements are hereby declared null and void, and all money or property received under such contracts or agreements may be recovered back for the benefit of the company by any stockholder.

114 SEC. 21. That any railroad company whose route lies across the route of the Texas Pacific Railroad may cross the same, and for the purpose of crossing shall have the right to acquire at the double minimum price all lands, whether of the United States or granted by this act, which shall be needed for a right of way two hundred feet wide through said lands, and for depots, stations, side-tracks, and other needful purposes, not exceeding for such purposes forty acres at any one station.

SEC. 22. That the New Orleans, Baton Rouge, and Vicksburg Railroad Company, chartered by the State of Louisiana, shall have the right to connect by the most eligible route, to be selected by said company, with the said Texas Pacific Railroad at its eastern terminus, and shall have the right of way through the public land to the same extent granted hereby to the said Texas Pacific Railroad Company; and in aid of its construction from New Orleans to Baton Rouge, thence by the way of Alexandria, in said State, to connect with the said Texas Pacific Railroad Company at its eastern terminus, there is hereby granted to said company, its successors and assigns, the same number of alternate sections of public lands per mile in the State of Louisiana as are by this act granted in 115 the State of California to said Texas Pacific Railroad Company; and said lands shall be withdrawn from market, selected, and patents issued therefor, and opened for settlement and preemption upon the same terms and in the same manner and time as is provided for and required from said Texas Pacific Railroad Company within said State of California: Provided, That said company shall complete the whole of said road within five years from the passage of this act.

SECTION 23. That for the purpose of connecting the Texas Pacific Railroad with the city of San Francisco the Southern Pacific Railroad Company of California is hereby authorized (subject to the laws of California) to construct a line of railroad from a point at or near Tehachpa Pass, by way of Los Angeles, to the Texas Pacific Railroad at or near the Colorado River, with the same rights, grants, and, privileges, and subject to the same limitations, restrictions, and conditions as were granted to said Southern Pacific Railroad Company of California by the act of July twenty-seven, eighteen hundred and sixty-six: Provided, however, That this section shall in no way affect or impair the rights, present or prospective, of the Atlantic and Pacific Railroad Company or any other railroad company.

Approved, March 3, 1871.

[U. S. Statutes at Large, vol. 18, pp. 111–112.]

CHAP. 331.—An act making additions to the fifteenth section of the act approved July 2, 1864, entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Missouri River to the Pacific Ocean, and to secure to the Government the use of the same for postal, military, and other purposes,' approved July 1, 1862."

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That there shall be, and is hereby, added to the fifteenth section of the act approved July second, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Missouri River to the Pacific Ocean, and to secure to the Government the use of the same for postal, military, and other purposes,' approved July first, eighteen hundred and sixty-two," the following words, namely: "And any officer or agent of the companies authorized to construct the aforesaid roads, or of any company engaged in operating either of said roads, who 117 shall refuse to operate and use the road or telegraph under his control, or which he is engaged in operating for all purposes of communication, travel, and transportation, so far as the public and the Government are concerned, as one continuous line, or shall refuse in such operation and use, to afford and secure to each of said roads equal advantages and facilities as to rates, time, or transportation, without any discrimination of any kind in favor of, or adverse to, the road or business of any or either of said companies, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined in any sum not exceeding one thousand dollars, and may be imprisoned not less than six months. In case of failure or refusal of the Union Pacific Railroad Company, or either of said branches, to comply with the requirements of this act and the acts to which this act is amendatory, the party injured or the company aggrieved may bring an action in the district or circuit court of the United States in the Territory, district, or circuit in which any portion of the road of the defendant may be situated, for damages on account of such failure or refusal; and, upon recovery, the plaintiff shall be entitled to judgment for treble the amount of all excess of freight and fares collected by the defendant, and for treble the amount 118 of damages sustained by the plaintiff by such failure or refusal; and for each and every violation of or failure to comply with the requirements of this act a new cause of action shall arise; and in case of suit in any such Territory, district, or circuit, process may be served upon any agent of the defendant found in the Territory, district, or circuit in which such suit may be brought, and such service shall be by the court held to be good and sufficient; and it is hereby provided that for all the purposes of said act, and of the acts amendatory thereof, the railway of the Denver Pacific Railway and Telegraph Company shall be deemed and taken to be a part and extension of the road of the Kansas Pacific Railroad, to the point of junction thereof with the road of the Union Pacific Railroad Company at Cheyenne, as provided in the act of March third, eighteen hundred and sixty-nine.

Approved, June 20, 1874.

[Statutes at Large, vol. 20, pp. 169–171.]

CHAP. 316.—An act to create an auditor of railroad accounts, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That section twenty of the act entitled "An act to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Missouri River to the Pacific Ocean, and to secure to the Government the use of the same for postal, military, and other purposes," approved July first, anno Domini eighteen hundred and sixty-two, and the act entitled "An act relative to filing reports of railroad companies," approved June twenty-fifth, anno Domini eighteen hundred and sixty-eight, be, and the same are hereby, repealed.

SEC. 2. That the office of auditor of railroad accounts is hereby established as a bureau of the Interior Department. The said auditor shall be appointed by the President of the United States, by and with the advice of the Senate. The annual salary of the said auditor shall be, and is hereby, fixed at the sum of five thousand dollars. To assist the said auditor to perform the duties of said office the Secretary of the Interior shall appoint one bookkeeper, at an annual salary of two thousand four hundred dollars; one assistant bookkeeper, at an annual salary of two thousand dollars; one clerk, at an annual salary of one thousand four hundred dollars; and one copyist, at an annual salary of nine hundred dollars. Actual and necessary traveling and other expenses incurred in visiting the offices of the railroad companies hereinafter described, and for which vouchers shall be rendered, are hereby allowed, not to exceed the sum of two thousand dollars per annum; and it is hereby specially provided that each of said railroad companies shall furnish transportation over its own road, without expense to the United States, for the said auditor or any person acting under his direction. Incidental expenses for books, stationery, and other material necessary for the use of said bureau are hereby allowed, not to exceed the sum of seven hundred dollars per annum. And the sum of twelve thousand dollars is hereby appropriated for the uses and purposes of this act for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, anno Domini eighteen hundred and seventy-nine.

121 SEC. 3. That the duties of the said auditor under and subject to the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, shall be, to prescribe a system of reports to be rendered to him by the railroad companies whose roads are in whole or in part west, north, or south of the Missouri River, and to which the United States have granted any loan of credit or subsidy in bonds or lands; to examine the books and accounts of each of said railroad companies once in each fiscal year, and at such other times as may be deemed by him necessary to determine the correctness of any report received from them; to assist the Government directors of any of said railroad companies in all matters which come under their cognizance whenever they may officially request such assistance; to see that the laws relating to said companies are enforced; to furnish such information to the several departments of the Government in regard to tariffs for freight and passengers and in regard to the accounts of said railroad companies as may be by them required, or, in the absence of any request therefor, as he may deem expedient for the interest of the Government; and to make an annual report to the Secretary of the Interior, on the first day of November, on the condition of each of said railroad companies, their road, accounts, and affairs, 122 for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth immediately preceding.

SEC. 4. That each and every railroad company aforesaid which has received from the United States any bonds of the said United States, issued by way of loan to aid in constructing or furnishing its road, or which has received from the United States any lands granted to it for a similar purpose, shall make to the said auditor any and all such reports as he may require from time to time and shall submit its books and records to the inspection of said auditor or any person acting in his place and stead, at any time that the said auditor may request, in the office where said books and records are usually kept; and the said auditor, or his authorized representative, shall make such transcripts from the said books and records as he may desire.

SEC. 5. That if any railroad company aforesaid shall neglect or refuse to make such reports as may be called for, or refuse to sub-its books and records to inspection, as provided in section four of this act, such neglect or refusal shall operate as a forfeiture, in each case of such neglect or refusal, of a sum not less than one thousand nor more than five thousand dollars, to be recovered by the Attorney General of the United States in the name and for the use and benefit of the United States; and it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Interior, in all such cases of neglect or refusal as aforesaid, to inform the Attorney General of the facts, to the end that such forfeiture or forfeitures may be judicially enforced.

SEC. 6. This act shall apply to any and all persons or corporations into whose hands either of said railroads may lawfully come, as well as to the original companies.

SEC. 7. This act shall take effect on and after the first day of July, anno Domini eighteen hundred and seventy-eight.

Approved, June 19, 1878.

stockholders of said company held in the office of the company on the twelfth (12) day of April, 1898, as appears by the record of the proceedings of the board of directors of said company in my custody as said secretary.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the corporate seal of said Central Pacific Railroad Company this twenty-first (21) day of January, A. D. 1899.

[Extract from the executive documents of the Senate of the United States for the first session of the Fiftieth Congress, 1887–88, volume 5, pages 4258 and 4259.]

Agreement of the Transcontinental Association.

Resolved: (1) San Francisco and Portland shall be regarded as common points in the matter of rates to and from eastern common or competitive points.

(2) The through rates via all routes to and from Portland via San Francisco and to and from San Francisco via Portland shall be the same upon business exchanged with eastern common or competitive points in the United States or Canadas.

(3) All business passing through San Francisco to or from points north of the Oregon-California State line shall be delivered to the line of the Oregon Railway and Navigation Company, Pacific Coast Steamship Company, or Oregon Improvement Company, in consideration of which the companies named will give to the southern routes a rebate of 20 per cent from the tariff rate—which shall not be increased—between San Francisco or Portland and points north.

It is further agreed that in the event of ocean competition be-486 tween San Francisco and said northern points the steamship lines of the above-named companies will guarantee protection against rates made by other steamships not controlled, subsidized, or chartered by any of the lines parties to this agreement.

Rates on business to and from points north of the Oregon and California State line, when carried via San Francisco, except the business of Portland and the canned-salmon business of Astoria, shall be made by adding to the Portland or San Francisco rates a charge which shall not be less than the local charge of the Northern Pacific Railroad between Portland and such points nor more than the present established rates between San Francisco and such points less the 20 per cent rebate hereinbefore guaranteed.

(4) The through rates between eastern through or competitive points and points in California other than San Francisco for business forwarded via Portland shall be made by adding to the through rates between said eastern points and San Francisco the current local rates of the regular established transportation lines which may carry the business between said California points and San Francisco.

487 (5) All lines here represented solemnly agree to maintain the rates now in force, or which may hereafter be mutually agreed upon, between San Francisco and Portland, on the one hand, and eastern through or competitive points in the United States or Canadas on the other hand, without cut, rebate, or deviation in any manner, it being the understanding that the giving of passes or reduced fares to, or upon request of, or for account of shippers or consignees or their families, or to any person, for the purpose of influencing business, or the payment of any ticket commissions, shall be regarded as a violation of this agreement, subjecting the offender to the penalties hereinafter provided.

(6) From and after the date of this agreement no street commission or ticket rebate on eastbound overland tickets will be paid by the companies parties hereto; and connecting eastern lines shall be requested by the commission hereafter to be appointed to discontinue the payment of street commissions and rebates to passengers, and the making of any cuts whatever from established through rates; and should any such railroad company fail or refuse to comply with such requests, it shall be the duty of the com-
488 missioner to notify the Pacific coast terminal companies, which shall then suspend the sale of all tickets over the lines so failing or refusing for so long a time as the commissioner may direct.

And further, the Pacific coast terminal companies shall, through the commissioner, redeem (within five days from date of issue), at the full amount received by them therefor, any and all through tickets of their respective issues, purchased by or for passengers, at such times and under such circumstances as may be deemed best by the commissioner.

(7) All special contracts binding shippers to one or more of the parties hereto shall be immediately thrown open to each and every other party to this agreement, and contracting shippers shall be notified to that effect.

(8) A commissioner shall be appointed whose salary and expenses shall be paid jointly by the parties hereto in proportion as the earnings from the business subject to this agreement are shared by each.

(9) Said commissioner shall arbitrate all disputes arising under this agreement between the parties thereto, and his decision shall be final and binding upon all. Complaints by one or more parties against other parties hereto shall be made in writing to the 489 commissioner, who shall promptly investigate and give judgment according to the facts, within thirty days, unless more time shall seem to be necessary for full inquiry and consideration upon the part of the commissioner.

(10) If any party hereto is adjudged by the commissioner to have deviated from the established rates, said party shall be fined for each offense three times the amount of earnings which would have accrued from the business had it been taken at the regularly established rates, but not less in any case than $500.

(11) Each party hereto shall deposit with some solvent bank, to the order of the commissioner, the sum of $5,000, and shall keep that sum so deposited. From said sum all fines shall be collected by the commissioner.

(12) The fines collected by the commissioner shall be distributed among the nonoffending parties hereto in proportion to their earnings from the business, subject to this agreement.

(13) The commissioner shall have access to all books and papers of the parties hereto which have a bearing upon the Pacific coast traffic, which is the subject of this agreement.

490 (14) It is also agreed that, so far as practicable, the parties to this agreement will protect the through rates and carry out all instructions that may be issued by the commissioner in order to protect the through rates, so that one line may not have any advantage over any other line.

(15) Said commissioner shall be promptly supplied at the close of each day's business with a legible impression copy of the waybills for all freight covered by this agreement, and shall be supplied by each of the parties hereto with such other statistics and statements, as he may desire, as to the business done by them and covered by this agreement.

(16) It is agreed that a new passenger tariff will be issued as soon as practicable, and in case the lines can not agree on rates the commissioner will settle all the differences that may come up, such as giving side rides and other matters. His action will be final.

(17) It is agreed that the subsidy now paid the Pacific Mail Steamship Company for its steamers between San Francisco and New York shall be borne by the several companies here represented in the proportions of their revenue from the San Francisco business covered by this agreement.

491 (18) It is understood and agreed that the Pacific mail business between New York and San Francisco shall be managed fairly and impartially in the interests of all lines concerned and shall not be used as a means of securing business for any one or more of these lines as against others, and that any complaints upon this subject shall be referred to and decided by the commissioner, subject to the same fine that is provided for the cutting of rates, it being understood that the commissioner's relations to the Pacific mail business between New York and San Francisco shall be the same as his relations to the other business which is the subject of this agreement.

(19) This agreement shall take effect October 1, 1883, and continue in force until December 31, 1884, or until ninety days' written notice shall have been given to the commissioner, by one or more parties hereto, of a desire or intention to withdraw therefrom.

AGREEMENT OF THE TRANS-CONTINENTAL ASSOCIATION.

TOPEKA, KANS., November 8, 1883.

The agreement of the Trans-Continental Association, dated September 28, 1883, is hereby altered and amended to read as follows:

Section 4 is amended by substituting the word "Portland" for the word San Francisco in the last two places in said section in which the word San Francisco occurs.

Sections 1, 2, and 3 are cancelled, and the following classes substituted therefor:

Rates between San Francisco, on the one hand, and Galveston, Council Bluffs, Omaha, Kansas City, and intermediate points on the Missouri River and points common therewith, on the other, shall be the same as the rates between Portland, on the one hand, and Saint Paul, Minneapolis, Minnesota Transfer, Duluth, and Superior, and points common therewith, on the other.

Rates between San Francisco and the Northern Pacific Rail-494 road's eastern terminals and points east thereof via Portland shall be made by adding to the agreed Portland rates as herein provided for, the established ocean tariff.

Rates between points north of the Oregon and California State line and eastern points via San Francisco shall be made by adding to the agreed San Francisco rates, herein provided for, the established ocean tariff.

In consideration of the foregoing the Northern Pacific and the Oregon Railroad and Navigation Company shall be paid by the other lines, parties hereto, in the manner hereinafter provided, 6 per cent of the gross earnings accruing to the said other lines on business between or passing through eastern points herein named and San Francisco, except business received from or delivered to the Occidental and Oriental Steamship Company or the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, it being understood that the Northern Pacific Railroad and the Oregon Railroad and Navigation Company share in the subsidy to be paid the Pacific Mail Steamship Company in accordance with section seventeenth.

Settlements to be made monthly on receipt of the commissioner's statement of the net balance.

It being understood that the Trans-Continental agreement, 495 as now modified, shall not in any way affect the rights of the Oregon Short Line Railway Company or the Utah and Northern Railway Company under their contracts with the Northern Pacific Railroad Company and the Oregon Railway and Navigation Company.

Provided, That the Utah and Northern Railway shall not make lower rates to or from San Francisco via Portland, than the rates made to and from San Francisco direct by the parties hereto.

Provided, That whenever the percentages of any of the members of this association are hereafter changed, or whenever any new members are admitted to this association, the percentages of all the members shall be revised according to the rules of this association.

4. The through rates between eastern through or competitive points and points in California other than San Francisco, for business forwarded via Portland, shall be made by adding to the through rates between said eastern points and Portland the current local rates of the regular established transportation lines, which may carry the business between said California points and Portland.

496 5. All lines here represented solemnly agree to maintain the rates now in force, or which may hereafter be mutually agreed upon, between San Francisco and Portland, on the one hand, and eastern through or competitive points in the United States or Canadas, on the other hand, without cut, rebate, or deviation in any manner; it being the understanding that the giving of passes or reduced fares to, or upon request of, or for the account of, shippers or consignees or their families, or to any person for the purpose of influencing business, or the payment of any ticket commissions, shall be regarded as violation of this agreement, subjecting the offender to the penalties hereinafter provided.

6. From and after the date of this agreement no street commission or ticket rebate on eastbound overland tickets will be paid by the companies parties hereto; and connecting eastern lines shall be requested by the commissioner hereafter to be appointed to discontinue the payment of street commissions and rebates to passengers, and the making of any cuts whatever from established through rates; and should any such railroad company fail or refuse to comply with such requests, it shall be the duty of the commissioner to notify the Pacific Coast Terminal Companies, which shall then suspend the sale of all tickets over the lines so failing or refusing, for so long a time as the commissioner may direct.

497 And, further, the Pacific Coast Terminal Companies shall, through the commissioner, redeem within five (5) days from the date of issue, at the full amount received by them therefor, any and all through tickets of their respective issues, purchased by or for passengers, at such times and under such circumstances as may be deemed best by the commissioner.

7. All special contracts binding shippers to one or more of the parties hereto shall be immediately thrown open to each and every other party to this agreement, and contracting shippers shall be notified to that effect.

8. A commissioner shall be appointed, whose salary and expenses shall be paid jointly by the parties hereto in proportion as the earnings from the business subject to this agreement are shared by each.

9. Said commissioner shall arbitrate all disputes arising under this agreement between the parties hereto, and his decision shall be final and binding upon all. Complaints by one or more parties against other parties hereto shall be made in writing to the commissioner, who shall promptly investigate and give judgment according to the facts within thirty days, unless more time shall seem to be necessary for full inquiry and consideration on the part 498 of the commissioner.

10. If any party hereto is adjudged by the commissioner to have deviated from the established rates, said party shall be fined for each offense three times the amount of earnings which would have accrued from the business had it been taken at the regularly established rates, but not less, in any case, than $500.

11. Each party hereto shall deposit with some solvent bank, to the order of the commissioner, the sum of $5,000, and shall keep that sum so deposited. From said sum all fines shall be collected by the commissioner.

12. The fines collected by the commissioner shall be distributed among the nonoffending parties hereto in proportion to their earnings from the business, subject to this agreement.

13. The commissioner shall have access to all books and papers of the parties hereto which have a bearing upon the Pacific coast traffic, which is the subject of this agreement.

14. It is also agreed that, so far as practicable, the parties to this agreement will protect the through rates and carry out all 499 instructions that may be issued by the commissioner in order to protect the through rates, so that one line may not have any advantage over any other line.

15. Said commissioner shall be promptly supplied at the close of each day's business with a legible impression copy of the waybills for all freight covered by this agreement and shall be supplied by each of the parties hereto with such other statistics and statements as he may desire as to the business done by them and covered by this agreement.

16. It is agreed that a new passenger tariff will be issued as soon as practicable, and in case the lines can not agree on rates the commissioner will settle all the differences that may come up, such as giving side rides, and other matters. His action will be final.

17. It is agreed that the subsidy not paid the Pacific Mail Steamship Company for its steamers between San Francisco and New York shall be borne by the several companies here represented in the proportions of their revenue from the San Francisco business covered by this agreement.

18. It is understood and agreed that the Pacific Mail business between New York and San Francisco shall be managed fairly and impartially, in the interests of all lines concerned, and shall not be used as a means of securing business for any one or more of 500 these lines as against others, and that any complaints upon this subject shall be referred to and decided by the commissioner, subject to the same fine that is provided for the cutting of rates.

It being understood that the commissioner's relations to the Pacific Mail business between New York and San Francisco shall be the same as his relations to the other business which is the subject of this agreement.

19. This agreement shall take effect October 1, 1883, and continue in force until December 31, 1884, or until ninety days' written notice shall have been given to the commissioner by one or more parties hereto of a desire or intention to withdraw therefrom.

502 PETITIONER'S EXHIBIT No. 20, SEPTEMBER 21, 1914.

Union Pacific Railroad Company, Southern Pacific Company, Central Pacific Railway Company, Southern Pacific Railroad Company, and Oregon Short Line Railroad Company.

Agreement dated February 8, 1913.

503 Agreement, made this eighth day of February, 1913, by and between Union Pacific Railroad Company, a corporation of the State of Utah; Southern Pacific Company, a corporation of the State of Kentucky; Central Pacific Railway Company, a corporation of the State of Utah; Southern Pacific Railroad Company, a corporation of the States of California, Arizona, and New Mexico; and Oregon Short Line Railroad Company, a corporation of the State of Utah.

Whereas the Union Pacific Railroad Company has, from time to time, acquired, in its own name or in the name of the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company, shares of the capital stock of the Southern Pacific Company to the aggregate amount of one hundred twenty-six million six hundred fifty thousand dollars ($126,650,000), par ue, and said entire amount is now held by the Oregon Short e Railroad Company. The Supreme Court of the United States an opinion rendered on the 2d day of December, 1912, on the peal of the United States of America from a decree entered by Circuit Court of the United States in and for the District of ah in a suit in which the United States of America was com-inant and the Union Pacific Railroad Company, Southern Pacific Company, and others were respondents (hereinafter designated as the "merger suit"), held that the acquisition and ownership by the Union Pacific Railroad Company and Oregon Short Line Railroad Company of said capital stock of Southern Pacific Company constituted an unlawful combinan, and directed that said capital stock of the Southern Pacific mpany be disposed of, subject to the approval of the District urt of the United States in and for the District of Utah, in such nner as to effectually dissolve said combination. The Southern Pac Company owns the entire outstanding capital stock, common and ferred, of the Central Pacific Railway Company, except qualifying res held by the directors of said company. Since the aforesaid ision of the Supreme Court of the United States in the merger t the Union Pacific Railroad Company has surrendered all con-l of the management of the Southern Pacific Company, and di-tors and other officers of the Southern Pacific Company have n elected and appointed who have no official relation with the ion Pacific Railroad Company. The Attorney General of the ited States, as counsel for the complainant in the merger suit, l the parties hereto, desire that, as an incident of the proceedings for the dissolution of the combination held illegal in that suit, the control of the railroads and appurtenant property of the Central Pacific Railway Company, with certain exceptions, ll be transferred from the Southern Pacific Company to the ion Pacific Railroad Company. The Southern Pacific Company, ough its reconstituted board of directors, has offered to sell to Union Pacific Railroad Company, and the Union Pacific Rail-d Company is willing to purchase, all the right, title, and interest the Southern Pacific Company in and to the capital stock of the ntral Pacific Railway Company and in and to the capital stock of Central Pacific Railroad Company (held by the Southern Pac Company as a muniment of title), for the consideration and on the terms expressed in the following agreement, in the event

t the amount necessary to pay such consideration can be realized the sale, in the manner hereinafter set forth, of the capital stock the Southern Pacific Company now held by the Oregon Short e Railroad Company. It is proposed by the Oregon Short Line ilroad Company, subject to the approval of the District Court of the United States for the District of Utah, to offer the entire amou of its holdings of the capital stock of the Southern Pacific Compa for sale to the stockholders of the Union Pacific Railro 506 Company and the stockholders (other than the Union P cific Railroad Company and the Oregon Short Line Railro Company) of the Southern Pacific Company, in the manner here after in this agreement indicated. The aforesaid capital stock said Central Pacific Railway Company to the amount of sixty-sev million two hundred seventy-four thousand two hundred dolla ($67,274,200), par value, of common capital stock, and seventee million four hundred thousand dollars ($17,400,000), par value, preferred capital stock, being the entire outstanding capital sto of said company, except thirteen hundred dollars ($1,300), par valu is now pledged with the Union Trust Company of New York, trustee, under a mortgage executed by said Southern Pacific Co pany, dated August 1, 1899, to secure an issue of bonds of said Sout ern Pacific Company, known as its "four per cent gold bonds (Centr Pacific stock collateral)," now outstanding to the amount of thirt four million two hundred eighteen thousand five hundred dolla ($34,218,500), par value, of which five million four hundred fort nine thousand dollars ($5,449,000), par value, are now owned the Union Pacific Railroad Company.

Now, therefore, the parties hereto agree as follows:

507 FIRST.

1. The Southern Pacific Company hereby agrees to sell, assign, a transfer to Union Pacific Railroad Company, and the Union Paci Railroad Company hereby agrees to purchase, upon the terms here after expressed, all the right, title, and interest of the South Pacific Company in and to sixty-seven million two hundred seven five thousand five hundred dollars ($67,275,500), par value, of common capital stock, and seventeen million four hundred thous dollars ($17,400,000), par value, of the preferred capital stock, of Central Pacific Railway Company, being the entire capital stock said company outstanding; and all the right, title, and interest of Southern Pacific Company in and to sixty-seven million two hund thirty-five thousand eight hundred dollars ($67,235,800), par va of the capital stock of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, be the entire amount of the capital stock of said company owned or h by the Southern Pacific Company.

2. The Southern Pacific Company hereby agrees, immediately u the effective date of this agreement, to secure the resignation of then existing directors of the Central Pacific Railway C 508 pany and the due and regular election in their stead, as s

directors, of such persons as the Union Pacific Railroad Company shall have nominated for election as such directors, and to cause the shares to the amount of thirteen hundred dollars ($1,300), par value, of the common capital stock of the Central Pacific Railway Company, now registered in the names of the existing directors of the Central Pacific Railway Company, to be transferred to and registered on the books of said company in the names of the aforesaid nominees of the Union Pacific Railroad Company, and to cause the certificates for said shares to be duly delivered to such nominees.

3. The Southern Pacific Company hereby agrees, immediately upon the effective date of this agreement, to cause to be transferred to and registered on the books of the Central Pacific Railway Company and the Central Pacific Railroad Company, respectively, in the name of the Union Pacific Railroad Company all the certificates representing the sixty-seven million two hundred seventy-four thousand two hundred dollars ($67,274,200), par value, of common capital stock, and seventeen million four hundred thousand dollars ($17,400,000), par value, of preferred capital stock of the Central Pacific Railway Company, now pledged with the Union Trust Company of New York, as trustee, as security for the Southern Pacific Company's four per cent gold bonds (Central Pacific stock collateral), and sixty-seven million six thousand three hundred dollars ($67,006,300), par value, of the capital stock of the Central Pacific Railroad Company pledged with said Union Trust Company of New York, as trustee, under a supplemental mortgage, dated December 29, 1899, as a further assurance for the payment of said bonds, and to cause the new certificates therefor, endorsed in blank by the Union Pacific Railroad Company, to be redeposited with said Union Trust Company of New York, subject, however, to a lien in favor of the Southern Pacific Company upon said stock certificates, if and when the same shall be released from the lien of said mortgages, to secure the payment of any and all instalments of the consideration expressed in section 7 hereof then remaining unpaid.

4. The Southern Pacific Company hereby agrees, immediately upon the effective date of this agreement, to assign and deliver to Union Pacific Railroad Company the certificates representing two hundred seventeen thousand dollars ($217,000), par value, of the capital stock of the Central Pacific Railroad Company now held in its treasury, and all letters of indemnity and other papers evidencing the ownership of an additional twelve thousand five hundred dollars ($12,500), par value, of said Central Pacific Railroad Company capital stock, and whenever requested by the Union Pacific Railroad Company to secure the resignation of the then existing directors of the Central Pacific Railroad Company and the due and regular election in their stead, as such directors, of such persons as the Union Pacific Railroad Company shall have nominated therefor.

5. The Southern Pacific Company hereby agrees, immediately upon the effective date of this agreement, to execute and deliver to the Central Pacific Railway Company as an instrument releasing, cancelling, and surrendering the indentures of lease, dated February 17, 1885, and December 7, 1893, by and between the Central Pacific Railroad Company and the Southern Pacific Company, and the supplemental lease, dated March 1, 1912, by and between the Central Pacific Railway Company and the Southern Pacific Company, and all other agreements supplementary to or in modification of said instruments, under and by virtue of which the Southern Pacific Company now holds and operates the railroads and other properties of the Central Pacific Railway Company.

511 6. The Union Pacific Railroad Company and the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company hereby agree to offer to all stockholders, common and preferred, of the Union Pacific Railroad Company and to all stockholders of the Southern Pacific Company (except the Union Pacific Railroad Company and the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company), registered on the stock books of said companies, respectively, on a date specified in such offer, the right to subscribe for and purchase the entire amount of one hundred twenty-six million six hundred fifty thousand dollars ($126,650,000), par value, of the capital stock of the Southern Pacific Company now held by the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company, in the proportions and upon the terms hereinafter specified. Each such stockholders of the Union Pacific Railroad Company shall be offered the right to subscribe for and purchase one share of said capital stock of the Southern Pacific Company for each four shares of capital stock of the Union Pacific Railroad Company, common or preferred, registered in his name on the stock books of said Union Pacific Railroad Company; and each such stockholder of the Southern Pacific Company shall be offered the right to subscribe for and purchase one share of said capital stock of the Southern Pacific Company for 512 each three shares of capital stock of the Southern Pacific Company registered in his name on the stock books of said Southern Pacific Company. Such offer shall specify, as the date on or before which all subscriptions shall be made (hereinafter called the "subscription date"), a date not exceeding thirty days after the effective date of this agreement. The subscription and purchase right offered shall be a right to purchase at the subscription price of $80 per share, and accrued dividend, payable as follows, viz: Twenty-five per cent thereof to accompany the subscription; twenty-five per cent thereof to be paid substantially three months after the subscription date; twenty-five per cent thereof to be paid substantially six months after the subscription date; and the remaining twenty-five per cent thereof to be paid substantially nine months after the subscription date; with interest on the deferred instalments of such subscription price from the subscription date at a rate per cent per annum equal to the accrued dividend, with an option, however, to each subscriber to anticipate the maturity of any deferred instalment of the subscription price, at any time upon the payment of the amount of such instalment and the accrued interest thereon to the date of payment. The terms of said subscription rights shall provide that all voting and dividend rights incident to the stock so purchased shall vest in the subscribers upon the acceptance of their subscriptions, but that the stock certificates to which the subscribers shall be entitled by virtue of their subscriptions shall be held as collateral security for the payment of the deferred instalments of the subscription price, with full power to sell said stock at public or private sale, and without notice, upon default in the payment of any instalment of such subscription price. The Southern Pacific Company hereby agrees to furnish a certified list of its stockholders entitled to participate in such subscription rights, to issue promptly all stock certificates requested by the Union Pacific Railroad Company for delivery to subscribers, upon surrender by the Union Pacific Railroad Company or the depositary, in due form for transfer, of certificates for a equal amount of stock, and to take all such other action as may be necessary to facilitate the initiation and accomplishment of the plan herein provided for.

7. The Union Pacific Railroad Company hereby agrees to pay and render, and the Southern Pacific Company hereby agrees to accept, as the full consideration and purchase price of the capital stock of the Central Pacific Railway Company and the capital stock of the Central Pacific Railroad Company to be purchased by it as hereinbefore provided and as the full consideration for the performance by the Southern Pacific Company of the obligations expressed in the foregoing sections 2, 3, 4, and 5, as follows:

(a) Fourteen million sixty-five thousand four hundred forty-one dollars ($14,065,441) in cash, with interest thereon at the rate of five per cent per annum from the first day of January, 1913, immediately upon the performance by the Southern Pacific Company of the obligations expressed in the foregoing sections 3 and 5.

(b) To surrender and deliver to the Southern Pacific Company, duly cancelled, immediately upon the performance by the Southern Pacific Company of the obligations expressed in the foregoing sections 3 and 5, four per cent gold bonds (Central Pacific stock collateral) of the Southern Pacific Company to the principal amoun five million four hundred and forty-nine thousand dollars ($5,4 000), par value, now held by the Union Pacific Railroad Compa and to pay an amount equal to interest at the rate of five per cen the principal amount of said bonds from the first day of J 515 uary, 1913, less the interest accrued on the bonds so surrend from the first day of December, 1913, to the date of surrender.

(c) The net proceeds of the sale, made in accordance with plan contemplated in the foregoing section 6, of 846,755 shares of capital stock of the Southern Pacific Company of the par valu eighty-four million six hundred seventy-five thousand five hund dollars ($84,675,500), now held by the Oregon Short Line Railr Company, being the gross proceeds of the sale of said 846,755 sh at ninety-eight dollars and sixty-seven cents ($98.67) per sh less an underwriters' commission of three per cent and an allow to said underwriters of not exceeding one-quarter of one per cent expenses; such payment to be made in instalments as follo Twenty-five per cent of the gross proceeds of the said sale, less aforesaid commission and expenses of underwriting assumed by Southern Pacific Company, to be payable on the subscription d and the balance to be paid in three equal instalments, each consis of twenty-five per cent of the gross proceeds of said sale, paya respectively, substantially three, six and nine months after the scription date, with interest on each of said four instalments, at rate of five per cent per annum from the first day of Janu 516 1913, until paid. The Union Pacific Railroad Company s have the right or option to pay any instalment, or any par any instalment, of said consideration and purchase price at any prior to the dates above fixed, and upon the making of any payment or payments interest shall cease in respect to the sum sums so paid. All interest due as aforesaid shall be paid by Union Pacific Railroad Company semiannually on July 1 and J ary 1, the first payment to be made on July 1, 1913. Provided, h ever, that, if the Union Pacific Railroad Company prior to the ment of the consideration and purchase price as aforesaid shall elected, pursuant to the option hereinafter accorded it, to requir redemption by the Southern Pacific Company of the Southern cific Company's four per cent gold bonds (Central Pacific stock lateral), and shall have notified the Southern Pacific Compan such election, the Union Pacific Railroad Company shall not b quired to pay on account of the cash payments aforesaid an am exceeding, exclusive of interest payments, the sum of forty-e million five hundred thousand dollars ($48,500,000), unless and the Southern Pacific Company shall deliver to the Union Pacific Railroad Company or its order the certificates representing all the shares of the capital stock of said Central Pacific Railway 517 Company, and of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, now pledged with the Union Trust Company of New York, as trustee, to secure the Southern Pacific Company's outstanding four per cent gold bonds (Central Pacific stock collateral), released and discharged from the lien of the mortgages securing said bonds and free from all other liens and charges; and that, upon the tender by the Southern Pacific Company of delivery of all the certificates of capital stock of the Central Pacific Railway Company and Central Pacific Railroad Company now pledged with the Union Trust Company of New York, as aforesaid, released, discharged, and free from all liens and charges, as aforesaid, all payments theretofore deferred, because of the inability of the Southern Pacific Company previously to deliver the same, shall immediately be made together with interest thereon at the rate and at the dates herein provided. And provided further, that the Union Pacific Railroad Company shall be entitled to five days of grace in the payment of the four instalments of the cash consideration described in the foregoing subdivision (c) of this section, from and after the receipt by it from the subscribers, or from the underwriters, of the proceeds of sale constituting such instalment.

518 8. The Southern Pacific Company hereby agrees, whenever requested by the Union Pacific Railroad Company, to call for redemption the entire amount of its four per cent gold bonds (Central Pacific stock collateral) then outstanding under the aforesaid mortgage and supplemental mortgage dated August 1, 1899, and December 29, 1899, persuant to the provisions of said mortgage regarding redemption, and to redeem and pay said bonds and to take all action and proceedings necessary to release and completely discharge the lien of said mortgages so that the certificates representing the capital stock pledged thereunder may be surrendered and delivered to the Union Pacific Railroad Company upon its making final payment therefor: Provided, however, That the Union Pacific Railroad Company, in the event of its requesting such redemption, shall lend or cause to be loaned to said Southern Pacific Company the amount necessary to pay the principal of the bonds so called for redemption or so much thereof as the Southern Pacific Company shall request, such loan to be secured by an issue of the bonds of the Southern Pacific Company equal to the principal amount of said loan, payable ten years from the date of issue thereof, with interest thereon at the rate of four per cent per annum, pay-519 able semiannually, and to be issued under an indenture, in form approved by counsel for the Union Pacific Railroad Co pany, and containing the usual provisions for the maturity of pri cipal in case of default in the payment of any instalment of intere and for the sale, in the event of default in the payment of the pri cipal or of any instalment of interest, of any security pledged f the payment of said bonds. The same bonds shall be secured collateral satisfactory in amount and character to the Union Paci Railroad Company. In case there shall then be in the possession a control of the Southern Pacific Company stocks and bonds no pledged under the indenture dated March 1, 1911, between the Ce

tral Pacific Railway Company, Southern Pacific Company, a United States Trust Company of New York, as trustee (hereinaft designated as the "European loan debenture"), released from th lien and restrictions of said European loan indenture, to an aggrega amount equal, at the valuations assigned to them in the Europe loan indenture, to the principal amount of the loan made by th Union Pacific Railroad Company to the Southern Pacific Compan as aforesaid, such stocks and bonds to such aggregate amount sha be deemed collateral satisfactory in amount and character, an 520 shall be pledged and delivered by the Southern Pacific Co pany as such security unless and until other collateral satisfa tory to the Union Pacific Railroad Company shall be pledged.

9. Upon the payment of the Southern Pacific Company's four pe cent gold bonds (Central Pacific stock collateral) at their maturi or upon their redemption and payment prior to maturity, the South ern Pacific Company shall promptly secure the release and discharg of the mortgage and supplemental mortgage securing said bonds, an shall thereupon tender to the Union Pacific Railroad Company th certificates representing the capital stock of the Central Pacific Rail way Company and the Central Pacific Railroad Company thereto fore pledged to secure said bonds, and shall deliver the same to th Union Pacific Railroad Company, or its order, upon its final an complete payment of the consideration expressed in the foregoin section 7. In the event that the said four per cent gold bonds (Centra Pacific stock collateral) shall be redeemed and paid prior to thei maturity and prior to the due date of the final installment of th consideration to be paid by the Union Pacific Railroad Compan as expressed in the foregoing section 7, the certificates representin the capital stock of the Cenral Pacific Railway Company an 521 the Central Pacific Railroad Company thereupon release from the lien of the mortgage and supplemental mortgag securing said bonds shall, unless the Union Pacific Railroad Com pany desires to anticipate the maturity of said final installment, b deposited in escrow by the Southern Pacific Company with suc trust company in the city of New York as shall be designated by the Union Pacific Railroad Company, to be delivered to the Union Pacific Railroad Company or its order, upon the payment of the final installment of the consideration aforesaid in accordance with the provisions of the foregoing section 7.

10. The Southern Pacific Company hereby agrees duly and punctually to pay all installments of interest on its aforesaid four per cent gold bonds (Central Pacific stock collateral) as such interest shall mature, and to pay the principal of said bonds when the same shall become due, whether upon the maturity of said bonds or otherwise, and at all times to indemnify and save harmless the Union Pacific Railroad Company from an enforcement of the lien of the mortgage securing said bonds against the stocks pledged thereunder. The Southern Pacific Company hereby agrees, immediately upon the effective date of this agreement, to deliver to and pledge with the Union Pacific Railroad Company, as security for the obligations expressed in this section, collateral satisfactory in amount and character to the Union Pacific Railroad Company. In the event of the failure of the Southern Pacific Company to pay the principal of said bonds, or any installment of interest thereon when the same shall become due, the Union Pacific Railroad Company shall have the right to pay the same and to reimburse itself by the sale of said collateral at public or private sale without notice. The Union Pacific Railroad Company agrees to indemnify and save harmless the Southern Pacific Company from the obligations on its part to be performed under the said Central Pacific stock collateral mortgage and the mortgage supplemental thereto, dated December 29, 1899, except the payment of the principal and interest of the bonds issued thereunder and of the compensation of the trustee.

SECOND.

11. It is hereby agreed by all the parties hereto that immediately upon the effective date of this agreement the Central Pacific Railway Company will make, and the Southern Pacific Railroad Company will accept, and the Southern Pacific Company will guarantee on the part of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, a lease for a term of 999 years of the line of railroad of said Central Pacific Railway Company extending from Tehama, in Tehama County, in the State of California, to a connection with the line of railroad of the Oregon & California Railroad Company at the boundary line between the States of California and Oregon, with all franchises, rights, privileges, immunities, and other property appertaining thereto, except equipment, at an annual rental payable in equal semiannual installments, on the first day of June and the first day of December of each year, equal to a year's interest at the rate of five per cent per annum on the value of said line of railroad and its fra chises and appurtenances (other than equipment) to be leased aforesaid, to be ascertained by arbitration, as hereinafter provide in the event that the parties hereto shall be unable within twel months from the effective date hereof to agree upon said valuatio with an option to the Southern Pacific Railroad Company to pu chase the said leased line of railroad and its appurtenances at t valuation fixed as the basis of rental in accordance with this se tion 11 whenever said line and its appurtenances can be convey by the Central Pacific Railway Company free from the mortga liens now existing thereon. The Central Pacific Railw 524 Company hereby agrees that it will create no additional li upon said line of railroad without the consent of the Southe Pacific Railroad Company or of the Southern Pacific Compan and that it will pay the interest upon all bonds now outstandin secured by mortgage liens upon said line of railroad, as such inter shall mature, and will pay the principal of said bonds at maturit and that it will at all times indemnify and hold harmless the Sout ern Pacific Railroad Company and Southern Pacific Company fro and against the enforcement upon said line of railroad and its a purtenances of the lien of any of said mortgages; and the Uni Pacific Railroad Company hereby guarantees the performance of sa obligations assumed by the Central Pacific Railway Company. Sa lease shall be substantially in the form of the draft of lease here attached and marked Exhibit A, except such changes in said for as shall be made by agreement of the parties and approved by t railroad commission of California.

12. It is hereby agreed by all the parties hereto that, immediate upon the effective date of this agreement, the Central Pacific Ra way Company will sell and convey to said Southern Pacific Railro Company and that said Southern Pacific Railroad Compa 525 will purchase the line of railroad of the Central Pacific Ra way Company, constructed and under construction, extendi from a connection with the line of railroad described in section hereof at Weed Station, Siskiyou County, California, to a connecti with the line of railroad of the Oregon and California Railro Company at or near Natron Station, Lane County, Oregon, by w of Klamath Falls, Oregon, with its franchises, rights, privileges, i munities, and other property appertaining thereto, conveyed by t Oregon Eastern Railway Company to Central Pacific Railway Co
pany by deed dated February 29, 1912. As the consideration for t sale aforesaid said Southern Pacific Railroad Company hereby agre to assume and indemnify said Central Pacific Railway Compa from and against any expenditures made by the Central Pacific Ra way Company or for its account for construction, additions, or b terments in connection with the said railroad and its appurtenances, since the 29th day of February, 1912, and agrees to assume and indemnify and save harmless the Central Pacific Railway Company from and against the California Northeastern Division first mortgage bonds of the Oregon Eastern Railway Company to the amount of $5,000,000, face value, and extensions purchase notes of the Central Pacific Railway Company to the principal amount of 926 $7,055,097.20, together with the interest maturing and payable on said bonds and notes after the date of the purchase provided for in this section, and to reimburse the Central Pacific Railway Company for all interest paid by it on said bonds and notes which accrued subsequently to February 29, 1912, and further hereby assumes and agrees to pay any other indebtedness and liabilities now outstanding of the Oregon Eastern Railway Company heretofore assumed by the Central Pacific Railway Company in and by the deed of February 29, 1912, aforesaid; and the Southern Pacific Company hereby agrees to guarantee the obligations agreed in this section to be assumed by the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, and further agrees to cancel and surrender the aforesaid extensions purchase notes now held by it to the amount aforesaid, and to execute and have duly recorded a release by it, as the holder of the aforesaid bonds issued by the Oregon Eastern Railway Company, of all obligations concerning said bonds assumed by the Central Pacific Railway Company in and by the aforesaid deed dated February 29, 1912.

THIRD.

13. The said Southern Pacific Company and Southern Pacific Railroad Company agree to grant, and hereby do grant, to the 927 Central Pacific Railway Company the equal joint use and possession, from the effective date of this agreement, for a term of 999 years, of all that part of the railway and appurtenant property owned either by the Southern Pacific Company or the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, including telegraph and telephone lines, from the connections thereof with the Central Pacific Railway Company's tracks in Sacramento, California, via Benicia and Port Costa, to connections with the Central Pacific Railway Company's tracks in Oakland, California, including the ferries between Benicia and Port Costa, and ferry slips at Benicia and Port Costa, and any bridge, tube, or tunnel substituted for the ferry between Benicia and Port Costa, and the appurtenances thereof, except rolling stock and supplies. A contract shall be executed and delivered by the parties aforesaid, immediately upon the effective date of this agreement, covering said joint use and possession, which shall contain a provision for the payment by the Central Pacific Railway Company as an annual rental and consideration for such use and possession, the sum of two and one-half per cent per annum on the value of the property covered by said agreement, in two equal instalments, on the first day of June and the first day of December in each year, to be in-528 creased by two and one-half per cent per annum upon the actual cost (which shall include transportation and insurance and a just sum to cover the cost of superintendence and management) to the Southern Pacific Company or the Southern Pacific Railroad Company of all improvements, betterments, and additions to the property properly chargeable to capital account, which valuation shall be determined by agreement of the parties or by arbitration hereunder; and a provision for the payment by the Central Pacific Railway Company of a proportion of the expense of maintenance and operation of said line of railroad, with its terminals and other appurtenances. Said contract shall contain substantially the terms expressed in, and shall be substantially in the form of, the draft of contract hereto attached and marked Exhibit B, except such changes in said form as shall be made by the parties and approved by the railroad commission of California.

14. From the effective date hereof the Central Pacific Railway Company shall be entitled to trackage or running rights for a term of 999 years over the line of railroad of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company and Southern Pacific Company between Redwood and San Francisco, for the operation of through freight trains 529 only, without right to do local business—Redwood to be considered local to Southern Pacific Company—with an option, however, to the Central Pacific Railway Company to withdraw from such trackage or running rights at any time within two years from the effective date hereof; the rental to be paid by the Central Pacific Railway Company for such trackage or running rights to be determined by arbitration in the manner hereinafter provided if the parties hereto are unable to agree thereon.

15. Union Pacific Railroad Company and Central Pacific Railway Company hereby agree that the Central Pacific Railway Company shall, and Central Pacific Railway Company does hereby, grant to the said Southern Pacific Company and said Southern Pacific Railroad Company, or either of them, an option for a period of two years from the effective date hereof to acquire the equal joint use and possession, for the term of 999 years, of the railway owned by the Central Pacific Railway Company, from Newark to Redwood, California, and the appurtenances thereof, except rolling stock and supplies, upon the same terms, conditions, and rights provided in the foregoing section with reference to the joint use and possession of the line of railroad between Sacramento and Oakland. Such use shall extend to the cars or trains of any corporation owned or controlled by the Southern Pacific Company.

16. During the continuance of the option rights in regard to trackage or joint use, or until the parties shall have previously agreed to the contrary, the lines of railway of the Central Pacific Railway Company and the other lines of railway operated by the Southern Pacific Company or controlled by it are to continue to interchange traffic, and either of said lines will continue to handle through trains (but with its own engines and crews) delivered to it by the other lines, upon the rates, terms, and conditions now in force, the intent and purpose hereof being that there shall be no interruption of through trains, or change in rates, or of the terms upon which through traffic is handled, by reason of this agreement or by reason of any sales, transfers, or leases herein provided for; but, at any time, upon the demand of either party hereto, in the event of the failure of the parties to agree upon the division of revenue upon joint business, such question shall be submitted to arbitration. The agreement of the parties, or determination by arbitration, first made, as to such division shall be retroactive to and from the date of the surrender of possession of the properties of the Central Pacific Railway Company by the Southern Pacific Company. Divisions now or heretofore in force between the Southern Pacific Company and the Western Pacific Railway Company, or between the Southern Pacific Company and the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railroad Company, on traffic between points in California and points east of California, or between the Southern Pacific Company and the Central Pacific Railway Company, are not to be regarded as precedents, or otherwise taken into account, in dividing rates on traffic interchanged between the Central Pacific Railway Company and the Southern Pacific Company, whether such division be by agreement or by arbitration. Any division of such rates, whether by agreement or by arbitration, may be reopened for a new agreement or arbitration at any time after having been in effect for one year, upon the demand of either party, and in the same way from year to year thereafter.

FOURTH.

17. From the effective date hereof the terminals of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company (or the Central Pacific Company) and the Central Pacific Railway Company at all junctions of their respective lines within city limits, including industry tracks, shall become and be subject to the joint and equal use of both parties, their lessees or assigns, for a term of 999 years, with the option to either party to withdraw from its use of any of the terminals of the other at any time within two years from the effective date hereof, and the maintenance and operating expenses and ta thereof shall be apportioned by agreement or by arbitration. T value of such terminals when owned exclusively by one party, a the difference in the value when jointly owned by several parti shall be ascertained by arbitration if the parties hereto are unab to agree thereon, and a rental upon the value, or the excess value, the case may be, at the rate of two and one-half per cent, shall paid for the use of such terminals by the tenant company. The for going grant and provisions contained in this section shall extend all respects, in favor of the Central Pacific Railway Company, to t freight terminals of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company and the Southern Pacific Company, including roundhouses and sh facilities for light and temporary repairs, in the city and county San Francisco, but not including shops or roundhouses at oth points; and, in favor of either the Southern Pacific Company a Southern Pacific Railroad Company on the one part or t 533 Central Pacific Railway Company on the other part, to freight and passenger terminals at Oakland, Oakland Mo Alameda, and Alameda Mole, and all ferries between Oakland a San Francisco and Oakland Mole and San Francisco and Alame Mole and San Francisco, and ferry slips and landings in San Fra cisco, and the passenger buildings adjacent thereto, owned or lea by the other of said parties. But the ownership and operation electric lines and stations and terminals thereon are to remain as present until otherwise disposed of, with an equitable apportionme of the earnings and expenses in the meantime.

18. The Central Pacific Railway Company agrees that it will u and employ its shops and shop facilities, roundhouses, and oth appurtenances at Sacramento, Oakland, and other points in Ca fornia for the repair and maintenance of the engines and cars a for other shopwork of the Southern Pacific Company and the Sout ern Pacific Railroad Company in the same manner as it uses a employs the same for the repair and maintenance of its own equi ment and for its own other shop work, without discrimination, f five years from the effective date hereof, the compensation of s Central Pacific Railway Company for the repair and sh 534 work and shop facilities to be fixed upon some equitable bas including a return upon the value of the plant; and if t parties are unable to agree upon such compensation, the same sh be determined by arbitration as hereinafter provided.

FIFTH.

19. The Southern Pacific Company hereby agrees to sell, assig and transfer to the Union Pacific Railroad Company, and the Uni

Pacific Railroad Company hereby agrees to purchase, immediately upon the effective date of this agreement, $3,000,000, face value, of first mortgage bonds of the Central California Railway Company; $1,000,000, face value, of first mortgage bonds of the Chico and Northern Railroad Company; $8,500,000, face value, of first mortgage bonds of the Nevada and California Railway Company; $2,500,000, face value, of the first mortgage bonds of the Sacramento Southern Railroad Company, and $3,084,252.33, face value, of extensions purchase notes of the Central Pacific Railway Company, dated March 1, 1912, now held by the Southern Pacific Company, for and in consideration of the payment by the Union Pacific Railroad Company of a sum equal to the aggregate principal amount of said bonds and notes, together with the accrued interest thereon (except 535 that the consideration for the purchase of said first mortgage bonds of the Chico and Northern Railroad Company shall be the book cost thereof to the Southern Pacific Company), and the Southern Pacific Company agrees to deliver to the Union Pacific Railroad Company the bonds and notes aforesaid; and the Southern Pacific Company further agrees to sell, assign, and transfer to the Union Pacific Railroad Company, and the Union Pacific Railroad Company agrees to purchase, at the face value thereof and accrued interest, all other indebtedness of the Central Pacific Railway Company to the Southern Pacific Company, on account of advances or otherwise, representing expenditures for construction and betterments made since the 29th day of February, 1912, and on account of materials and supplies not paid for out of earnings, in connection with the lines of railroad formerly owned, respectively, by the Central California Railway Company, Chico and Northern Railroad Company, Nevada and California Railway Company, Sacramento Southern Railroad Company, Goose Lake and Southern Railway Company, Fernley and Lassen Railway Company, and Modoc Northern Railway Company, acquired by the Central Pacific Railway Company by deeds of the seven companies aforesaid, each dated February 29, 1912.

536 20. The Central Pacific Railway Company hereby assumes and undertakes to perform all the obligations assumed by the Southern Pacific Company in that certain contract with the Red River Lumber Company, dated the 29th day of January, 1912, except as to rates on traffic destined to points on lines which will be operated by the Southern Pacific Company subsequently to the effective date of this contract and their connections, and as to such rates the Central Pacific Railway Company agrees to cooperate with the Southern Pacific Company in granting the same.

21. The Central Pacific Railway Company and the Southern Pacific Railroad Company (or the Southern Pacific Company) hereby mutually agree each to assume any expenditures for surveys of lin made as connections and branches of its lines or otherwise for its u or account which are now outstanding and carried in suspense b the other of said parties.

22. All indebtedness and accounts (including expenditures on a count of material and supplies not paid for out of earnings, whic material and supplies the Central Pacific Railway Company hereb agrees to buy at an agreed or arbitrated price) existing between th Central Pacific Railway Company and Southern Pacific Com-
537 pany, for which provision is not otherwise made in this agree- ment (except such as may be evidenced by unmatured bond of the Central Pacific Railway Company guaranteed by the Southern Pacific Company) shall be adjusted as of the effective date hereof and the balance due after offsetting the mutual indebtedness an accounts, and the purchase price of the notes, securities, and in debtedness which the Union Pacific Railroad Company agrees t buy under section 19 hereof, may be paid by the debtor party o the effective date of this agreement, or payment may be postponed in whole or in part, at the option of said party, to the date of th last payment by the Union Pacific Railroad Company of the con sideration and purchase price of the capital stock of the Centra Pacific Railway Company. In case of such postponement interest a the rate of five per cent shall be paid from the effective date of thi agreement on any and all amounts so postponed, and such settlemen shall be subject to such future adjustments, from time to time, a may be necessary to correct the balance first struck and paid a aforesaid.

23. The Union Pacific Railroad Company hereby agrees to in- demnify and save harmless said Southern Pacific Compan 538 from and against all liability existing, or which may hereafte arise, by reason of the guaranty by said Southern Pacif Company of bonds of said Central Pacific Railway Company no issued and outstanding, or which shall hereafter be issued under:

(a) The first refunding mortgage of said Central Pacific Railwa Company to Central Trust Company of New York, as trustee, date the 1st day of August, 1899.

(b) The three and one-half per cent mortgage of said Centra Pacific Railway Company to the United States Trust Company o New York, as trustee, dated the 1st day of August, 1899.

(c) The Through Short Line mortgage of said Central Pacific Rai way Company to the Guaranty Trust Company of New York, as tru tee, dated the 1st day of October, 1904.

(d) The European loan indenture.

Said Southern Pacific Company, however, agrees that it will co tinue to execute its guaranty of all bonds which shall hereafter ued by the Central Pacific Railway Company, under any of the ree mortgages described in the foregoing subdivisions (a), (b), and c) of this section, pursuant to the provisions of said mortgages for the interchange of registered bonds and coupon bonds, or for g the issue of bonds in lieu of or in substitution for mutilated or destroyed bonds. And the said Central Pacific Railway Com- ny agrees that it will not permit the issue of any additional bonds der its Through Short Line mortgage, except pursuant to the pro- ions of said mortgage for the interchange of registered and coupon nds or for the issue of bonds in lieu of or in substitution for muti- ted or destroyed bonds.

4. The Union Pacific Railroad Company hereby agrees to assume d perform all existing obligations now imposed upon the Southern cific Company in respect of the lines of the Central Pacific Rail- y Company (except the line of the railroad from Tehama to the undary line between the States of Oregon and California) under egraph, Pullman, mail, express, and all other contracts; and all owances and other compensation and benefits accruing to the uthern Pacific Company under such contracts shall be equitably ap- rtioned. The existing hospital arrangements of the parties are to continued until otherwise agreed by the parties, with an interest owance on some proper basis for the hospital improvements in favor of the company owning the same. It is understood that) some adjustment shall be made with reference to the pension rules and regulations of the parties and a proper adjustment d apportionment of pension payments.

5. The Union Pacific Railroad Company and the Central Pacific ilway Company hereby agree to proceed with reasonable diligence er the surrender of the possession of the railways and other prop- ies of the Central Pacific Railway Company now operated by said uthern Pacific Company to effect, as far as such substitution shall permitted under the European loan indenture, a substitution of lateral of said Central Pacific Railway Company or of said Union cific Railroad Company for collateral of the Southern Pacific mpany heretofore pledged and now held under the provisions of d European loan indenture, and also to use their best endeavors, so far as the same shall not involve expense or cost to Central cific Railway Company and Union Pacific Railroad Company, to ure a release or rescission of the covenants and agreements con- ned in section 3 of article three of said indenture, and as to any lateral owned by the Southern Pacific Company so pledged and d (and which it covenants in said indenture not to sell or pledge) which shall not have been released and surrendered to said Southern Pacific Company within a reasonable period, or any shares of stock which the Southern Pacific Company is prohibited from selling or pledging under the covenants and agreement aforesaid, the Union Pacific Railroad Company will deliver to sai Southern Pacific Company, under a suitable agreement for the pro tection of the same, other collateral equal in value to the collateral o the Southern Pacific Company then remaining so pledged and held or so prohibited from sale or pledge. If the parties fail to agre respecting the relative value of such collateral, the matter in dispu shall be determined by arbitration as hereinafter provided.

26. The Southern Pacific Company hereby agrees duly and faith fully to observe and perform all the terms, covenants, conditions, an requirements contained in the European loan indenture to be ob served and performed on its part, and not to permit or suffer any act matter, or thing whereby any default shall be created or incurred i accordance with the terms of said European loan indenture o account of the breach of any of the terms, covenants, conditions, an requirements on its part to be observed or performed; and that i the event that the bonds outstanding under said European loa 542 indenture shall become or be declared due and payable prior t the maturity thereof on account of any act, matter or thin done or suffered by the Southern Pacific Company contrary to th provisions of this section 26, the Southern Pacific Company will pa upon demand to the Central Pacific Railway Company as liquidate damages a sum equal to such proportion of the amount of the aggre gate discount, commissions and expenses incurred by the Centra Pacific Railway Company upon and in connection with the bond issued under said European loan indenture as the period then remain ing prior to the first day of March, 1946, shall bear to the entir period of 35 years during which said bonds were by their terms t have remained outstanding.

SIXTH.

27. The Southern Pacific Company hereby agrees that, except i the regular course of carrying on and conducting the ordinary bus ness and operations of the Central Pacific Railway Company, no of the property and assets of said Central Pacific Railway Compan has been since the 2nd day of December, 1912, or shall be, assigne transferred, conveyed, or otherwise disposed of, before the surrend to said Central Pacific Railway Company of the possession of th properties of that company now held and operated by th
543 Southern Pacific Company, and before the reconstitution the board of directors of said Central Pacific Railway Co pany, as provided in section 2, article first, hereof; and that, with th exception aforesaid, no obligations of the Central Pacific Railw Company have been incurred or released since the said 2d day

December, 1912, or shall be incurred or released before the surrender of the said property to the Central Pacific Railway Company and the reconstitution of the board of directors of the Central Pacific Railway Company as aforesaid; and that since said date no dividend on the capital stock of the Central Pacific Railway Company has been declared, and that none shall be declared before the surrender of the possession of said property to the Central Pacific Railway Company and the reconstitution of the board of directors of said company as aforesaid, except dividends at the rate of six per cent per annum on the common capital stock from June 1, 1912, to January 1, 1913, and dividends at the rate of four per cent per annum on the preferred capital stock from August 1, 1912, to January 1, 1913. The Southern Pacific Company hereby agrees to pay to Union Pacific Railroad Company, upon demand after the effective date of this agree-544 ment, the proportionate part of any dividend received by or credited to it, on account of its holding of capital stock of the Central Pacific Railway Company, for any period subsequent to January 1, 1913, with interest thereon at the rate of five per cent from January 1, 1913. The Oregon Short Line Railroad Company shall be entitled to retain the dividend payable to stockholders of the Southern Pacific Company registered on the books of that company on December 2, 1912, and received by said Oregon Short Line Railroad Company on January 2, 1913.

28. The Southern Pacific Company hereby undertakes and agrees that in the interval between December 2, 1912, and the surrender of the lease and property of the Central Pacific Railway Company to the Central Pacific Railway Company no changes have been or will be made in rates, divisions, revenue, or service on the Central Pacific Railway that will prejudice the interests of the Union Pacific Railroad Company or discriminate against the Central Pacific Railway Company in favor of the Southern Pacific Company.

29. The Southern Pacific Company hereby agrees that all interest or other obligations of the Central Pacific Railway Company and all taxes maturing and becoming payable before the surrender of 545 the possession of the properties of the said Central Pacific Railway Company now operated by said Southern Pacific Company shall be paid for account of the Central Pacific Railway Company, and that said Southern Pacific Company will advance any funds necessary for that purpose if the said Central Pacific Railway Company shall not have the same readily available, and further agrees that the roadway and structures and the equipment and other properties and facilities of the Central Pacific Railway Company shall be maintained and the operation of the properties of the said Central Pacific Railway Company shall be carried on and conducted by the said Southern Pacific Company in strict accordance with the arrangements and practices heretofore existing, until the surrender of said properties to the possession of said Central Pacific Railway Company.

30. It is mutually agreed by all the parties hereto that all leases, deeds, or other instruments either necessary or proper to carry out any of the provisions of this agreement shall be executed and delivered immediately upon the effective date of this agreement or as soon thereafter as practicable, and in each case with such evidence of corporate action, the regularity of meetings and otherwise, as shall be reasonably required by counsel for any party in inter-546 est in order to establish the validity of the title to any property acquired as contemplated by the terms hereof; and that each party hereto will do, execute, acknowledge, and deliver, or will cause to be done, executed, acknowledged, and delivered, all and every such further acts, transfers, and assurances for the better assuring, conveying, and confirming unto any other party the benefits intended hereby to be conferred and for more completely effecting and accomplishing the purposes of this agreement.

31. The Southern Pacific Company and the Southern Pacific Railroad Company hereby agree, from time to time, to convey and transfer or cause to be conveyed and transferred to the Central Pacific Railway Company, upon the payment of the cost and carrying charges which the Central Pacific Railway Company agrees to pay, the title to any property, except equipment, which has been acquired by the Southern Pacific Company or by any person or corporation at its request for the uses and purposes of the Central Pacific Railway Company; and the Central Pacific Railway Company hereby agrees in like manner and upon the same terms to convey or transfer, or cause to be conveyed or transferred, to the Southern Pacific 547 Company or the Southern Pacific Railroad Company any property, except equipment, which has been acquired by the Central Pacific Railway Company or by any person or corporation at its request for the uses and purposes of said other companies, or either of them; but the obligation herein contained as to property standing in the name of either the Southern Pacific Railroad Company or the Central Pacific Railway Company shall not apply to any such property to which the mortgages of said companies have attached.

32. The said Southern Pacific Company will cause to be executed and delivered to the Central Pacific Railway Company immediately upon the effective date hereof all instruments necessary or appropriate to cancel all leases or other instruments whereby any property of the Central Pacific Railway Company has been leased to or is held by the Southern Pacific Railroad Company or any other company controlled by the Southern Pacific Company or by any person for the Southern Pacific Company; and in like manner the Central Pacific Railway Company will at the same time cause to be executed and delivered all instruments necessary or appropriate to cancel all leases whereby any property of the Southern Pacific Railroad 548 Company or of the Southern Pacific Company has been leased to or is held by the Central Pacific Railway Company or by any person for it.

SEVENTH.

33. If at any time a question shall arise under this agreement as to which the parties cannot agree and which by the express terms of this agreement is to be determined by arbitration, such question shall be submitted to the arbitrament of five persons. The party demanding such submission shall give to the other party notice of such demand stating specifically the question to be submitted for decision and nominating a person to act as one referee. If at the expiration of twenty (20) days from the receipt of such notice the party receiving it has not notified the party demanding the reference of its nomination of a second referee, the party making the demand may make such selection. The first and second referees chosen shall select three disinterested persons familiar with business and experienced in railway management and affairs, and when the board is complete it shall fix a date and place for the hearing, of which the parties shall be severally notified. If the first and second referees chosen shall be unable to agree upon the other referees, or any 549 of them, such other referee or referees as to which they shall fail to agree shall be appointed upon ten days' notice, upon motion of either party, by the then senior circuit judge of the United States in and for the Second Judicial Circuit, or in his absence from the circuit or inability to act then by the circuit judge of said circuit holding the next oldest commission. After hearing the testimony and arguments which may be submitted by each party the referees, or a majority of them, if they agree upon an award, shall state the same in writing, which when delivered to both parties shall be binding and conclusive upon each, and each party hereby expressly agrees to be bound conclusively thereby. For the purposes of an arbitration under the provisions of this section the Southern Pacific Company and the Southern Pacific Railroad Company jointly shall be deemed one party, and the Union Pacific Railroad Company and Central Pacific Railway Company jointly shall be deemed one party, and action hereunder by, or service hereunder upon, either the Southern Pacific Company or the Southern Pacific Railroad Company shall be deemed binding upon both, and in like manner any action hereunder by, or service hereunder upon, either the Union
550 Pacific Railroad Company or the Central Pacific Railway

Company shall be deemed binding upon both. The board referees making any final award hereunder shall determine in discretion by which party the fees and expenses of the arbitrati shall be paid or shall apportion such fees and expenses between t parties, and such fees and expenses shall be forthwith paid by t party or parties liable therefor in accordance with such adjudicati of the arbitrators. If either party shall refuse to keep and perfor any award made as aforesaid, the adverse party may enforce t same by proper proceedings in any court of law or equity.

EIGHTH.

34. This agreement is made and signed by the parties hereto subje to the conditions hereinafter expressed and shall not become bindi or effective for any purpose, or as to any of its provisions, unless until each and all of said conditiones shall have been satisfied, to wi

(1) That a decree of the District Court of the United States f the District of Utah in the merger suit shall be entered, approvi the plan hereinbefore recited for the disposition of the capital stock the Southern Pacific Company held by the Oregon Short Line Rai road Company, and approving this agreement.

551 (2) That the Railroad Commission of the State of Califo nia shall consent to and approve (a) the lease of the line railroad between Tehama and the Oregon-California boundary pr vided in section 11 of this agreement; (b) the sale and conveyance so much of the line of railroad between Weed Station, California, a Natron Station, Oregon, provided in section 12 of this agreement, lies within the State of California; (c) the contract for the equ joint use and possession of the line of railroad between Sacrament and Oakland, California, provided in section 13 of this agreement (d) the provision contained in section 14 for trackage or runnin rights between Redwood and San Francisco, California; and (e) t provisions of section 17 as to joint use of terminals, etc.

(3) That the French banks named in the European loan indentu shall consent to the sale of the capital stock of the Central Paci Railway Company and to the surrender and cancellation by t Southern Pacific Company of its lease of the property of the Centr Pacific Railway Company herein provided.

(4) That an agreement shall be made with an underwritin 552 syndicate approved by the executive committee of the Souther Pacific Company for the purchase of the entire amount of o hundred and twenty-six million six hundred fifty thousand dolla ($126,650,000), par value, of capital stock of the Southern Paci Company, which shall not be subscribed for by the stockholders of t Union Pacific Railroad Company and Southern Pacific Company pu suant to the offer of subscription rights contemplated in the foregoing section 6.

Upon the satisfaction of each and all of the conditions hereinbefore in this section 34 expressed, this agreement shall immediately become effective and operative, and that date shall be deemed the "effective date of this agreement" as that term is used in this agreement.

35. This agreement shall inure to, and be binding upon, the successors and assigns of the parties hereto, and all the rights, privileges, and options hereinbefore conferred upon, or granted to, the parties hereto, shall inure to the benefit of, and the use by, any companies now or hereafter leased, owned or controlled through ownership of a majority of the capital stock by said parties, either, or any of them.

In witness whereof each of the parties hereto has caused this agreement to be executed in its behalf, by its officers thereunto

Agreement of lease entered into this day of , A. D. 1913, between the Central Pacific Railway Company, a corporation of the State of Utah, hereinafter called the "Central Company," the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, a corporation of the States of California, Arizona, and New Mexico, hereinafter called the "Pacific Company," and the Southern Pacific Company, a corporation of the State of Kentucky, hereinafter called the "Southern Company," witnesseth: That

Whereas, The Central Company owns a line of railroad extending from Tehama, in Tehama County, California, to a connection with the line of railroad of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, at the boundary line between the States of Oregon and California; and

Whereas, the Central Company heretofore executed its certain first refunding mortgage to Central Trust Company of New York, as trustee, dated the 1st day of August, 1899, to secure the payment of bonds issued by the Central Company to the amount of one hundred million (100,000,000) dollars, and which bonds to the amount of ninety-nine million six hundred and ninety-eight 556 thousand (99,698,000) dollars are outstanding and unpaid, and did heretofore execute its three and one-half per cent mortgage to the United States Trust Company of New York, as trustee, dated the 1st day of August, 1899, to secure the payment of bonds issued by the Central Company to the amount of twenty-five million (25,000,000) dollars, and which bonds to the amount of thirteen million, one hundred and twenty-three thousand (13,123,000) dollars are now outstanding and unpaid; and

Whereas, the Southern Company did heretofore execute its certain four per cent. mortgage (Central Pacific stock collateral), to the Union Trust Company of New York, as trustee, dated the 1st day of August, 1899, to secure the payment of certain bonds, and did deposit with the said Union Trust Company of New York, as collateral under said mortgage, certain shares of the capital stock of the Central Company, then owned by the Southern Company, and the Southern Company did afterwards execute its certain supplemental mortgage (Central Pacific stock collateral), to the Union Trust Company of New York, as trustee, dated the 29th day of December, 1899, and did deposit with the said Union Trust Company of New York, as collateral under the said mortgages, certain shares of the 557 capital stock of the Central Company, then owned by the Southern Company, and it is provided in each of said mortgages that in case the stock of the Central Company, so pledged with the Union Trust Company of New York, shall be sold under provisions of said mortgages in reference to the sale of such pledged stocks, in consequence of a default of the Southern Company thereunder, any lease of the property of the Central Company shall terminate; and

Whereas the Pacific Company desires to lease the property of the Central Company hereinbefore described; and

Whereas the property now owned by the Central Company is operated by the Southern Company under lease;

Now, therefore, the parties hereto for themselves, their successors and assigns, have mutually agreed as follows:

First. The Central Company, in consideration of the premises and of the rents and covenants herein reserved and contained on the part of the Pacific Company to be paid and performed, does by these presents grant, demise, let, and lease unto the Pacific Company, its successors and assigns, all and singular the railroad and telegraph lines of the Central Company extending from Tehama, in Tehama County, California, to the connection with the line of railroad of the Oregon and California Railroad Company at the boundary line between the States of California and Oregon, the rights of way for said railroad and telegraph line, and all lands used for any and all purposes in connection with the working, maintenance, and operation of the same, and all easements and appurtenances, except equipment, belonging or in anywise appertaining thereto, and also all rights, powers, privileges, and franchises now owned or possessed by the Central Company in connection with said railroad and telegraph line, together with the rents, issues, and profits of all of said property hereby demised, and each and every part thereof.

To have and to hold the said railroad, telegraph line, appurtenances, rights, privileges, and franchises, together with the rents, issues, and profits thereof unto the said Pacific Company, its successors and assigns, for its and their own proper use and benefit for a term of nine hundred and ninety-nine years from and after the day of , 1913, subject, however, to termination upon the happening of the events herein stated. And the said Pacific Company during the said term shall have the sole and exclusive right, power, and authority to hold, occupy, use, enjoy, control, and manage, and operate the same, and to regulate, fix, vary, collect, demand, receive, and dispose of all the rates, tolls, revenues, and charges to accrue thereon or therefrom subject, however, to the lien of the mortgages hereinbefore referred to, it being intended hereby to place and put the said Pacific Company in the lieu and stead of the Central Company, and with all the rights of the Central Company in respect to said property, the said Pacific Company, its successors and assigns, yielding and paying therefor, to the Central Company, its successors and assigns, at the times and in the manner hereinafter provided, the yearly rents hereinafter speci and keeping and performing all and singular the covenants h inafter set forth to be kept and performed by the said Pa Company.

Second. The Central Company will pay principal and interest upon its bonds now outstanding and will indemnify, protect keep harmless the said Pacific Company, from any and all liabil damage, or expense on account of any indebtedness, liability, or o gation, heretofore or hereafter contracted or incurred by the Cen Company, and the Pacific Company may and shall deduct and re from any amounts becoming due and payable to the Cen 560 Company under the terms hereof such sums of money as it be obliged to pay for the protection of its rights under indenture by reason of the default of the Central Company in k ing or performing the covenants or agreements herein contained.

Third. The Pacific Company will make to the Central Compa at San Francisco, California, as the Central Company may design a payment of dollars ($) per annum, in two equal stallments on the first day of June and the first day of Decembe each year.

Fourth. The Pacific Company will operate said railways and purtenant property in such manner as to impose no liability upon Central Company, and will at all times during the existence of lease keep and preserve the said railway and appurtenances th unto belonging in good repair, ordinary wear and tear and destr tion by the elements excepted, and will make from time to time s repairs, replacements, and betterments as may be necessary, and preserve all the rights, privileges, and franchises connected with said railway and telegraph line, or any part thereof; and the Cen Company shall at all times during the continuance of this lease h a right to examine and inspect the property hereby demis 561 and the property shall at all times be open to the inspect of the president of the Central Company and such person persons as he may designate.

Fifth. The Pacific Company will pay and discharge all expen cost, damages, demands, or liens whatsoever which, without defa of the Central Company, now exist or shall hereafter arise dur the continuance of this lease upon the property hereby demised, will at all times during such period save and keep harmless and demnify the Central Company therefrom, and will defend all acti and suits which shall or may be brought against the Central Co pany during said period arising out of the operation of said r road and other properties, and will pay all taxes and assessme which may be lawfully levied and assessed for the year , all subsequent years during the said period, upon the said railroad or other property hereby demised, and upon the business or income of the same, and upon the Central Company in respect to the property hereby demised.

Sixth. Should the Pacific Company at any time or times hereafter during the existence of this lease fail to make any payment when due which it is obligated to make by this contract, or fail in any other respect to perform this agreement and such default continue for ninety days after notice in writing of intention to terminate this lease, given by the Central Company to the Pacific Company, then and in every such case it shall be lawful for the Central Company, its successors and assigns, at their option, to enter without process of law into and upon the said railroads and other property hereby demised and every part thereof, and to have and to hold all such property, together with all the additions and improvements which shall have been made to the same, and all right, title, and interest whatever of the Pacific Company in and to the said property shall thereupon wholly cease and terminate; but such reentry shall not waive or prejudice any claim or right of the Central Company to or for damages against the Pacific Company, or the Southern Company, on account of such nonpayment or on account of nonperformance or breach of the terms of this lease; provided, however, that nothing contained in this paragraph sixth shall require the Pacific Company to pay any tax, assessment, charge, or lien so long as the Pacific Company in good faith and by appropriate proceedings shall contest the validity thereof.

This lease shall also terminate, and all rights of the Pacific Company or the Southern Company herein shall terminate, and the Central Company shall be entitled to enter into possession of the property to the extent and with the effect as above provided in case the stocks pledged with the Union Trust Company of New York, as trustee, under the four per cent mortgage (Central Pacific stock collateral), dated the 1st day of August, 1899, and under the Southern Company's supplemental mortgage (Central Pacific stock collateral), dated the 29th day of December, 1899, as security for the Southern Company's four per cent gold bonds (Central Pacific stock collateral), shall be sold under the provisions of said mortgages, or either of them, in reference to the sale of such pledged stock in consequence of a default of the Southern Company under said mortgages.

Seventh. Whenever said railroad and other property can be conveyed by the Central Company free from the mortgage liens now existing thereon, the Pacific Company shall be entitled, for two years thereafter, to purchase, at its option, evidenced by a notice in writing given to the Central Company, the railroads and other property hereby demised, at and for the value of dollars, to be paid to the Central Company.

564 Eighth. If at any time a question shall arise touching the construction of this contract or concerning the observance or performance of any of its covenants or provisions, upon which question the parties can not agree, such question shall be submitted to the arbitrament of five persons. The party demanding such reference shall give to the other party notice of such demand stating specifically the question to be submitted for decision and nominating a person to act as one referee. If at the expiration of twenty days from the receipt of such notice the party receiving it has not notified the party demanding the reference of its nomination of a second referee, the party making the demand may make such selection. The first and second referees chosen shall select three disinterested persons familiar with business and experienced in railway management and affairs, and when the board is complete the referees shall fix a day and place for the hearing of which the parties shall be severally notified. If the first and second referees chosen shall be unable to agree upon the other referees or any of them, such referee or referees may be appointed upon ten days' notice upon motion of either party by the judge of any court of the United States within 565 the State of California, holding the senior commission, and in his absence by the judge holding the next oldest commission. After hearing the testimony and arguments which may be submitted by each party, the referees, or a majority of them, if they agree upon an award, shall state it in writing, which when delivered to both parties shall be binding and conclusive upon each, and each party hereby expressly agrees to be bound conclusively thereby.

The board of referees making any final award hereunder shall determine, in its discretion, by which of the parties the fees and expenses of the arbitration shall be paid, or shall apportion such fees and expenses between the parties, and such fees and expenses shall be forthwith paid by the party or parties liable therefor, in accordance with such adjudication of the referees.

Immediately after any award, each party will comply with and fully perform said award, and will make such payments and restitutions as may be in and by such award required of it to be made. If either party shall refuse to keep and perform any award, the adverse party may enforce the same by apt proceedings in any court of law or equity.

566 The books and papers of both parties, as far as they relate to any matter submitted to arbitration, shall be open to the examination of the arbitrators; and until the arbitrators shall make their award upon any question submitted to them, the business, settleents, and payments to be transacted and made under the terms of is agreement shall continue to be transacted and made in the man- r and form existing prior to the arising of such question.

Eighth. It is agreed that this lease and all rights thereunder may e assigned to the Southern Pacific Company; and the Southern acific Company hereby guarantees the performance of this contract y the Pacific Company, and executes this contract in pursuance of at obligation.

In witness whereof, the Central Pacific Company, the Southern acific Railroad Company, and the Southern Pacific Company have used this instrument to be executed under the corporate seals and nder the hands of their respective presidents and secretaries, or vice residents and assistant secretaries, the day and year above written.

Contract made the day of , A. D. 1913, between the Southern Pacific Company, hereinafter called the "Southern Company", a corporation of the State of Kentucky; Southern Pacific Railroad Company, hereinafter called the "Pacific Company", a corporation of the States of California, Arizona, and New Mexico; and the Central Pacific Railway Company, hereinafter called the "Central Company", a corporation of the State of Utah.

Whereas the Pacific Company owns a line of railroad in the State of California between Sacramento and Oakland via Benicia and Port Costa, together with terminal property at Sacramento and Oakland and intermediate points; and the Southern Company now operates the property of the Pacific Company, above mentioned, under an agreement of lease between the Pacific Company and the Southern Company; and the Southern Company and the Pacific Company have agreed to grant to the Central Company the use of said railroad and other property of the Pacific Company at the rental for the term and on the conditions hereinafter stated:

Now, therefore, in consideration of the premises and of the mutual dependent promises stated in this contract, the parties agree:

570 ARTICLE I.

SEC. 1. The Pacific Company and the Southern Company grant to the Central Company the equal joint possession and use, together with the Southern Company, of all that part of the railway and appurtenant property, owned neither by the Pacific Company or the Southern Company, including telegraph and telephone lines, from the connections with the Central Company's tracks in Sacramento, California, via Benicia and Port Costa, to connections with the Central Company's tracks in Oakland, California, including the ferries between Benicia and Port Costa, and ferry slips at Benicia and Port Costa, and any bridge, tube, or tunnel substituted for the ferry ween Benicia and Port Costa, and also all main tracks, spur and e tracks, depots, fences, stations, tanks, warehouses, freight houses, ndhouses, machine shops, and all other buildings, fixtures, im-rements, additions, and betterments, of whatever kind or de-iption now owned or held, or which may hereafter be owned or d for the use of said railways, telegraph and telephone lines, or connection with the working, maintenance, and operation of the same, and also all lands, tenements, hereditaments, ways, and rights of way now owned or held, or which may hereafter be owned, held, or possessed for said railways, telegraph and ephone lines, and for any and all purposes in connection with the struction, working, maintenance, and operation of the same, or or all of them, and all the easements, privileges, and appurtences of every kind and nature, except rolling stock and supplies reunto belonging or in anywise appertaining.

The Central Company, by its own employees and equipment, may and transact over, upon, and by means of such railway and urtenances, and all additions, improvements, and betterments reto, all such business as is or hereafter may be, carried on by rail-and common carrier, including mail and express, subject only the terms and conditions hereinafter stated

Sec. 2. The Southern Company will have the general control, man-ment, and administration of said railway and appurtenances, and maintain and at all times keep the same in good condition and air, and suitable for the business of all users of the property. It pay the taxes thereon, except taxes based on earnings, and comply with all the regulations prescribed by law with respect thereto. Assessments and property taxes shall be borne half and half by the Central Company and the Southern Company.
ch party will pay any assessments or taxes based on its gross earn-
s. The Southern Company will furnish water and other supplies, ident to the maintenance and operation of the property jointly
d. It shall not be bound to furnish any fuel or other supplies, ext water, for the trains or equipment of the Central Company, nor the special or exclusive use in any manner of the Central Comy, or the officers or employees thereof. The Southern Company ll have unrestricted power to change, add to, better, and repair property as it may deem advisable, including the right to pro-e such additional main and other tracks as it shall deem necesy, not, however, so as by such changes, additions, betterments, and airs, permanently to impair its usefulness to the Central Com-
y. If the Central Company shall, at any time, deem the conction of additional main track or tracks, or other tracks, necesy to the proper conduct of its business, and the Southern Company be unwilling to construct any such additional main or other track, then the Central Company shall have the right to submit the question of the reasonable necessity of such track or tracks, to arbitration as hereinafter provided. Should the Southern 573 Company change the character of its motive power, and use some form of power other than steam, and for the purpose of such change add to the leased property facilities of which the Central Company makes no use and obtains no benefit, or should the Central Company create its own roundhouses and oil tanks, or other fueling or coaling facilities, which it is given the right to do under reasonable conditions as to connections with the line, then the Central Company will not be required to pay any share of the interest charge or the expense of maintenance and operation of the said facilities created by the Southern Company, or to pay any share of the interest charge or expense of maintenance and operation of roundhouses and oil tanks, or other fueling or coaling facilities, created by the Southern Company subsequent to the date that the Central Company creates its own facilities, unless the Central Company should use such added facilities, in which case the Central Company will join in paying interest charge, and other expenses, on the basis hereinafter stated in this contract. In case the Central Company creates its own roundhouses and fueling or coaling facilities on the property of the Southern Company, the Southern Company shall have the 574 right to purchase them on reasonable notice at a fair price, for the benefit of all the users of the property, in which case all users of the property shall pay on the basis hereinafter stated their share of interest on cost and expense of maintenance and operation of the facilities so purchased. Should the Central Company desire to use the special facilities created for the purpose of change in motive power the Southern Company will permit the use of such facilities on the basis of a pro rata share of interest at five per cent per annum on their value, and of maintenance and operation cost based on use.

Should the Central Company change the nature of its motive power and use some form of power other than steam, then for the purpose of such change the Central Company, at its own expense, can add to the leased property the necessary facilities for such change of power, and shall be allowed to exclusively use the same; but the Southern Company shall have the right to purchase them on reasonable notice, at a fair price, for joint benefit, in which case the parties shall pay on the basis hereinafter stated their share of interest on cost and the expense of maintenance and operation of the facilities so purchased.

575 SEC. 3. The Southern Company will order and direct the movement of engines, cars, and trains under such reasonable rules and regulations customary among railways as it may adopt from time to time. All regulations and train schedules shall be equal, just, and fair, and shall not unjustly discriminate against either party. All passenger trains shall be given preference over other trains, and the trains of each of the parties shall be given equal despatch according to their class.

The Central Company shall have in every respect the same rights and privileges in the transaction of its business that the Southern Company has as to its business.

SEC. 4. All agents and employees engaged upon said railway by the Southern Company shall do the business of the Central Company without discrimination. Such agents and employees shall not solicit business or recommend the routing thereof, but in all respects shall act with entire impartiality between the parties using the property. All agents collecting or receiving money shall be, in so far as concerns the business and revenues of the Central Company, the agents and employees of that company, and shall report and remit to directly to it, and shall keep the Central Company's accounts and records and make such reports to the Central Company as to its business and settle with and account to the Central Company as often and as fully as may be required by it, and the Central Company may bond such agents or employees, or require them to furnish bond, and the Southern Company shall not be liable to the Central Company for their acts, neglects, or defaults. Any joint employee shall be removed from service on the property on the request in writing of the Central Company. Any employee engaged in the service of the Central Company upon or about trains, coal bunkers, oil tanks, or roundhouses shall be withdrawn from service on the property on request of the Southern Company in writing, giving reasonable grounds for such withdrawal.

SEC. 5. The Southern Company will maintain at all stations, other than Sacramento, facilities adequate and suitable for the business. Failing so to do, the Central Company may create its own station facilities under reasonable conditions as to connection with the leased premises. The Southern Company shall have the right to purchase at a fair price such facilities, when built on its property, in which case the facilities will be for joint use of the parties, and the price paid therefor added to the basis of rental like other improvements, betterments, and additions.

SEC. 6. Branch lines of either party shall be allowed to make connection with the railway at suitable and convenient points. Industry spurs are to be created when necessary, and the cost thereof shall be added as basis of rental, as herein provided in the case of improvements, betterments, and additions, and if any user of the property objects to the creation of any such spur it shall not be charged on account of the cost or maintenance thereof, and shall not use the same, but at any time it may elect to use the same and from that time on shall be charged rental for its proportion of the cost, including interest at five (5) per cent per annum to that date, and for the future maintenance thereof. If the Central Company deems the construction of side tracks (other than passing or yard tracks) necessary to the proper conduct of its business, the Central Company may request the Southern Company, in writing, to put in such tracks, and if the Southern Company shall fail to commence work thereon within a period of ninety (90) days and complete the same within a reasonable time thereafter, the Central Company may put such tracks in at its own cost and expense, including the expense of connections, 578 such connections to be made in such manner and at such points as the chief engineer of the Central Company may designate. The Central Company shall have the exclusive use of the tracks, and shall put in and maintain the same, but the Southern Company shall have the right to purchase them on reasonable notice and at a fair price, in which event the Central Company shall pay, on the basis herein stated, its share of interest on cost and the expense of maintenance and operation of the facilities so purchased.

SEC. 7. Whenever commercial or industry leases are desired by third parties upon any part of the property covered by this agreement, each of such leases shall be made upon agreement of the parties hereto. In case the Southern Company and the Central Company shall fail to agree as to the making of such lease, either of them shall be entitled to submit to arbitration as to the demand herein for the purpose of determining whether or not such commercial or industry lease may be granted without interfering with the use of the property for railroad purposes.

All sums received from third parties, other than railway companies, users of the joint property, derived from the use or 579 occupation of any part of the property covered by this agreement or for any building or improvement directed thereon shall be accounted for by the Southern Company in the monthly bills rendered for maintenance and operation.

ARTICLE II.

SEC. 8. The Central Company will pay for the rights and privileges herein granted the sum of two and one-half (2½%) per cent per annum on the value of the property covered by this agreement, in two equal instalments, on the first day of June and the first day of December in each year, and this rental will be increased by two and one-half (2½) per cent per annum upon the actual cost (which shall include transportation and insurance and a just sum to cover the cost of superintendence and management) to the Southern Company or the Pacific Company of all improvements, betterments, and additions to the property properly chargeable to capital account. The rentals herein agreed to be paid are based upon the use of the property by the Central Company and by the Southern Company as lessee of the Pacific Company, and if another railway company, or other railway companies, are admitted to run trains upon the said railway, or any part thereof, one-half of the rental payment of such tenant or tenants shall be credited to the Central Company.

580 SEC. 9. The Central Company will also pay such pro rata proportion of the cost actually incurred by the Southern Company in the maintenance and operation of the property (which shall include transportation and insurance, and a just sum to cover the cost of superintendence and management) as the number of miles on said railway, or any part thereof, run by the engines and cars in its trains bears to the whole number of miles run by engines and cars of all the parties using the same or any part thereof. Each engine and tender shall be counted as two cars. All movements of engines and cars shall be considered as trains within the meaning of this paragraph; but the switching of cars within actual yard limits, or the movement of work trains engaged in working upon the joint line, shall not be counted.

Transportation of supplies, materials, and other freights originating at competitive points off the joint property, and necessary for the maintenance or repair of the property or additions or betterments thereto, shall be routed between the Central Company and the Southern Company so that the service performed beyond Sacramento and Oakland may be equitably divided between the two companies, and as nearly equal as may be.

581 SEC. 10. The Central Company will make all payments to the Southern Company at the city of San Francisco. At the option of the Southern Company payments for the rental shall be made in gold coin of the present standard. Bills for the maintenance and operation of the line shall be rendered monthly by the Southern Company as soon as may be after the close of each month, and shall be paid within thirty (30) days thereafter. Payment of such bills shall not be delayed for errors which are not serious or important, but they shall be paid as rendered, notwithstanding any error of ordinary character likely to occur in railroad accounts, the necessary corrections to be made in subsequent bills.

SEC. 11. The books, records, vouchers, and papers of the Southern Company or the Pacific Company touching or material to the cost of improvements, betterments, or additions to the property, or touching or material to the cost of maintenance or operation, at all times shall be freely open to the examination of the Central Company.

SEC. 12. Should the Central Company fail to make any payment when due, which it is obligated to make by this contract, or 582 fail in any other respect to perform the agreement, and such default continue for six (6) months after notice in writing of intention to terminate the contract, given by the Southern Company to the Central Company, the Southern Company may at its election declare this agreement terminated, and may exclude the Central Company from all use of the property described herein: Provided, That failure to make any payment which is the subject for arbitration or litigation shall not be deemed cause of forfeiture hereunder.

ARTICLE III.

SEC. 13. The Southern Company shall be bound to use only reasonable and customary care, skill, and diligence in maintaining and repairing the roadway, tracks, structures, and appliances of and pertaining to the said railway and in managing and operating the same; and all employees of the Southern Company (except enginemen and trainmen) employed in maintaining, repairing, or operating the railway, or in dispatching, giving orders for or directing movement of trains, or in performing any other service for the common benefit of the railway companies using the property, shall for the purposes of the contract be regarded while engaged in such work as 583 joint employees of all the railway companies using the property. Enginemen and trainmen of any work train engaged in maintaining, repairing, or adding to the property shall likewise be deemed joint employees. The Central Company shall not, by reason of any defect in the property, or by reason of the failure or neglect of the Southern Company to repair such defect, or by reason of the failure or neglect of any joint employee as herein defined, make against the Southern Company any claim or demand for loss, damage, or injury arising from such defect, neglect, or failure; but should the Southern Company fail to repair any such defect within a reasonable time after being notified in writing so to do by the Central Company specifying the defect, then the Central Company may make the necessary repairs at once, which will be paid by the Southern Company and taken over in its bill for maintenance and operation.

Each railway company from time to time using the property will assume, bear, settle, and pay all loss, cost, damage, or injury which the property jointly used, its property or property in its custody or which its employees or passengers may suffer while it is running its engines, cars, or trains upon or over any part of the property no matter how such loss, damage, or injury may occur, pro-584 vided, however, that in case of collision between the engines cars, or trains of any of the parties from time to time using the property or in case of other accident caused by negligence of enginemen or trainmen or of other sole employees of either party, the party whose employee is at fault shall be responsible for and pay the entire loss caused thereby. If such collision or other accident is caused by fault of the train employees of two or more companies using the property or by the fault of a joint employee, each party involved shall bear an equal share of all damage to the property jointly used and all the damage to its own property or property in its custody, or which its employees or passengers may suffer in consequence thereof. Loss and damage caused by the negligence of joint employees not covered by some other provision of this contract shall be charged to operating expenses and divided as herein expressly provided.

Except as hereinbefore provided each railway company from time to time using the property will assume and pay all loss or damage which its engines, cars, or trains may do to third persons or to property of third persons, and each indemnifies the other against all claims and demands for any loss or damage which it herein agrees itself to bear.

585 If any injury shall occur to persons or property by the operation of trains in such a way that it cannot be determined what company's trains caused the injury, the compensation, if any is made to the injured party, shall be apportioned as other operating expenses under this contract.

Neither party shall under any circumstances have any cause of action against the other for loss or damage of any kind caused by or resulting from interruption or delay to its business.

In case a suit shall be commenced against any company using the property for damages for which another user is ultimately liable, the party sued may give notice to the other party of such suit and thereupon the company so notified shall assume the defense of the suit and save the company sued harmless.

The parties will settle as between themselves any claim for loss or damage according to the terms of this contract, notwithstanding any judgment or decree of a court or other tribunal in a proceeding brought by third parties.

SEC. 14. If any train of the Central Company shall be wrecked while running upon the tracks covered by this con-586 tract, the wreck shall be picked up at once and removed by the Southern Company, and the Central Company (except as herein otherwise provided) shall bear the whole cost of such service, including the rental of equipment.

SEC. 15. If at any time a question shall arise touching the construction of this contract, or concerning the business or manner of transacting the business to be carried on under its provisions, or concerning the observance or performance of any of its covena upon which question the parties can not agree, such question sh be submitted to the arbitrament of five persons. The party dema ing such reference shall give to the other party notice of such mand, stating specifically the question to be submitted for decis and nominating a person to act as one referee. If at the expirat of thirty days from the receipt of such notice the party receiving has not notified the party demanding the reference of its nominati of a second referee, the party making the demand may make s selection. The first and second referees chosen shall select three d interested persons familiar with business and experienced in railw management and affairs; and when the board is complete 587 shall fix a day and place for the hearing, of which the part shall be severally notified. If the first and second refer chosen shall be unable to agree upon the other referees, or any them, such referee or referees as to which they fail to agree shall appointed upon ten days' notice upon motion of either party by t judge of any court of the United States within the State of Calif nia holding the senior commission, and in his absence by the jud holding the next oldest commission. After hearing the testimo and arguments which may be submitted by each party, the refere or a majority of them, if they agree upon an award, shall state it writing, which, when delivered to both parties, shall be binding a conclusive upon each, and each party hereby expressly agrees to bound conclusively thereby.

The board of referees making any final award hereunder sh determine in its discretion, by which of the parties the fees and e penses of the arbitration shall be paid, or shall apportion such fe and expenses between the parties, and such fees and expenses shall forthwith paid by the party or parties liable therefor, in accordan with such adjudication of the referees.

Immediately after any award each party will make su 588 changes in the conduct of its business, or such payments restitution, as the case may be, as are in and by such awa required of it to be made. If either party shall refuse to keep a perform any award, the adverse party may enforce the same by s proceedings in any court of law or equity.

The books and papers of both parties as far as they relate to a matters submitted to arbitration shall be open to the examination the arbitrators; and until the arbitrators shall make their award upo any question submitted to them the business, settlements, and pa ments to be transacted and made under the terms of this agreeme shall continue to be transacted and made in the manner and for existing prior to the arising of such question.

SEC. 16. As long as any arrangement exists between the Southern Company and the Pacific Company whereby the Southern Company is legally entitled to have the possession, control, and management of the property herein described, the Southern Company and the Pacific Company shall be regarded for all purposes under this agreement, including arbitration, jointly as one company, represented by the Southern Company. Whenever and as soon as the Southern 589 Company is not entitled, as between itself and the Pacific Company, to the possession, control, and management of the property of the Pacific Company described herein, and the Pacific Company enters into the possession of its own property, and the control and management thereof, then the words "Southern Company", as used in secs. 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, and 7, in Article I herein, and in Article II, and in the preceding paragraphs of Article III hereof, shall be construed to mean the Pacific Company in connection with the property herein described then owned by the Pacific Company, and in its possession, and shall be construted to mean the Southern Company in connection with the property herein described, then owned by the Southern Company, and the payments to be made by the Central Company on account of rental and the expense of maintenance and operation shall be divided between the Pacific Company and the Southern Company, as evidenced by agreement in writing made between the Pacific Company and the Southern Company and delivered to the Central Company, and in case the Pacific Company and the Southern Company be unable to agree, then such payment so required to be made by the Central Company shall be divided by arbitration, as provided in this agreement, the Southern Com-
590 pany being regarded as one party and the Pacific Company as another party in such arbitration.

No additional companies shall be admitted to use the property except by the written consent of both the Pacific Company and the Central Company, but the rights of each party hereto shall be deemed appurtenant to and running with its railroad, and it may sell, assign, lease, or mortgage as an entirety the said rights in connection with and as a part of its railroads. Covenants and agreements herein contained shall apply to and bind the parties hereto, their successors, assigns, and lessees, and shall inure in favor of the successors, assigns, and lessees of the parties in whose benefit made.

SEC. 17. This contract shall take effect on the day of , 191 , and rental shall accrue from that date and shall continue from that time, whether the Central Company uses the property or not. It shall continue for a term of nine hundred and ninety-nine years from the time it goes into effect.

SEC. 18. Notices under this contract shall be in writing to the president, vice president, or secretary of the company to be notified.

591 In testimony whereof Southern Pacific Company, Southern Pacific Railroad Company, and Central Pacific Railway Company have caused this instrument to be executed under their respective corporate seals and under the hands of their respective presidents and secretaries or vice presidents and assistant secretaries the day and year above written.

COMPANIES REGISTRATION OFFICE,
SOMERSET HOUSE,
London, W. C., 18th August, 1914.

Central Pacific Railroad Shareholding Company, Limited.

SIR: I have to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 1st instant, enclosing money order for £2, and in compliance with your request I forward herewith copies and extracts from documents on the file of the above-named company, so far as they appear to furnish the information asked for.

The company was incorporated on the 8th of February, 1898, and was dissolved three months after the filing of the return of final winding-up meeting on the 26th of September, 1899.

Only one annual summary of share capital and shares and list of shareholders was filed, a copy of which is enclosed.

A money order for £1–12–5, the balance of your remittance after deducting poundage and postage and copy charges, is enclosed.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

P. THOMPSON, Registrar.

To EDWARD F. MCCLENNEN, Esq., 161 Devonshire Street, Boston, Massachusetts, U. S. A.

Memoranda.

The companies (consolidation) act, 1908.

1. A company (other than a "private" company or a company which has allotted any shares or debentures before the 1st July, 1908), which does not issue a prospectus on or with reference to its formation must not allot any of its shares or debentures unless before the first allotment of either shares or debentures there has been filed with the registrar of joint-stock companies a statement in lieu of prospectus, duly signed, in the form and containing the particulars set out in the second schedule to the act (s. 82).

2. Every company must, before carrying on business, file with the registrar a notice of the situation of its registered office and subsequently of any change therein (s. 62).

3. Every company (except companies registered in pursuance of licenses under s. 20) must file a copy of its register of directors or managers and notify from time to time any change that takes place therein (s. 75).

4. Every company limited by shares must hold its statutory meeting within a period of not less than one month nor more than three months from the date at which it is entitled to commence business. A copy of the statutory report, which must be sent every member at least seven days before the meeting, must be filed with the registrar immediately after it has been sent to the members; but these provisions, so far as regards the forwarding and filing of the statutory report, do not apply in the case of a "private" company (s. 65).

5. Whenever a company limited by shares makes any allotment of shares, it must within a month thereafter file a return of such allotments in the prescribed form (s. 88).

6. Every company must hold a general meeting once at least i every calendar year, and not more than fifteen months after th holding of the last preceding general meeting, and if not so held the company and every director, manager, secretary, and other of cer of the company who is knowingly a party to the default is liabl to a fine not exceeding £50 (s. 64).

7. Every company having a share capital must file annually a sum mary of its capital, together with a list of its members and director in the prescribed form, such summary to be made up to the 14th day after the first ordinary general meeting in each year and regis tered within seven days after such 14th day (s. 26).

596 8. Every mortgage or charge (as defined by s. 93 (1)) created by a company and requiring registration, will, so fa as any security on the company's property or undertaking is thereb conferred, be void against the liquidator and any creditor of the com pany unless the prescribed particulars are registered with the regis trar within twenty-one days after the date of the creation of th mortgage or charge.

9. A copy of every prospectus duly dated and signed must be file on or before the date of its publication (s. 80).

10. A copy of every special and extraordinary resolution passed b a company must be printed and forwarded to the registrar within fifteen days from the date of the confirmation of the special resolu tion or from the passing of the extraordinary resolution (s. 70).

11. Under the provisions of the "public offices fees act, 1879", a applied to the companies registration office by notices in the Londo Gazette, the lords of His Majesty's treasury require all fees payabl in that office, or to the offices thereof, to be collected by means o stamps.

597 12. Documents tendered for registration must be according to the approved forms and bear an impressed companies regis tration fee stamp of 5s., except in the cases of notices of increase o capital or members, and registration of mortgages where ad valore stamps to the amount of the authorized fees must be impressed.

13. Stamped forms for the various notices, returns, &c., under th act may be obtained at the companies registration office, Somers House. The charge is 5s. 2d. for each stamped form when ad valore fees are not payable, except in the case of the statement in lieu o prospectus, and of the annual return (paragraph 7) which are 5s. 2 each. Unstamped continuation forms for lists of members are al at one penny per form.

14. Office copies are charged for at the rate of 4d. per folio of 7 words. Copies of satisfactions of registered mortgages and charg are 5s. each. Certificates of incorporation and of registration o mortgages and charges, after the first, are 5s. each. The inspecti

[Extract from printed record "United States v. The Union Pacific Railroad Company et al", Volume VII, Complainant, pages 3321–3325.]

This agreement between the Trans-Continental Association, an association consisting of the following railroad companies, namely:

The Southern Pacific Company;
The Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad Company;
The Atlantic & Pacific Railroad Company;
The California Central Railway Company;
The California Southern Railroad Company;
The Burlington & Missouri River Railroad Company;
The Denver & Rio Grande Railway Company;
The Denver & Rio Grande Western Railway Company;
The Northern Pacific Railroad Company;
The Oregon Railway & Navigation Company;
The Missouri Pacific Railway Company;
The Texas & Pacific Railway Company;
The Oregon Short Line Railway Company;
The Union Pacific Railway Company;
The St. Louis & San Francisco Railroad Company;
624 The Chicago, Kansas & Nebraska Railway; Denver, Texas & Fort Worth Railroad; and The St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba Railway Co.,

which association is now represented by James Smith, its chairman, party of the first part, and the Pacific Mail Steamship Co., a corporation created by and existing under the laws of the State of New York, party of the second part, made and entered into this first day of October, 1889.

Witnesseth, First. That the said party of the first part, in consideration of the undertakings and agreements of the said Steamship Company, hereinafter contained, undertakes, promises, and agrees to and with said Steamship Company, to guarantee, and does hereby guarantee that the gross earnings upon through freight and passengers between New York and San Francisco, to be provided to said Steamship Company by said party of the first part, shall be seventy-five thousand ($75,000) dollars per month. All the gross earnings of said steamers from through business between New York and San Francisco each way shall go to and belong and be payable to said party of the first part or credited upon its said guarantee to said Steamship Company.

625 Second. In consideration of said guaranty, of said party of the first part, the said Pacific Mail S. S. Co. covenants, promises, and agrees to and with the said party of the first part that it, the said Steamship Company, will, at its own cost and expense, dispatch and run from the port of New York for Aspinwall, not more than three nor less than two through steamers per month, and not more than three nor less than two steamers connecting therewith from Panama to San Francisco, and from the port of San Francisco for Panama not more than three nor less than two through steamers per month, and not more than three nor less than two steamers connecting therewith from Aspinwall to New York, and that said Steamship Company will permit said party of the first part to fix the rates at which all through freight between New York and San Francisco and all passengers shall be transported by the vessels of the Steamship Company from the Port of New York to the Port of San Francisco and from the Port of San Francisco to the Port of New York, and will furnish room on each of said steamers from New York and San Francisco, respectively, and their connecting steamers for the transportation of, and will transport from New York to San Francisco and from San Francisco to 626 New York all and only such passengers and such freight as may be obtained under rates fixed by said party of the first part to an amount as to freight not exceeding six hundred tons of two thousand pounds each in case it runs two steamers per month, and four hundred tons in case it runs three steamers per month upon any one steamer. It being understood that the deficiency or excess of said six hundred tons or said four hundred tons, respectively, of cargo upon any one steamer may be added to or taken from, as the case may be, the cargo of any other vessel sailing in same direction within the same calendar month, the intent being that the Steamship Company shall carry monthly an average of six hundred tons p vessel, in case two steamers per month are run, or a monthly avera of four hundred tons per vessel, in case three steamers per mon are run.

All above steamers to be first class and equal to those now mai tained, and in case of the loss of a steamer, or its withdrawal f any cause, the Pacific Mail S. S. Co. shall as soon as possible fu nish a steamer of equal capacity and rating. In the event of failu on the part of said steamship company to furnish proper and ad quate facilities for the transportation of at least one thousand t hundred tons of freight each way per month at the rate of 627 least four hundred tons per vessel—then the guaranty herei provided for shall be reduced pro rata.

The Steamship Company is to bear and pay all the expenses an charges of every kind of transporting such goods passengers an freight from New York to San Francisco and from San Francis to New York, including all charges and expenses of every kind i the ports of New York and San Francisco, and all supplies of pa sengers with food and sleeping accommodation, giving them prope accommodation according to class, and to continue to use all effort to obtain first-class and other passengers as heretofore.

Third. The understanding and intention of this agreement is tha the party of the first part shall, through agents appointed by itself have entire and exclusive control of all the through business of th said steamship company between New York and San Francisco eac way, and that no through freight or passengers shall be taken exce at prices to be fixed by the party of the first part and by its consent it being understood that said control shall be exercised through th established agencies of said steamship company. If the said steam ship company shall have room or capacity for more than si 628 hundred tons, in the event of its running two steamers pe month each way, or for more than four hundred tons, in th event of its running three steamers per month each way of through freight on any steamer and the party of the first part shall desir to fill it, the said party of the first part shall be at liberty to do s at rates fixed jointly by duly authorized representatives of the parties hereto, the party of the first part to have one half of the freights on such excess and the Steamship Company the other half.

Fourth. The Pacific Mail S. S. Co. shall render to the party of the first part an account or statement of the transactions for through business of each month on or before the tenth day of the succeeding month, showing the amount claimed to be due from the party of the first part under this agreement, and on or before the thirteenth day of the succeeding month the chairman of the party of the first part shall draw his draft in favor of the Pacific Mail S. S. Co. upon each of the railroad companies constituting the party of the first part for the portion payable by it to said steamship company on account of the aggregate amount payable by the party of the first part to the said steamship company according to the fore-629 going provisions hereof. The portions of such aggegrate amount payable from time to time by the respective companies forming the party of the first part shall be such as has been or may be fixed or prescribed among themselves, and each of the said companies forming the party of the first part shall be liable for its own portion of such aggregate amount, but none of such companies shall be liable for the portion payable by the others or any other of such companies.

Provided, nevertheless, that in the event of default in payment by any one or more of the companies constituting the party of the first part of its proportion herein provided for, it shall be optional with the party of the second part to terminate this agreement on giving ten days' notice to the party of the first part through its chairman.

The party of the first part, or any other companies constituting the same, may at any time, on demand, examine the books and accounts of the said Steamship Company for the purpose of obtaining full details as to freight and passengers transported by said Steamship Company under this agreement and verifying the accounts and statements of the Steamship Company.

Fifth. It is mutually understood and agreed that this con-630 tract shall be deemed to have commenced on the first day of October, 1889, and to include the earnings from through business on steamers sailing on and after that date, and as to each and all of the foregoing provisions shall continue in force thereafter until ninety days after written notice of the intention to terminate the same shall have been given by either party to the other, with this exception, that if the exclusive contract between the said Steamship Company and the Panama R. R. Co., so far as it refers to the business of the Steamship Company between San Francisco and New York, is broken or changed in any respect, or if any other competing line by rail or vessel shall be established between the waters of the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans, either overland or via the Isthmus of Panama, that shall affect the through business, concerning which this agreement is made, then the said party of the first part may abrogate and terminate this agreement at any time or not as it may elect.

Sixth. In regard to freight and passengers received by the steamship company at San Francisco for transportation to Europe via Panama, it is understood that the class of business to be taken and the rates to be charged thereon shall be the subject of conference and mutual agreement between the San Francisco agency of 631 the Pacific Mail S. S. Co. and the San Francisco general agent of the party of the first part to the end that the interests of both parties may be fully protected.

In witness whereof the party of the first part has subscribed its name hereto by its chairman and the said steamship company has caused its corporate seal to be hereto annexed, attested by its secretary, and its name to be signed hereto by its president the day and year first above written.

632 PETITIONER'S EXHIBIT NO. 25, SEPTEMBER 22, 1914.

"THE PANAMA ROUTE."

(Original.)

Contract between the Panama Railroad Company and the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, dated December 16, 1895.

633 This agreement, made this sixteenth day of December, in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety-five, between the Panama Railroad Company, duly chartered and organized under the laws of the State of New York, and hereinafter called the Railroad Company, party of the first part, and the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, also duly chartered and organized under the laws of said State, and hereinafter called the Steamship Company, party of the second part, witnesseth:

Whereas the said Railroad Company is now operating its railroad across the Isthmus of Panama, and running a line of steamers from New York to Colon on the Atlantic Ocean; and

Whereas the said Steamship Company is now running a regular line of steamers on the Pacific Ocean between San Francisco and Panama and intermediate ports on the Central American and Mexican coast; and

Whereas both companies are interested in and desirous of hereby establishing conditions under which they may carry on regularly and without interruption the business of transportation between

San Francisco and New York and the said intermediate ports, with the intent hereby declared by both companies to elop to the fullest possible extent the traffic via the Isthmus of nama, and to prevent the diversion of the legitimate business of Isthmus to other routes.

Now, therefore, in consideration of these premises, and with the ention of so securing to both of the parties hereto the advantages a contract of the general character above set forth for a term of rs, and in consideration of the sum of one dollar by each of the ties hereto to the other paid before the delivery hereof, it is tually covenanted and agreed by and between the respective ties hereto, and their respective successors, assigns, and legal resentatives, as follows, that is to say:

ARTICLE I.

In consideration of the execution of this contract by the Railroad mpany, and in consideration of the sum of one dollar to each in id paid by the other, the receipt of which is hereby acknowledged, is mutually agreed between the parties hereto that the certain reement between them, dated October 1, 1872, which is the subject of a certain suit in equity pending in the Supreme Court of the State of New York, and all rights, privileges, covenants, and interests under said agreement and under any other con-cts between the parties hereto prior to the date of these presents, ll be and are hereby terminated, canceled, and brought to an end the 16th day of December, 1898, subject only to the subsequent forcement of any claims which may arise under said agreement contracts between the date of this contract and the said sixteenth of December, 1898, which claims, if any, are to be enforceable well after as before said last mentioned date; it is the explicit d unqualified understanding and agreement of the parties hereto t the said agreement of October 1, 1872, shall so terminate (sub-t as aforesaid), irrespective of any other provisions of this agree-nt or the fulfillment or nonfulfillment of this agreement by the ilroad Company, and that the Railroad Company only enters into s agreement in consideration of the express and unqualified provi-ns of this article, which are not made dependent upon any other vision of this agreement; and provided that, until said sixteenth of December, 1898, the parties hereto shall be governed, so far as said contract of October 1, 1872, is concerned, by the de-cision of the general term of the Supreme Court of the State of New York, entered in respect of said contract on the fif-nth day of March, 1895, and that until said sixteenth day of cember, 1898, the rights and interests of the said parties under said agreement of October 1, 1872, shall be as defined by said general term, and not as defined by any previous order or judgment of said court.

And it is for like consideration mutually agreed that on the sixteenth day of December, 1898 (subject only to the subsequent continuance and final determination of proceedings, if any such there should be, instituted before said sixteenth day of December, 1898, for the breach or violation of such judgments or injunctions between the date of this agreement and said sixteenth day of December, 1898), the said judgment of the said general term of the Supreme Court and all and any judgments in said action shall be vacated and said action dismissed, and all injunctions, orders, and directions thereunder vacated, and all bonds and undertakings therein discharged and released; and the appeals to the Court of Appeals vacated, all without costs to either party as against the other.

Simultaneously with the execution of this agreement, the 637 Railroad Company and the Steamship Company have exchanged stipulations postponing until December 16th, 1898, the argument of the appeals taken to the Court of Appeals by each of said companies from the said judgments of the Supreme Court at general term, and then withdrawing and dismissing said appeals without costs to either party as against the other, and the Steamship Company has caused to be executed by its attorneys and delivered to the Railroad Company stipulations in accordance with the preceding paragraph of this article of this agreement.

It is further mutually agreed for like consideration that each party hereby releases the other from any and all claims, demands, losses, damages, and causes of action (not heretofore reduced to judgment) arising prior to the date of these presents, which either has, or may have, for, upon, or by reason of the making of said agreement of October 1, 1872, or any alleged violation thereof by either party thereto.

ARTICLE II.

The Railroad Company hereby concedes to the Steamship Company (so far as its charter and its contract with the Colombian Government permit) the exclusive privilege of through billing at 638 any and all ports on the Pacific Ocean north of Panama, under and during the life of this contract as hereinafter provided, in connection with the Railroad Company, and each and every one of its Atlantic connecting lines.

And the Railroad Company agrees (within the scope of its powers as above defined, and as far as it consistently can with its own safety and protection and its duties as a common carrier) to coerate with the Steamship Company in making such rates, and in erally taking such measures as will afford to the Steamship Com- ny protection against interference or competition by other steam- p lines with the traffic hereby conceded to the Steamship Com- ny north of Panama.

ARTICLE III.

ECTION "A." There shall be maintained by the Steamship Com- ny a through line of steamers each way between Panama and n Francisco and such intermediate ports at which the Steamship mpany now calls, as well as any other intermediate ports whose ffic shall develop sufficiently to warrant making them ports of l; the Steamship Company shall, subject to the perils of the seas, make at least three trips each way per month between Panama and San Francisco, and the steamers shall be those now run- ning on the Steamship Company's line between said ports, or ers of approximately equal capacity and speed. In case any of steamers engaged in the above service be lost or destroyed, the amship Company agrees to promptly replace such lost or dis- ed vessel or vessels by another or others of approximately equal acity and speed, so far as necessary to maintain the service as ve prescribed, namely, a through line of steamers between Pan- a and San Francisco and the intermediate ports as aforesaid, and three trips each way per month as aforesaid, by said present amers or others of approximately equal capacity and speed.

ECTION "B." The Railroad Company shall maintain a line of amers each way between New York and Colon, and it shall, sub- t to the perils of the sea, make at least three trips each way per nth between New York and Colon, and the steamers shall be ee now running on the Railroad Company's Colombian Line ween said ports, or others of approximately equal capacity and ed. In case any of the steamers engaged in the above service be t or destroyed, the Railroad Company agrees to promptly replace such lost or disabled vessel or vessels by another or others of approximately equal capacity and speed, so far as necessary to maintain the service as above prescribed, namely, a through e of steamers between New York and Colon, as aforesaid, and the ee trips each way per month, as aforesaid, by said present steam- or others of approximately equal capacity and speed.

ECTION "C." These two steamship lines, connecting, respectively, Panama and Colon with the Panama Railroad, shall constitute, h said railroad, what shall be hereafter called the "Panama ute" between New York and San Francisco.

ARTICLE IV.

The gross earnings of the Panama Route on all freight busine including specie or treasure, between New York and San Francis carried over the Isthmus by the said Panama Route, shall be divide as follows:

Fifty-five (55) per cent to the Railroad Company for the servi at and between New York and Panama, and Forty-five (45) per cent to the Steamship Company for its servi between Panama and San Francisco.

The earnings of said "Panama Route" from passenger 641 carried between New York and San Francisco shall be divide equally between the two companies—fifty (50) per cent goin to each.

ARTICLE V.

All freight rates on the westbound through traffic of the "Panam Route", i. e., traffic from New York to San Francisco, shall be mad by the Railroad Company, and all freight rates on the eastboun through traffic of said "Panama Route", i. e., traffic from San Fra cisco to New York, shall be made by the Steamship Company.

Changes in the passenger rates at present in force on this rou are to be made only by mutual consent.

This article and the preceding article cover business and traf between San Francisco and New York by the Panama Route, whethe originating at or destined to San Francisco or New York or othe points whatsoever.

ARTICLE VI.

The intention and purpose of this agreement being to obtain fo the said "Panama Route" all the freight business that can b secured at reasonable and remunerative rates and with a vie 642 of carrying out this purpose, it is agreed that either party t this agreement shall, at the request of the other party thereto publish and make operative such through rates between New Yor and San Francisco as will compete with those made operative b the competing transcontinental railroad lines; a failure to compl with such request promptly, and at most within twenty days fro the date of its receipt, shall constitute a violation of this contra and subject the offending party to the provisions of Article XI treating of liability or damages incurred by such action.

The Railroad Company, however, hereby agrees that whenev under this provision it puts in operation on westbound traffic or cal upon the Steamship Company to put into operation on eastboun traffic between San Francisco and New York a through rate of $ less per ton, then the Steamship Company is to be allowed $3.60 r ton out of said rate—in lieu of the 45 per cent as stipulated by ticle IV—upon all merchandise thus carried at less than $8 per ; but the Steamship Company is to be subject in respect thereto the lighterage charge of one dollar per ton in Subdivision X eof referred to.

ARTICLE VII.

If during the pendency of this contract occasion arises for the ilroad Company to enter into negotiations with the transconti- tal lines, or any of them, for the making of a rental agreement, of any other similar agreement relating to the freight traffic be- en the United States ports on the Atlantic and the United States ts on the Pacific, or for joining any association of the so-called nscontinental lines, it is hereby agreed that a delegate designated the Railroad Company is to represent the "Panama Route" in such negotiations, or any such association.

The revenue derived from any such agreement or contract with transcontinental lines as is here contemplated to be apportioned follows, to wit:

To the Railroad Company, fifty-five (55) per cent of the total enue, and

To the Steamship Company, forty-five (45) per cent of such enue.

The outlays incurred in the establishment and completion of such eement, which the Railroad Company is hereby empowered to incur, subject to due accounting, are to be apportioned between and borne by the Railroad Company and the Steamship Com- pany in the like proportions, viz., the Railroad Company 55 cent thereof and the Steamship Company 45 per cent thereof.

ARTICLE VIII.

The receipts of the joint traffic of the parties hereto between New rk and the Pacific ports of Central America and Mexico, and versa, shall be divided thus:

The Steamship Company to receive for its share of the service on Pacific coast forty (40) per cent of the through rates on freight l fifty (50) per cent of the passenger fares.

The Railroad Company to receive for its share of the service be- en Panama and New York sixty (60) per cent of the through s on freight and fifty (50) per cent of the passenger fares.

In this route, viz., between New York and Central American and xican ports, and vice versa, changes in the rates now in force, both for passengers and freight, shall be made only by mutual consent of the parties hereto.

ARTICLE IX.

During the term of this contract the Railroad Company shall not, directly or indirectly, run any steamers on the Pacific
645 north of Panama, and shall, in so far as its charter and its contract with the Colombian Government may permit, and so far as it can consistently with its own safety and protection under existing treaty stipulations, in every manner lawfully and reasonably within its power, promote and protect the interests of the Steamship Company and the lines of steamships run by it north of Panama in connection with said railroad, and especially against all forms of competition whatsoever, and will, so far as it is practicable, give, turn over to, and direct to the steam lines of the Steamship Company, to the extent that it can lawfully control or influence the same, all business destined to Pacific points north of Panama originating on the Isthmus of Panama and carried upon its railroad, or which may be brought to said Isthmus by other ships or lines, and especially will not, so long as the Steamship Company faithfully performs the stipulations of this agreement, become interested in or divide with any other person or corporation the gross earnings of a through line or of any through business between New York and San Francisco, and upon all such through business the full local tariff rates for the time being in force for transportation across 646 the Isthmus of Panama shall be charged to all competing lines engaged in business between New York and San Francisco.

The Railroad Company is to have the right to appoint and maintain at its own expense agents at Panama and San Francisco.

Further, the parties hereto, each for itself, agree that all freight, passengers, baggage, specie, and mail matter confided to either for transportation, or in any manner brought by the one party to the other for the purpose of being conveyed over and upon the whole or any part of said lines, shall be transported and carried promptly and without undue delay.

During the pendency of this present contract the Steamship Company binds itself not to compete directly or indirectly with the Railroad Company's Columbian line in Atlantic waters, and especially not to run vessels directly or indirectly from the United States ports on the eastern shore of the continent to Colon, or to the eastern terminal of any of the transcontinental routes.

The Steamship Company agrees during the pendency of this contract in every manner lawfully and reasonably within its 647 power to promote and protect the interests of the Railroad Company, and especially against all forms of competition whatsoever; the Steamship Company further agrees during the pendency of this contract not to divert the traffic to and from any of the Pacific ports North of Panama from the Isthmus route. And for such business the Steamship Company shall not enter into contracts of any kind involving through billing with any person, party, or corporation other than the Panama Railroad Company, nor shall the Steamship Company compete directly or indirectly (by reduced rates or otherwise) with the "Panama Route" on said business.

During the pendency of this contract, the Steamship Company when taking merchandise on its vessels for shipment at any Pacific Coast port situated between San Francisco and Panama (and whether such merchandise be destined to Atlantic or Gulf ports of the United States, or to European points) shall issue its through bills on such merchandise only via the Isthmus of Panama, and it shall not issue such through bills at any of those Pacific ports for any of the above described destinations via San Francisco, or via any other terminal of a transcontinental route.

848 ARTICLE X.

The Railroad Company shall, during the pendency of this agreement and until the extension of the road to deep water, continue to employ its lighters to connect with the Steamship Company's vessels and the shore at Panama. The Railroad Company shall furnish lighters in sufficient numbers to load and unload the ships with dispatch, it being the intent and agreement of the parties hereto that all the lighterage of the Steamship Company at Panama shall be done by the Railroad Company. And for such lighterage the Steamship Company shall pay to the Railroad Company as follows:

$1 in United States currency for each ton of freight or mail matter coming from New York and going to San Francisco, or vice versa, by the Panama route, whether originating at or destined to New York or San Francisco or other points.

$1.25 per ton in United States currency for all other freight or mail matter.

1/40 of one per cent for all specie or treasure.

$1 in United States currency for each passenger.

849 It is further agreed that should, during the pendency of this contract, the railroad at Panama be so extended or located as to reach deep water or the islands in the bay, thereby rendering lighterage no longer necessary, the Steamship Company will pay to the Railroad Company, in lieu of lighterage charges as provided above, such wharfage dues as the Railroad Company may fix; but such dues shall not exceed $1 United States currency per ton for freight or mail matter, 1/40 of one per cent for all specie or treasure and $1 in United States currency for each passenger; nor shall such wharfage dues exceed those paid for the time being by any other steamship lines for similar service, nor shall any other steamship lines using such increased facilities at Panama be in any wise favored over or in preference to said Steamship Company.

ARTICLE XI.

During the continuance of the present agreement the Railroad Company shall have, free of cost, the use of the Steamship Company's wharf at Colon and of any and all of its appurtenances and dependencies for receiving and discharging cargo. The Railroad Company, until the expiration of the present agreement, agrees to keep this wharf and all its appurtenances and dependencies at Colon in 650 as good condition as when turned over to said Railroad Company under this stipulation.

It is agreed further that the above wharf at Colon is to be turned over to the Railroad Company in proper and efficient condition satisfactory to both parties concerned herein, and is thereafter to be maintained in the condition as agreed above by the Railroad Company.

ARTICLE XII.

The Railroad Company agrees to transport coal and other supplies exclusively for the use of the Steamship Company's steamers on the Pacific, from Colon to Panama, at $3 per ton, and to lighter same at Panama at $1 per ton additional.

It is agreed that the above rates shall apply only to a quantity of coal and supplies not exceeding 25,000 tons during one year, from the 16th of December of one year to the 16th of December of the year following, and that on any excess over said quantity of 25,000 tons the regular tariff rates may be demanded by the Railroad Company.

Unless the Railroad Company's consent in writing be previ-
651 ously obtained, no larger quantity than 4,000 tons of coal is to be transported in any one calendar month, and the Steamship Company agrees not to store along the tracks of the railroad at Panama at any one time a quantity of coal greater than 15,000 tons.

The Railroad Company agrees to transport by each steamer from New York to Colon supplies exclusively for the use of the Steamship Company at the rate of $5 per ton.

ARTICLE XIII.

The Railroad Company will do at its shops in Panama and Colon such work and repairs for the Steamship Company as the Steamship Company from time to time may request and as the Railroad Company can perform without interference with its own business, charging therefor the cost of labor and material on the Isthmus, with ten per cent added thereto.

ARTICLE XIV.

The Railroad Company will furnish to the Steamship Company, in connection with its business, free of all charge, the use of all telegraphic facilities owned or to be owned or controlled by the Railroad Company on the Isthmus, it being agreed that its 632 own use of such telegraph shall, for the management of its road, take precedence of all other business.

ARTICLE XV.

The officers and employees of the Steamship Company shall be carried between Panama and Colon free, and between New York and Panama or Colon at the rate of ten dollars for each passenger. The officers and employees of the Railroad Company shall be carried between Panama and San Francisco at the rate of twenty dollars for each passenger.

ARTICLE XVI.

All damages caused by loss of goods or injury thereto or delay in their transportation or loss of or injuries or delay to passengers shall be paid by the party on whose lines the loss or damage or delay occurred when the same can be located. If the same cannot be located, the Railroad Company and the Steamship Company shall contribute thereto in proportion to the distribution herein established between the Railroad Company and the Steamship Company of the freight on the property or passage money of the passenger concerned.

633 ARTICLE XVII.

The carriage or transportation of salt, coal, and grain (except barley in bags between United States points) is hereby exempted from the operation of this contract, and each of the contracting parties reserves its full liberty as to the carriage or transportation of these articles.

ARTICLE XVIII.

If during the pendency of this contract the Panama Railroad Company shall determine to provide elevators and other plant necessary for the handling and transportation of grain across the Isthmus in bulk, the Steamship Company is to be invited to join in the forming of a transportation route for such grain between San Francisco and other North Pacific ports and Europe. Should the Steamship Company not avail itself of this offer and elect not to engage in this business, or in case it is found that the Steamship Company's tonnage is inadequate to meet the necessities of this grain traffic, then the Panama Railroad Company shall be at liberty to contract with any other corporation or parties for the carriage of such grain by steam or sailing vessels from San Diego and other Pacific ports north of said port to Panama.

654 And the Panama Railroad Company shall be further authorized to deliver to said vessels engaged in this grain trade return cargo at Panama under the following conditions and limitations: Such cargo is to be obtained outside of the United States, and is to consist only of coarse and rough goods carried at low through rates in competition with the Cape Horn or Magellan route. The articles contemplated by the present clause are: Cement, brick, tiles, and other rough building material, rough castings, tin plate, as well as other articles as may be added after full consultation and with the assent of the Steamship Company, and it is hereby declared the intention of both parties that freight carried under this clause shall be such as could in no case go over the Isthmus route at remunerative rates through the regular channels. And that under this clause there shall not be lodged or exercised any power to compete with or to diminish the regular traffic of the Isthmus route in any way whatever, but that its full scope shall be solely to divert heavy and coarse goods such as are usually carried at low freight rates by sailing vessels around Cape Horn.

And it is hereby expressly provided and agreed that the 655 steamers engaged in this grain trade in connection with the Panama Railroad are not to call or trade at any of the intermediate ports between Panama and San Diego, and the Panama Railroad binds itself to insert a provision to that effect in any charters or contracts that it may make with owners of vessels or with other parties for the carrying on of such grain trade.

ARTICLE XIX.

It is mutually agreed that the term "ton", as used in this agreement, shall mean two thousand two hundred and forty (2,240) pounds avdp., or forty (40) cubic feet measurement when so taken by the ships, unless otherwise expressly provided herein.

ARTICLE XX.

Any and all questions that shall or may arise touching this agreement or the construction thereof, or as to any other matters and things to be done or performed by either of the parties hereto, as to hich the parties hereto can not agree, shall be submitted to the deision and award of three arbitrators, who shall be disinterested ersons, having experience in railway and steamship management, nd who shall be chosen, one by each of the parties hereto, and the third by the two so chosen. At any time after the giving 56 of notice of violation, as herein prescribed, either party may name an arbitrator and give written notice thereof to the ther party; and if either party shall fail or omit to name an arbirator within fifteen days after written notice of the selection of an rbitrator by the other (which arbitrator, however, shall not be lected until after the expiration of thirty days' notice next herein eferred to), the arbitrator named by the party giving such notice hall name an arbitrator for and on behalf of the party so failing r omitting, who shall have the same power and authority as though e had been chosen and named by such party, and the decision and ward of any two of such arbitrators in respect of the matters so bmitted to them shall be binding and conclusive upon the parties;

nd each of the parties hereto does bind itself and its successors ithfully to abide by and carry out any award so made by any two the arbitrators appointed as above.

The Railroad Company, if it shall consider that any of the above auses have been, as to the spirit or letter, violated by the Steamship ompany, or the Steamship Company, if it shall consider that any of the above clauses have been, as to the spirit or letter, vio-7 lated by the Railroad Company, may notify the other party to this agreement that it charges such other party with a vio-ion thereof, specifying the particular charge or charges of viola-n thereof so made. The company charged with said violation, case within thirty days after its receipt of such notice it denies h alleged violation thereof, hereby agrees to have the question s raised decided by the arbitrators as herein provided. These itrators shall determine, first, as to the actual fact of the alleged lation, and, secondly, upon the actual amount of money damages be paid by the party found guilty of said violation to the party king the charge, or the particular thing to be done or to be reined from being done by such guilty party; and such amount ll be paid or such award shall be complied with within ten days the rendering of such award. The two parties both agree to nish to the arbitrators any paper, instrument, or book in their session which said arbitrators may request them to produce.
uld any arbitration fail for any cause, then such proceedings as ve prescribed may be taken de novo by either party to this eement.

ARTICLE XXI.

The Steamship Company shall make over and deliver to the Railroad Company, charter parties of even date with the present 658 instrument, at the nominal rate of one dollar per month, and unconditional in terms of the following steamers belonging to said company and now running or to be run between Panama and San Francisco under this contract, to wit, the Acapulco, the San Jose, the City of Sydney, the Colon, the San Blas, and the San Juan, and agrees to likewise make over and deliver to the Railroad Company like charters of any other steamers placed upon said service under the provisions of section "A" of Article III of this contract simultaneously with the placing of the same upon said service.

It is hereby further agreed that as long as the Steamship Company performs punctually and regularly three trips per month in each direction under and according to the provisions of section "A", Article III of this contract, then these charters are to remain unenforceable.

But if the Steamship Company, from any cause except the act of God or the public enemy, or arising from the perils of the sea, omits two sailings in any one calendar month during the continuance of this contract, then the above charters are, as to all or any one or more of said steamers, at the Railroad Company's option, to become enforceable, and the Railroad Company shall have, and is 659 hereby given, the absolute right and power to run said vessels, or any of them, on the aforesaid described route and service, calling at all ports between Panama and San Francisco, and vice versa, for the account and risk of and at the expense of said Steamship Company during the unexpired portion of this contract, it being the express intent and agreement of the parties hereto that the covenants of this article shall be specifically enforceable and that breach thereof can not be adequately compensated in damages.

The Steamship Company agrees, in the contingency aforesaid, peacefully to surrender to the Railroad Company, upon its demand in writing, the said steamers, or any of them, without the intervention of any court or legal proceedings of any kind whatsoever, the Steamship Company hereby irrevocably giving the Railroad Company all the power and authority needful in the premises, in order that the Railroad Company may take possession of said steamers or of any one or more of them, and operate them, or any one or more of them, under the provisions and terms of the charter parties hereto annexed; and it is expressly agreed that in case of any conflict of opinion or doubt as to the respective rights of the parties hereto under this clause, until such rights are finally established by 660 the judgment and decree of a competent court, or by arbitration in the manner hereinbefore provided, the Steamship Company or its successors will not, in the contingency herein contemplated, hold said ships as against any demand of said Railroad Company, and will not prevent or hinder the use of the same by the Railroad Company in the manner or in the business contemplated by this agreement.

ARTICLE XXII.

The Railroad Company shall make over and deliver to the Steamship Company, charter parties of even date with the present instrument, at the nominal rate of one dollar per month and unconditional in terms, of the following steamers belonging to said Railroad Company and now running or to be run between New York and Colon under this contract, to wit, the Allianca, the Advance, and the Finance, and agrees to likewise make over and deliver to the Steamship Company like charters of any other steamers placed upon said service under the provisions of section "B" of Article III of this contract simultaneously with the placing of the same upon said service.

It is hereby further agreed that as long as the Railroad Com-661 pany's Columbian line performs punctually and regularly at least three trips per month in each direction, under and according to the provisions of section "B" of Article III of this contract, then these charters are to remain unenforceable.

But if the Railroad Company from any cause except the act of God, or the public enemy, or arising from the perils of the sea, omits two sailings in any one calendar month during the continuance of this contract, then the above charters are, as to all or any one or more of said steamers, at the Steamship Company's option, to become enforceable, and the Steamship Company shall have and is hereby given the absolute right and power to run said vessels, or any of them, on the aforesaid described route and service between New York and Colon, and vice versa, for the account and risk of, and at the expense of said Railroad Company, during the unexpired portion of this contract, it being the express intent and agreement of the parties hereto that the covenants of this article shall be specifically enforceable and that breach thereof can not be adequately compensated in damages.

The Railroad Company agrees in the contingency aforesaid peace-662 fully to surrender to the Steamship Company, upon its demand in writing, the said steamers, or any of them, without the intervention of any court or legal proceedings of any kind whatsoever; the Railroad Company hereby irrevocably giving the Steamship Company all the power and authority needful in the premises, in order that the Steamship Company may take possession of said steamers, or any one or more of them, and operate them, or any one or more of them, under the provisions and terms of the charter-parties hereto annexed; and it is expressly agreed that in case of any conflict of opinion or doubt as to the respective rights of the parties hereto under this clause, until such rights are finally established by the judgment and decree of a competent court, or by arbitration in the manner hereinbefore provided, the Railroad Company, or its successors, will not, in the contingency herein contemplated, hold said ships as against any demand of said Steamship Company, and will not prevent or hinder the use of the same by the Steamship Company in the manner or in the business contemplated by this agreement.

ARTICLE XXIII.

For all joint business transacted under this contract, or for all services or material furnished by the parties thereto to each 663 other, there shall, except as herein otherwise expressly provided for, be rendered at New York a monthly account on the 25th day of each month for the business of the preceding month, such statement to cover all business of the preceding month, cleared during said month, and the sums due shall be paid on that date to the creditor company.

ARTICLE XXIV.

It is understood that the Steamship Company, notwithstanding anything in this agreement contained, is to be at liberty to run and load the steamships City of Para and Columbia for their return voyages to New York from Colon on the round voyages now pending.

It is understood and agreed that the Railroad Company, anything herein contained to the contrary notwithstanding, is to be at liberty to load and run steamers as follows:

Allianca to sail from New York on December 20th; Advance to sail from New York December 30th; these ships to take cargo from San Francisco, to be delivered to the Railroad Company's steamer Washtenaw, sailing from Panama on or about January 12th, 1896. The Finance to complete her round voyage now pending.

The Railroad Company's steamer City of Everett, now at sea, to arrive at Panama on or about December 16th, to load 664 and return to San Francisco with the San Francisco cargoes out from New York, brought to the Isthmus by Columbian Line steamers of November 30th and December 10th, 1895, the New York cargo brought by said steamer City of Everett to be delivered at Colon to the Columbian Line ships, to be taken by them to New York.

The Railroad Company's steamer Washtenaw to sail from San Francisco for Panama on or about December 17th, taking San Francisco cargo for New York, to be delivered at Colon to the Columbian

Line ships, to be taken by them to New York; said steamer Washington to sail on her return voyage to San Francisco on or about January 12th, 1896, taking New York cargo bound for San Francisco brought to Colon by the Columbian Line steamers Allianca, from New York December 20th, and Advance, from New York December 30th, 1895.

ARTICLE XXV.

This contract, except as herein otherwise expressly prescribed, shall remain in force for three years from the 16th day of December, 1895, and for the further period of two years after the expiration of such period of three years, if the Steamship Company should so elect, and if it shall have given written notice of such election to the Railroad Company at least ninety days before the expiration of the first three years' term.

In witness whereof the said parties hereto have caused this instrument to be signed in their corporate names by their respective presidents, and their respective corporate seals to be hereunto affixed and attested by their respective secretaries, all thereunto duly authorized by resolutions of their respective boards of directors, the day and year first hereinabove written.

673 PETITIONER'S EXHIBIT NO. 26, SEPTEMBER 22, 1914.

Original (executed in quadruplicate).

"THE PANAMA ROUTE."

Contract between the Panama Rail Road Company and the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, dated June 11, 1902.

(See supplemental contract of same date.)

674 This agreement, made this eleventh day of June, 1902, in the year one thousand nine hundred and two, between the Panama Railroad Company, duly chartered and organized under the laws of the State of New York, and hereinafter called the Railroad Company, party of the first part, and the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, also duly chartered and organized under the laws of the said State, and hereinafter called the Steamship Company, party of the second part, witnesseth:

Whereas the said Railroad Company is now operating its railroad across the Isthmus of Panama, and running a line of steamers from New York to Colon, on the Atlantic Ocean; and

Whereas the said Steamship Company is now running a regular e of steamers on the Pacific Ocean between San Francisco and anama and intermediate ports on the Central American and Mexin coast; and

Whereas both companies are interested in and desirous of hereby tablishing conditions under which they may carry on regularly d without interruption the business of transportation between San Francisco and New York and the said intermediate ports, with the intent hereby declared by both parties to develop to the fullest possible extent traffic by the Isthmus of Panama d to prevent the diversion of the business of said Isthmus to other utes;

Now, therefore, in consideration of these premises and with the tention of so securing to both of the parties hereto the advantages of contract of the general character above set forth for a term of ars, and in consideration of the sum of one dollar by each of the rties hereto to the other paid before the delivery hereof, it is tually covenanted and agreed by and between the respective pars hereto, and their respective successors, assigns, and legal repre-tatives, as follows, that is to say:

ARTICLE I.

The Railroad Company hereby concedes to the Steamship Com-ny (so far as its charter and its contract with the Colombian Gov-nment permit) the exclusive privilege of through billing to and om any and all ports of Central America, Mexico, the United ates, and British Columbia, on the Pacific Ocean, under and during the life of this contract as hereinafter provided, in connection with the Railroad Company and each and every one of its Atlantic connecting lines.

During the pendency of this contract the Steamship Company, en taking on its vessels, for shipment at San Francisco or at any cific Coast port situated between San Francisco and Panama, merndise destined to Atlantic or Gulf ports of the United States or European points, shall issue its through bills on such merchandise ly via the Isthmus of Panama.

At New York and San Francisco business transported or to be nsported by the Panama route is to be delivered to and received m connecting lines, the rates on such business so delivered to or eived from connecting lines to be made by adding to the charges such connecting lines and all transfer charges, the rates prescribed der this agreement for transportation between New York and San ancisco.

And both parties agree, respectively (within the scope of their wers and as far as they can consistently with their own safety and protection and with their duties as common carriers) to coop 677 ate with each other in making such rates and in genera taking such measures as will afford to both parties protecti against interference or competition by other steamship lines with traffic hereby conceded by each to the other.

ARTICLE II.

SECTION "A". There shall be maintained by the Steamship Co pany a through line of steamers each way between Panama and S Francisco, and such intermediate ports at which the Steamship Co pany now calls, as well as any other intermediate ports on the Paci coast as above recited whose traffic shall develop sufficiently to w rant making them ports of call; the Steamship Company shall, s ject to the perils of the seas, make at least three trips each way p month between Panama and San Francisco, and the steamers shall those now running on the Steamship Company's line between s ports, or others of approximately equal capacity and speed. In c any of the steamers engaged in the above service be lost or destroy the Steamship Company agrees to promptly replace such lost disabled vessel or vessels by another or others of approx 678 mately equal capacity and speed, so far as necessary to mai tain the service as above prescribed, namely, a through line steamers between Panama and San Francisco and the intermedi ports as aforesaid, and the three trips each way per month as afo said by said present steamers or others of approximately equal cap ity and speed.

SECTION "B." The Railroad Company shall maintain a line steamers each way between New York and Colon, and it shall, s ject to the perils of the sea, make at least three trips each way p month between New York and Colon, and the steamers shall be th now running on the Railroad Company's line between said ports others of approximately equal capacity and speed. In case any the steamers engaged in the above service be lost or destroyed, t Railroad Company agrees promptly to replace such lost or disabl vessel or vessels by another or others of approximately equal capac and speed, so far as necessary to maintain the service as above p scribed, namely, a through line of steamers between New York a Colon as aforesaid, and the three trips each way per month as afo said by said present steamers or others of approximately eq capacity and speed.

679 SECTION "C." These two steamship lines connecting, spectively, at Panama and Colon with the Panama Railro shall constitute, with said railroad, what shall be hereafter call the "Panama route" between New York and San Francisco.

ARTICLE III.

The intention and purpose of this agreement being to obtain for the said "Panama route" all the freight business that can be secured at reasonable and remunerative rates, it is agreed that either party to this agreement shall, at the request of the other party thereto, publish and make operative such through rates between New York and San Francisco as will compete with those made operative by the competing transcontinental railroad lines; and failure to comply with such request within twenty days from the date of its receipt shall constitute a violation of this contract and subject the offending party to the provisions of Article XIX of this contract.

Both parties, however, agree that whenever either party, without request from the other, puts in operation on east or west bound traffic between San Francisco and New York, or requests the other to put in operation on such traffic, a through rate of less than forty cents (40c.) per hundred pounds, or ten cents (10c.) per cubic foot, then the party so putting into effect such rate, without request from the other, or the party making such request agrees to bear itself whatever difference there may be between the minimum rate above stated and the rate so put in operation or requested below such minimum rate.

ARTICLE IV.

During the term of this contract the Railroad Company shall not, directly or indirectly, run any steamers on the Pacific north of Panama, and shall (in so far as its charter and its contract with the Colombian Government may permit, and so far as it can consistently with its own safety and protection under existing treaty stipulations), in every manner lawfully and reasonably within its power, promote and protect the interests of the Steamship Company in all traffic north of Panama in connection with said railroad and its Atlantic connecting lines, and especially against all forms of competition whatsoever, and will (so far as it is practicable) give, turn over to, and direct to the vessels of the Steamship Company, to the extent that it can lawfully control or influence the same, all business destined to Pacific points north of Panama originating on the Isthmus of Panama and carried upon its railroad, or which may be brought to said Isthmus by its own ships or by other ships or lines, and especially will not, so long as the Steamship Company faithfully performs the stipulations of this agreement, become interested in or divide with any other person or persons, or corporation or corporations, the earnings of a through line, or any through business, to or from points on the Pacific coast north of Panama, and upon all such through business the full local tariff rates for the time being in force for transportation across the Isth mus of Panama shall be charged to all competing lines, and the Rail road Company will pay to the Steamship Company the amount o the share of the through rate to which the Steamship Compan would have been entitled if such through business had been carri over its line.

Further, the parties hereto, each for itself, agree that all freight passengers, baggage, specie, and mail matter confided to either fo transportation or brought by the one party to the other for the pur pose of being conveyed in either direction over and upon the whol or any part of said Panama route, shall be transported and carri promptly and without undue delay.

682 During the pendency of this contract the Steamship Com pany binds itself not to run vessels directly or indirectly fro any port of the eastern shore of the North American Continent t Colon or to the eastern terminal of any of the transcontinenta routes.

The Steamship Company agrees during the pendency of this con tract (in so far as its charter may permit, and so far as it can con sistently with its own safety and protection under existing treat stipulations) in every manner lawfully and reasonably within it power to promote and protect the interests of the Railroad Compan in the traffic of the Panama route, and especially against all forms o competition whatsoever; the Steamship Company further agrees dur ing the pendency of this contract not to divert from the Panam route the traffic to or from any of the Pacific ports between San Francisco and Panama originating at or destined to Atlantic or Gul ports of the United States or European ports. And for such busi ness the Steamship Company shall not enter into contracts of an kind involving through billing with any person, party, or corpora tion other than the Panama Railroad Company, nor shall the Steam ship Company compete directly or indirectly (by reduced rates o otherwise) with the "Panama route" on said business, and 683 on any business so diverted directly or indirectly by it the Steamship Company shall pay to the Railroad Company the freight it would have been entitled to receive if such business ha been carried across the Isthmus on its railroad.

ARTICLE V.

It is agreed that through freight rates, so far as the same accrue t the Railroad Company and Steamship Company, shall be divide between them as follows:

On freight between United States Atlantic coast ports and Unite States Pacific coast ports: To the Railroad Company, fifty per ce

50%); to the Steamship Company, fifty per cent (50%). Minimum rate, forty cents (40c.) per hundred pounds, or ten cents (10c.) per cubic foot.

On freight between United States Atlantic coast ports and Mexican or Central American ports: To the Railroad Company, sixty per cent (60%); to the Steamship Company, forty per cent (40%). Minimum rate to or from Mexican ports, sixty cents (60c.) per hundred pounds, or thirty cents (30c.) per cubic foot ship's option.

Minimum rate to or from Central American ports, fifty cents (50c.) per hundred pounds, or twenty-five (25c.) per cubic foot ship's option.

On foreign freight between European ports and Mexican or Central American ports: To the Railroad Company, forty per cent (40%); to the Steamship Company, sixty per cent (60%). Minimum rate, thirty-five shillings (35/) per ton of twenty-two hundred and forty (2,240) pounds, or forty (40) cubic feet.

On foreign freight between European ports and United States Pacific coast ports: To the Railroad Company, thirty-seven and one-half per cent (37½ %); to the Steamship Company, sixty-two and one-half per cent (62½ %). Minimum rate, forty cents (40c.) per 100 pounds, or ten cents (10c.) per cubic foot.

The above prescribed divisions between the Railroad and Steamship Company shall apply to the portion of the through freight rates accruing to said companies on business and traffic whether originating at or destined to the ports above mentioned or points prior or subsequent thereto.

Subject to above agreed minima, the freight rates between United States Atlantic and United States Pacific coast ports, and between United States Atlantic coast ports and Mexican or Central American ports, and between Mexican, Central American, or United States Pacific coast ports and European ports, are to be fixed by the initial carriers. All tariffs naming rates and commodities are to be made by mutual consent and become effective with the date of this agreement.

It is further agreed that if, during the pendency of this contract, it becomes necessary, on account of quarantine or revolutions, or the order of any government, to hold and warehouse freight, mail, specie, etc., at any point on the Railroad or Steamship Company's lines, the charges thereon are to be considered as line charges, and are to be prorated between the lines in interest according to the divisions of the through rates, it being understood that the charges for handling and warehousing by the Railroad or Steamship Company are to be at cost.

ARTICLE VI.

It is mutually agreed that the term "ton", as used in this agreement, shall mean two thousand two hundred and forty (2,240) pounds avdp., or forty (40) cubic feet measurement when so taken by the ships, unless otherwise expressly provided herein.

686 ARTICLE VII.

Passenger rates accruing to the Railroad and Steamship Company between New York and Pacific coast ports, Panama to San Francisco, both included, shall be divided as follows:

To the Railroad Company—fifty per cent. (50%).

To the Steamship Company—fifty per cent. (50%).

Through passenger rates effective under terms of this contract are those which were in effect December 1, 1899, and any change therefrom is to be made only by mutual consent in writing; but either party to this contract is at liberty to diminish any agreed rate, but at its own cost, by the amount of the proportion accruing to it under the above divisions.

Any commissions paid agents for soliciting and obtaining passenger business covering service of Panama route are to be divided between the Railroad Company and the Steamship Company pro rata according to the divisions of the through rate.

Both parties shall have the right to appoint and maintain agents at any point they may select.

ARTICLE VIII.

687 The steamers of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company shall make use of the La Boca wharf provided by the Panama Railroad Company whenever, in the judgment of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, it is safe and prudent so to do; but in the event of the steamers not being able to get alongside said wharf without delay, then the cargo, etc., shall be lightered in the Bay of Panama.

When steamers load or discharge alongside La Boca wharf no charge shall be made on passengers, mails, specie, baggage, etc., but the Railroad Company shall be paid as wharfage on all other cargo (when same is taken from or landed on the wharf direct) a maximum rate of eighty cents (80c.) American gold per ton, it being understood that the Railroad Company is to provide at its wharf at La Boca the necessary equipment for the efficient operation thereof and for the prompt loading and unloading by the Steamship Company of its vessels, compensation for all which is included in above wharfage.

If the Railroad Company furnishes cranes, there shall be an additional charge of ten cents (10c.) per ton on cargo for the use of ch cranes, such usage, however, of cranes being optional with the Steamship Company.

8 When lighterage is performed by the Railroad Company and the lighters are loaded or discharged at La Boca, no charge her than the lighterage charged is to be made the Steamship Company for the use of La Boca wharf, or cranes, or loading or unloading the lighters at the wharf.

If the Steamship Company elects to enter service between Panama d Chiriqui, such service is to form part of this contract, and the eamship Company is to have the right to land all cattle it may ry on the beach at Panama free of any charge.

ARTICLE IX.

The Railroad Company shall, during the pendency of this contract, continue to employ its lighters when reasonably necessary to nect with the Steamship Company's vessels and the shore at nama, the Railroad Company agreeing to furnish lighters in icient number to load and unload such vessels with dispatch.

When lighters are used the following shall be the lighterage rges:

For each ton of freight delivered by the Steamship Company to Railroad Company, or by the Railroad Company to the Steam- Company—ninety cents (90c.) per ton United States currency.

For all specie or treasure, one-fortieth of one per cent (1/40%).

or each passenger one dollar ($1.00) United States currency.

o charge for extra baggage or mails.

nama local cargo to be received and delivered by the party he first part as agent for the party of the second part, in that the receipt or delivery thereof and transfer to and from steamer ding the lighterage, wharfage, and cranage, to be performed by y of the first part, and party of the second part will pay for services rendered $1.25 per ton, whether lightered or received or delivered to steamers at La Boca.

ARTICLE X.

e Railroad Company agrees to transport from Colon to Pan- supplies, excepting coal, exclusively for the use of the Steam- Company's steamers on the Pacific at three dollars ($3) per ton, to lighter same at Panama at one dollar ($1) per ton additional, it being hereby agreed that the Steamship Company shall have the right to perform lighterage on its own coal and other supplies in its own lighters.

The Railroad Company agrees to transport by each steamer from New York to Colon, supplies exclusively for the use of the Steamship Company, at the rate of $5 per ton.

ARTICLE XI.

The officers and employees of the Steamship Company shall be carried between Panama and Colon free, and between New York and Panama or Colon at the rate of ten dollars for each passenger.

The officers and employees of the Railroad Company shall be carried between Panama and San Francisco at the rate of twenty dollars for each passenger.

ARTICLE XII.

The Railroad Company agrees, so long as its wires are in working order, to obtain and furnish the Steamship Company all telegraphic and telephonic information through its agents that may be necessary to properly conduct the business of the Panama route.

ARTICLE XIII.

691 Each party hereto shall be responsible for cargo, specie, and mail while under its care and until delivered to its cocarrier.

Any responsibility accruing in regard to passengers or their baggage is to be assumed in like manner as cargo.

Whenever any loss or injury occurs, or damage from delay in transportation, the loss or injury or damage from delay, whether accruing with respect to cargo, specie, mail, passengers, or their baggage, shall, when the same can not be located, be pro rated between the Railroad Company and the Steamship Company according to the divisions of the through rate that may apply in each case.

In case any actions, suits, or claims shall be brought against any cocarrier, the carrier responsible, as above stipulated, shall bear and discharge any loss, damage, or expense incident thereto; provided the carrier sued shall at once give notice to the other cocarrier to the end that each may have opportunity to defend its interests.

ARTICLE XIV.

The carriage or transportation of salt, coal, and grain (except barley in bags between United States points) is hereby exempted from the operation of this contract, and each of the 692 contracting parties reserves its full liberty as to the carriage or transportation of these articles.

ARTICLE XV.

The Railroad Company will do, at its shops in Panama and Colon, ch work and repairs for the Steamship Company as the Steamship ompany from time to time may request and as the Railroad Com- ny can perform without interference with its own business, charg- g therefor the cost of labor and material on the Isthmus, with ten r cent added thereto.

ARTICLE XVI.

The Steamship Company shall make over and deliver to the Rail- ad Company charter parties of even date with the present instru- ent at the nominal rate of one dollar per month, and unconditional terms, of the following steamers belonging to said company and w running or to be run between Panama and San Francisco under is contract, to wit, the Acapulco, the San Jose, the City of dney, the Colon, the City of Para, and the San Juan, and rees to likewise make over and deliver to the Railroad Com- pany like charters of any other steamers placed upon said service under the provisions of section "A", Article II, of this contract, simultaneously with the placing of the same upon d service.

t is hereby further agreed that as long as the Steamship Com- y performs punctually and regularly three trips per month in h direction under and according to the provisions of section "A", icle II, of this contract, then these charters are to remain unen- ceable.

f the Steamship Company, from any cause except the act of God the public enemy, or arising from the perils of the sea, omits two lings in any one calendar month during the continuance of this tract, then the above charters are, as to all or any one or more of l steamers, at the Railroad Company's option, to become enforce- e and the Railroad Company shall have, and is hereby given, the olute right and power to run said vessels, or any of them, on the resaid described route and service, calling at all ports between nama and San Francisco, and vice versa, for the account and risk nd at the expense of said Steamship Company during the unex- pired portion of this contract; it being the express intent and agreement of the parties hereto that the covenants of this article shall be specifically enforceable and that breach thereof not be adequately compensated in damages.

he Steamship Company agrees, in the contingency aforesaid, cefully to surrender to the Railroad Company, upon its demand in ting, the said steamers, or any of them, without the intervention ny court or legal proceedings of any kind whatsoever; the Steamship Company hereby irrevocably giving the Railroad Company the power and authority needful in the premises in order that Railroad Company may take possession of said steamers, or of one or more of them, and operate them, or any one or more of th under the provisions and terms of the charter parties hereto annex and it is expressly agreed that in case of any conflict of opinion doubt as to the respective rights of the parties hereto under t clause, until such rights are finally established by the judgment decree of a competent court or by arbitration in the manner here after provided, the Steamship Company or its successors will not, the contingency herein contemplated, hold said ships as against demand of said Railroad Company and will not prevent or hin the use of the same by the Railroad Company in the manner 695 in the business contemplated by this agreement.

ARTICLE XVII.

The Railroad Company shall make over and deliver to the Ste ship Company, charter parties of even date with the present inst ment, at the nominal rate of one dollar per month, and unconditio in terms, of the following steamers belonging to said Railroad Co pany and now running or to be run between New York and Co under this contract, to wit, the Allianca, the Advance, and Finance, and agrees to likewise make over and deliver to Steamship Company like charters of any other steamers placed u said service under the provisions of section "B" of Article II of t contract simultaneously with the placing of the same upon s service.

It is hereby further agreed that as long as the Railroad Compan steamship line performs punctually and regularly at least three tr per month in each direction under and according to the provisions section "B" of Article II of this contract, then these charters ar remain unenforceable.

If the Railroad Company, from any cause except the act 696 God or the public enemy or arising from the perils of the s omits two sailings in any one calendar month during the c tinuance of this contract, then the above charters are, as to all or one or more of said steamers, at the Steamship Company's option become enforceable, and the Steamship Company shall have and hereby given the absolute right and power to run said vessels, any of them, on the aforesaid described route and service betw New York and Colon, and vice versa, for the account and risk of at the expense of said Railroad Company during the unexpired p tion of this contract, it being the express intent and agreement the parties hereto that the covenants of this article shall be s cifically enforceable and that breach thereof can not be adequately compensated in damages.

The Railroad Company agrees in the contingency aforesaid, peacefully to surrender to the Steamship Company, upon its demand in writing, the said steamers, or any of them, without the intervention of any court or legal proceedings, of any kind whatsoever; the Railroad Company hereby irrevocably giving the Steamship Company all the power and authority needful in the premises, in order that the Steamship Company may take possession of said steamers, or any one or more of them, and operate them, or any one or 697 more of them, under the provisions and terms of the charter parties hereto annexed; and it is expressly agreed that in case of any conflict of opinion or doubt as to the respective rights of the parties hereto under this clause, until such rights are finally established by the judgment and decree of a competent court, or by arbitration in the manner hereinafter provided, the Railroad Company, or its successors, will not, in the contingency herein contemplated, hold said ships as against any demand of said Steamship Company and will not prevent or hinder the use of the same by the Steamship Company in the manner or in the business contemplated by this agreement.

ARTICLE XVIII.

For all joint business transacted under this contract and for all services or material furnished by the parties thereto to each other, there shall, except as herein otherwise expressly provided for, be rendered at New York a monthly account on the 25th day of each month for the business of the preceding month, such statement to cover all business of the preceding month cleared during said month, and the sums due shall be paid on that date to the creditor company.

698 ARTICLE XIX.

Any and all questions that shall or may arise touching this agreement, or the construction thereof, or any matters or things to be done or performed by either of the parties hereunder, shall be submitted to the decision and award of three arbitrators, who shall be disinterested persons, and who shall be chosen, one by each of the parties hereto, and the third by the two so chosen. Either party hereto may, at any time, notify the other, in writing, that it elects to submit any such matter of difference to arbitration hereunder and name an arbitrator, and if the other party shall fail or omit to name an arbitrator within fifteen days after written notice of such selection of an arbitrator by the other party and written request to name an arbitrator, the arbitrator named by the party giving such notice shall name an arbitrator for and on behalf of the party so failing or omitting, wh shall have the same power and authority as though he had bee chosen and nominated by such party. And the decision and award of any two of such arbitrators with respect to the matters so sub mitted to them, shall be binding and conclusive upon the parties; and each of the parties hereto does bind itself and its successors 699 faithfully to abide by and carry out any award so made by any two of the arbitrators appointed as aforesaid. Any question of violation or failure to observe this agreement by either party, or any other question arising between them hereunder, may be submitted to such arbitrators, and they shall determine, first, as to the fact, and secondly, as to the amount of money damages to be paid by the party found guilty, to the party making the charge, or the particular thing to be done or to be refrained from being done by such guilty party, and such amount shall be paid, and such award shall be complied with within ten days of the rendering of such award. The two parties both agree to furnish to the arbitrators any paper, instrument, or book in their possession which such arbitrators may request them to produce. Should any arbitration fail for any cause, then such pro ceedings as above prescribed may be taken de novo by either party to this agreement. All hearings by said arbitrators shall be held in New York, or on the Isthmus of Panama, or in San Francisco, or such other place where witnesses necessary to appear before the arbitrators may be obtained with the least expense to the parties to this 700 contract, and all fees and expenses of such arbitrators shall be borne by the party against whom the award of the arbitrators shall be made, and shall be assessed by said arbitrators and made part of their award.

This article shall be considered of the essence of this agreement, and any breach of or failure to observe any of the terms thereof shall be deemed to be a material breach of the entire contract.

ARTICLE XX.

Any of the conditions of Articles V, VII, VIII, IX, X, and XI of this agreement may be altered by consent in writing of the parties hereto, signed by their respective presidents or vice presidents, with out affecting any of the other conditions of this agreement.

ARTICLE XXI.

Subject to the provisions of a contemporaneous agreement between the parties hereto of even date herewith, this contract, except as herein otherwise expressly prescribed, shall remain in force for three years from the eleventh day of June, 1902, and for the further period of two years, if either party shall so elect, and if such party shall have given notice of such election to the other party 701 hereto at least ninety (90) days before the expiration of the first term of three years.

In witness whereof the said parties hereto have caused this instrument to be signed in their corporate names by their respective presidents, and their respective corporate seals to be hereunto affixed and attested by their respective secretaries, the day and year first hereinabove written.

706 PETITIONER'S EXHIBIT No. 27. SEPTEMBER 22, 1914.

Original (executed in quadruplicate).

"THE PANAMA ROUTE."

Supplemental contract between the Panama Rail Road Company and the Pacific Mail Steamship Company. Dated June 11, 1902.

707 This memorandum of agreement, made and entered into this eleventh day of June, 1902, by and between the Panama Rail Road Company, a corporation duly chartered by and organized under the laws of the State of New York, and hereinafter called the Railroad Company, party of the first part, and the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, also a corporation duly chartered by and organized under the laws of said State, and hereinafter called the Steamship Company, party of the second part, witnesseth: That

Whereas the parties hereto have entered into another agreement, bearing even date herewith, for the purpose of regulating the traffic arrangements between them, and hereinafter called the traffic agreement; and

Whereas a suit is now pending before the Supreme Court of the Republic of Colombia, brought by the attorney general of said Republic against the Railroad Company, to compel the Railroad Company to grant to all carriers the privilege of issuing through bills of lading over its line of railroad and to forbid it to give to any carrier special privileges or advantages in respect of transportation of goods over said railroad; and

Whereas carriers of goods and passengers from Panama 708 to points upon the Pacific, north of said city, may enter into competition with the Panama route, and may embarrass the operations of said route, and it may be necessary for the proper conduct of the business that other independent means of transportation from Panama to points on the Pacific, south of said city, should be provided.

Now, therefore, in consideration of the premises and of the sum of one dollar by each of the parties hereto to the other in hand paid, and of other good and valuable considerations, the receipt whereof is hereby acknowledged, and of the making of said traffic agreement, and of the various covenants of the respective parties hereinafter contained, the parties aforesaid have covenanted and agreed, and do hereby covenant and agree, to and with each other as follows:

First. The Railroad Company and the Steamship Company will cooperate in defending or procuring the dismissal of the said suit now pending before the Supreme Court of the Republic of Colombia, and will contribute in the proportion of 55 per cent by the Railroad Company and 45 per cent by the Steamship Company to the expenses hereafter and during the operation of said traffic agreement 709 incurred for counsel in connection with the defense of said suit or with such efforts to procure the dismissal thereof.

Second. If the Railroad Company should not, on account of its inability to do so, or for any other reason, give to the Steamship Company the exclusive privilege of issuing through bills of lading over its line of railroad to and from the ports referred to in the first paragraph of Art. 1 of said traffic agreement, in connection with the Railroad Company and each and every one of its Atlantic connecting lines, then the Steamship Company shall be entitled, at its option, to terminate said traffic agreement upon giving written notice to the Railroad Company of its election so to terminate the same.

Third. Upon the execution of the said traffic agreement by the parties hereto the Railroad Company is to forthwith give notice to all steamship lines running steamers between Panama and ports on the Pacific coast north thereof other than the Pacific Mail Steamship Company that upon the expiration of ninety days from the giving of such notice the Railroad Company will cease to through-bill with the steamship lines so notified, or either or any of them, in 710 respect the transportation of merchandise on the Pacific coast north of Panama, and the parties hereto shall endeavor to procure arrangements between such other steamship lines so notified and the parties hereto for a division of territory under which the transportation of merchandise on the Pacific coast north of Panama shall be conducted by the Pacific Mail Steamship Company only, and the transportation of merchandise on the Pacific coast south of Panama shall be conducted by such other lines and for a mutual interchange of business at Panama between said Pacific Mail Steamship Company and such other steamship lines.

If on or before the expiration of ninety days from the giving of such notice such other steamship lines shall not have agreed to such division of territory and to such mutual interchange of business at Panama as above prescribed, but shall conduct the transportation of merchandise north of Panama, the Pacific Mail Steamship Company may, at its own expense, but otherwise in cooperation with the Panama Railroad Company inaugurate a steamship line extending as far south as Valparaiso, and the Panama Railroad Company will extend to the Pacific Mail Steamship Company in respect of such line facilities in all respects equal to those which the 711 Railroad Company may accord to any other line operating steamers south of Panama.

If, in consequence of the notification to be given as above prescribed from the Railroad Company to the other steamship lines, or such efforts to secure a division of territory as above provided, such other steamship lines shall withdraw their existing lines connecting Panama with points on the Pacific coast south thereof, then the Pacific Mail Steamship Company will, if the Railroad Company shall so request, forthwith make arrangements for providing a line of steamers running south from Panama as far as Valparaiso, and shall within at most 120 days after the making of such request establish and begin the actual operation of such line; and in that event the Railroad Company will thereafter and so long as such line shall be maintained and operated in a regular and efficient manner so as to accommodate properly the traffic between said points and Panama in connection with the railroad refuse and continue to refuse to through-bill with other steamship lines in respect of business south of Panama, and will through-bill exclusively with the Pacific Mail Steamship Company for such business, and will extend to the Pacific Mail Steam-712 ship Company facilities for such business in all respects equal to those which by the said traffic agreement are extended to the business conducted by the Pacific Mail Steamship Company north of Panama. Provided, however, that the running of such line of steamers south from Panama by the Pacific Mail Steamship Company and such exclusive through-billing privilege may be terminated upon one year's notice from the Pacific Mail Steamship Company to the Panama Railroad Company of its election to terminate the running of such line, or upon one year's notice from the Panama Railroad Company to the Pacific Mail Steamship Company of its election to terminate such exclusive through-billing privileges.

Fourth. It is mutually and expressly understood and agreed that if at any time during the continuance of said traffic agreement a majority of the shares of the Railroad Company or its railroad property shall be purchased or acquired by the United States of America, or by any person or persons representing it, or acting on its behalf, then either party hereto may give notice in writing to the other of its intention to terminate said traffic agreement, and at the expira-713 tion of six months from the giving of such notice the said traffic agreement and the previous articles of this agreement shall terminate, come to an end, and be utterly null and void thenceforth, anything in said traffic agreement or herein contained to the contrary notwithstanding.

In witness whereof, each of the parties hereto has caused these presents to be signed by its president, attested by its secretary, and sealed with its corporate seal, the day and year first hereinabove written.

Commodity.	From—	To—	Rate in cents per 100 lbs.	Routing.
Wool, in grease, carloads; minimum carload weight, 20,000 lbs.	Corinne, Utah; Marmol, Nev.; and points shown in group 3, pages 6 and 7.	New York, N. Y.; Boston, Mass.; and points shown on pages 8 to 12, inclusive, as taking group 4 rates.	207½	Via route 1 (page 17).

NOTE 1.—The privilege of stopping at Reno, Nev., wool originating at Tecoma, Nev., and points intermediate to Reno, Nev., in transit to destination is extended to shippers for the purpose of pre-927 paring packages for through shipment; in such cases, in addition to the freight charges from original point of shipment to final destination, there will be assessed for handling to and from the warehouse at Reno, Nev., 30 cents per 100 lbs., which will accrue to So. Pac. Co. (Pac. Sys.).

NOTE 2.—When the minimum carload weight or more is shipped in one day by one consignor to one consignee, covered by one bill of lading, the above carload rate shall apply on the entire lot although it may be less than two or more carload lots. The first car or cars must be loaded to their full capacity, and are subject to minimum weight of 20,000 lbs. The actual weight of the remainder, provided it is loaded in box cars, to be charged for at the carload rate, reference being made on the waybill for the remainder of the lot to the waybill for the full carload or loads.

957 [1] The Central Pacific Railway Company was incorporated July 29, 1899, for the purpose of taking over the properties of the Central Pacific Railroad Company on the basis of a plan of readjustment dated February 8, 1899. The above returns, therefore, for the years 1880, 1883, 1888, 1893, and 1899 pertain to the period preceding the readjustment, and those for the years 1901 and 1913, to the period subsequent to the readjustment.

[2] The Central Pacific Railroad Company operated, during these years, in addition to its own lines, the following leased lines: Amador Branch R. R.; California Pacific R. R.: G. H. & S. A., from El Paso, Texas, eastward, as constructed; Los Angeles & San Diego R. R.; Los Angeles & Independence R. R.; Northern Railway; San Pablo and Tulare 958 R. R.; Sacramento & Placerville R. R.; Stockton & Copperopolis R. R.; Southern Pacific R. R. of California; Southern Pacific R. R. of Arizona; Southern Pacific R. R. of New Mexico.

The leases covering these lines to the Central Pacific Railroad Company were cancelled at various times during the years 1885, 1886, and 1887, and the lines leased to the Southern Pacific Company.

[3] Includes rentals paid leased lines.

Agreement of the Trans-Continental Association.

This agreement, made the first day of December, A. D. 1887, by and between

The Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad Company,
The Atlantic & Pacific Railroad Company,
The Burlington & Missouri River Railroad in Nebraska,
The California Central Railway Company,
The California Southern Railroad Company,
The Canadian Pacific Railway Company,
The Central Pacific Railroad Company,
The Denver & Rio Grande Railway Company,
The Denver & Rio Grande Western Railroad Company,
The Galveston, Harrisburg & San Antonio Railway Company,
The Missouri Pacific Railway Company,
(Pencil notation on first page: "Notice of withdrawal effective 12/31/92.")

1062 The Northern Pacific Railroad Company,
The Oregon & California Railroad Company,
The Oregon Railway and Navigation Company,
The Oregon Short Line,
The St. Louis & San Francisco Railway Company,
The Southern Pacific Company,
The Texas & Pacific Railway Company, and
The Union Pacific Railway Company.

Witnesseth: The object of this agreement is to promote harmony of action between the above-named carriers to the end that reasonable rates of charge for their respective services may be jointly made and maintained. In pursuit of said object, it is agreed as follows:

Article I.

That an organization is hereby formed, to be called the Trans-Continental Association.

Article II.

The traffic subject to this agreement shall be as follows: To, from, or passing through Sacramento, Marysville, Mojave, San Bernardino, and Colton, California; Portland, Oregon; Tacoma and Seattle, Washington Territory; Vancouver, British Columbia, on one 1063 hand, to, from, or through points on or east of the 97th meridian of longitude, including Winnipeg, Manitoba, on the other hand, excepting ~~freight~~ business from or to Asia, Australasia, and Central America.

Article III.

Executive Committee.

1. The affairs of the association shall be directed by an executive committee of seven members, to be annually elected unanimously. This committee shall adjudicate differences between members.

2. The committee shall fix the salary of the chairman and other officers, shall approve the appointment and salaries of necessary employees, and authorize and audit all disbursements.

3. Meetings of the committee shall be called on the request of two members addressed to the chairman, or when deemed necessary by him, the main objects for consideration to be stated in the call.

4. Five members shall constitute a quorum. All action of the executive committee must be unanimous.

Article IV.

1. The officers of the association shall be elected by consent 1064 of all the members. Vacancies shall be filled by the executive committee pending next general meeting of the association.

2. The executive officer of the association shall be the chairman. He shall preside at all meetings and shall be ex officio chairman of regular committees.

3. He shall have authority to construe this agreement and all resolutions which may be adopted, and his decision shall be binding until reversed by the executive committee or by a general meeting.

4. He shall investigate any violation of this agreement and in such manner as he may elect, reporting same to executive committee.

5. He shall keep the records of the association, shall issue in joint form all rates, rules, and regulations relating to traffic covered by this agreement, issuing them to all members and their designated representatives simultaneously, filing copies with the Interstate Commerce Commission as required by law, keep a full and accurate account of the movements of and revenue received from such traffic, make such reports as may be required by the executive committee or the association, and render monthly detailed statements and approximate weekly reports of all traffic.

1065 6. He or his deputy shall at all times have access to all books and papers of the parties hereto which have a bearing on the business subject to this agreement.

7. He shall be supplied daily with legible impression copies of the waybills of all freight and with statements monthly of the passenger traffic covered by this agreement; and in addition thereto the initial roads for east and westbound business, respectively, shall make daily reports showing approximately the number of passengers of each class, route, origin, and destination (if either or both be an association point), and junction or terminal points through which the business passes.

8. Each party hereto shall file with the chairman all of its tariffs, regular or special, bearing on the traffic covered by this agreement, and it shall be his duty to see that they in no wise conflict with the rates adopted by the association.

9. Should necessity for change in the rates or regulations arise, prompt action shall be taken by the chairman, and his ruling shall stand until reversed by the executive committee or by general meeting.

1066 Article V.

1. The general freight and passenger agents, respectively, or other designated officers of the companies parties hereto, shall constitute rate committees. Said committees shall make all rates and divisions and rules pertaining thereto. Should the rate committee fail to agree, reference shall be had to the executive committee.

2. The rates, divisions, rules, and regulations adopted shall be promulgated by the chairman for the guidance of the parties in interest, and no deviation shall be allowed nor any change made, except as provided in article 4, section 9.

(Typewritten slip pasted in margin:)

Resolution adopted August 20th, 1889, appearing on page 469 of printed proceedings.

"Resolved, That rates and divisions to any point shall not be effective until published by the chairman, it being understood that when divisions are arranged by the chairman to any point which any member of this association can not reach by the lines with which such divisions have been arranged, such member of the association is at liberty to arrange divisions by other lines to reach the 1067 same point, provided in all cases that the full tariff rates established by the association shall be fully maintained."

Article VI.

1. The expenses of this association shall be borne by the several parties hereto in the proportion their entire revenue from freight and passenger traffic subject to the agreement bears to the total revenue of all parties from same traffic, except as may hereafter be provided.

2. The executive committee shall provide for the expenses until a basis of assessment can be arrived at.

Article VII.

1. The meetings of the association shall be held at the call of the chairman, when in his judgment they are necessary, or at the request of two members addressed to the chairman.

2. Two-thirds of the members shall constitute a quorum, and the unanimous action of such meeting shall be binding on all parties, except that propositions designed to effect changes in existing agreements or limitations, or extensions of the interests of this association, shall not be considered at any meeting where all the 1068 members are not represented, except as herein provided.

3. Whenever it shall be deemed necessary to call a meeting the chairman shall consult the wishes of all members before fixing the date and place of such meeting. Not less than two weeks' notice shall be given. When the date shall have been set the meeting shall not be postponed, except on the request of a majority of the members. Each member shall be represented at such meeting by some person duly authorized to act, whose vote shall be binding. A quorum being present, it is understood and agreed that failure to attend a meeting so called shall be taken as authorizing the chairman to act for any member not represented.

4. The chairman, in all notices of meetings of the executive committee or of the association, shall state the subjects to be discussed at such meetings.

5. No person shall be allowed to be present during meetings of this association except the president, vice president, general manager, general superintendent, traffic manager, general freight agent, general ticket agent, and general passenger agent, or other duly authorized officers of the roads members of this association, together with the chairman and his secretary, except by unanimous consent.

1069 Article VIII.

This agreement shall take effect January 1, 1888, and shall continue, subject thereafter to ninety days' written notice to the chairman of a desire on the part of any member to withdraw from or amend the same.

(Typewritten slip pasted in margin:)

Article VIII.

(In pencil:) See page 67 of proceedings for 1888.

This agreement shall take effect January 1, 1888, and shall continue, subject thereafter to ninety days' written notice to the chairman of a desire on the part of any member to withdraw from or amend the same, which notice shall specify whether he desires to withdraw from the agreement as far as it may be applied to passenger or freight traffic, or both, and in the event of such notice the chairman shall, prior to the expiration of the ninety days, convene the members of the association to decide what action shall be taken.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, D. C., April 3d, 1871.

SIR: The 23d section of the act to incorporate the Texas Pacific Railroad, and for other purposes, approved March 3d, 1871, authorizes "the Southern Pacific Railroad Company to construct a line of railroad from a point at or near Tehachapa Pass, by way of Los Angeles, to the Texas Pacific Railroad at or near the Colorado River," with the same rights and privileges, and subject to the same limitations and restrictions, as were granted to said Southern Pacific Railroad Company of California by the act of July 27, 1866.

The accompanying map designating the route of said road from Tehachapa Pass, by way of Los Angeles to the Colorado River, has been filed by Charles Crocker, Esq., president of the company, with a request that the lands may be withdrawn, as provided in the 12th section of said act, "from preemption, private entry and sale."

You will issue the necessary order for a withdrawal of the lands, within twenty miles, and along the route designated on said map.

Very respectfully, your obt. servant,

WALTER H. SMITH,
Acting Secretary.

Hon. WILLIS DRUMMOND,
Commissioner of the General Land Office.

1097 To Hon. C. Delano, Secretary of the Interior, and Hon. Willis Drummond, Commissioner of General Land Office.

Please to take notice that this Map is filed by the Southern Pacific Railroad Company of California in the office of the Commissioner of the General Land Office in the Department of the Interior for the purpose of designating by the heavy red line traced thereon the general route of the line of railroad, as near as may be, "from a point at or near Tahatchapa Pass, by way of Los Angeles to the Texas Pacific Railroad at or near the Colorado River," adopted by the said Southern Pacific Railroad Company in pursuance of the power and authority granted to said company by the 23d section of the act of the Congress of the United States, entitled "An act to incorporate the Texas Pacific Railroad Company and to aid in the construction of its road, and for other purposes," approved March 3d, 1871, and in pursuance of the provisions of the act of July 27th, 1866, referred to in said 23d section, and for the purpose of obtaining the benefit of the provisions of said acts of Congress.

CHAS. CROCKER,
President Southern Pacific Railroad Company.

1098 PETITIONER'S EXHIBIT (GRIGGS) No. 77, APRIL 20, 1915.

House of Representatives. 55th Congress, 3d session. Document No. 238.

Indebtedness of Central Pacific and Western Pacific Railroads.

Report of the commissioners appointed to settle the indebtedness to the Government growing out of the issue of bonds in aid of the construction of the Central Pacific and Western Pacific Railroads.

February 20, 1899.—Referred to the Committee on Pacific Railroads and ordered to be printed.

WASHINGTON, D. C., February 15, 1899.

To the House of Representatives:

The undersigned commissioners, appointed by the deficiency appropriation act approved July 7, 1898, to settle the indebtedness to the Government growing out of the issue of bonds in aid of the 1099 construction of the Central Pacific and Western Pacific Railroads, would respectfully report that they have concluded a settlement of the said indebtedness with the Central Pacific Railroad Company, the owner of the said railroads. A copy of the agreement of settlement is herewith transmitted.

The settlement is made as of the 1st day of February, 1899, at which date the amount due to the United States for principal and interest upon its subsidy liens upon the Central Pacific and Western Pacific railroads amounted to the sum of $58,812,715.48, that being the full amount necessary to reimburse the United States for the moneys paid for interest or otherwise in aid of the construction of said railroads.

Said indebtedness is, by the agreement of settlement, funded at the amount aforesaid into twenty promissory notes, dated February 1, 1899, payable, respectively, on or before the expiration of each successive six months for ten years, each note being for the sum of $2,940,635.78, which is one-twentieth of the total amount due. Said notes bear interest at the rate of 3 per cent per annum, payable semi-annually, and have a condition attached thereto to the effect that if default be made in any payment of either principal or interest of any of said notes or any part thereof, then all of said notes then outstanding, principal and interest, shall immediately become due and payable, notwithstanding any other stipulation of the agreement of settlement.

It is further provided that the payment of the principal and interest of said notes shall be secured by $58,820,000 of face value first refunding mortgage 4 per cent gold bonds to be hereafter issued by the Central Pacific Railroad Company or its successor having title to the railroads now owned by said company and specified in said agreement, such bonds to be part of an issue of not exceeding $100,000,000 in all.

Said bonds are to be secured by a mortgage upon all railroads, equipments, and terminals now owned by said Central Pacific Railroad Company, which mortgage shall be the first lien upon such property or shall be secured by the deposit as collateral security therefor of certain percentages of the now outstanding bonds upon said property or the different divisional parts thereof. The form of such mortgage is subject to the agreement of the parties to said agreement of settlement and has been approved by the Attorney General.

The agreement further provides that Speyer & Co., who are a party thereto, shall, within one month after the delivery to the United States of the settlement notes, accept from the Secretary of the Treasury the four earliest maturing notes and pay to the United States the face value thereof, with accrued interest thereon to the date of payment, without recourse further than that Speyer & Co. shall, until the delivery of the refunding bonds as collateral, be entitled to share pro rata with the United States in the lien and all proceeds of the lien in favor of the United States to secure said indebtedness.

The said agreement was submitted in writing to the President and approved by him on the 15th day of February, and the said promissory notes have been duly delivered to the Treasurer of the United States.

Other provisions and particulars of said agreement will appear by a perusal thereof, to which reference is respectfully made.

The execution of the agreement was duly authorized by resolution of the board of directors of the Central Pacific Railroad Company and approved by the formal action and consent of a large majority of the stockholders.

The commissioners have not found it necessary to expend 1102 any part of the sum of $20,000 appropriated for the expenses of the commission.

LYMAN J. GAGE,
Secretary of the Treasury.
CORNELIUS N. BLISS,
Secretary of the Interior.
JOHN W. GRIGGS,
Attorney General.

19 DEFENDANT'S EXHIBIT (KLINK) No. 20, MARCH 4, 1915.

This agreement, made this 10th day of February, 1885, between the Southern Pacific Company, a corporation duly organized and existing under the laws of the State of Kentucky, and the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, a corporation duly organized and existing under the laws of the United States and the State of California; the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, a corporation duly organized and existing under the laws of the Territory of Arizona; the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, a corporation duly organized and existing under the laws of the Territory of New Mexico; the Galveston, Harrisburg and San Antonio Railway Company, a corporation duly organized and existing under the laws of the State of Texas; the Texas and New Orleans Railroad Company of 1874, a corporation duly organized and existing under the laws of the State of Texas; the Louisiana Western Railroad Company, a corporation duly organized and existing under the laws of the State of Louisiana; Morgan's Louisiana and Texas Railroad and Steamship Company, a corporation duly organized and existing under the laws of the State of 20 Louisiana; and the Mexican International Railroad Company, a corporation duly organized and existing under the laws of the State of Connecticut—

Witnesseth, That the said Southern Pacific Railroad Company, organized and existing under the laws of the United States and the State of California, hereby leases to the said Southern Pacific Company for the term of ninety-nine years from the date hereof all of its railroad situated in the State of California, known and designated as the Southern Pacific Railroad of California, with all its branches and all railroads now leased by it, together with the rolling stock, telegraph lines, tools, and property of every kind and nature whatsoever now in use upon or in connection with said railroads, and together with all the appurtenances thereunto belonging, with the right to possess, maintain, use, and operate the said property and to receive the rents, issues, and profits thereof.

II. That the said Southern Pacific Railroad Company, organized and existing under the laws of the Territory of Arizona, hereby leases to the said Southern Pacific Company, for the term of ninety-21 nine years from the date hereof, all of its railroad situated in the Territory of Arizona, and known and designated as the Southern Pacific Railroad of Arizona, together with all its branches and all the rolling stock, telegraph lines, tools, and property of every kind and nature whatsoever, now in use upon or in connection with said railroad or branches, and together with all the appurtenances thereunto belonging, with the right to possess, maintain, use, and operate the said property, and to receive the rents, issues, and profits thereof.

III. That the said Southern Pacific Railroad Company, organized and existing under the laws of the Territory of New Mexico, hereby leases to the said Southern Pacific Company for the term of ninety-nine years from the date hereof all of its railroad situated in the Territory of New Mexico and known and designated as the Southern Pacific Railroad of New Mexico, together with all its branches and all the rolling stock, telegraph lines, tools, and property of every kind and nature whatsoever now in use upon or in connection with said railroad or its branches, and together with all the appurtenances thereunto belonging, with the right to possess, maintain, use, 22 and operate the said property and to receive the rents, issues, and profits thereof.

IV. That the said Galveston, Harrisburg and San Antonio Railway Company hereby leases to the said Southern Pacific Company for the terms of ninety-nine years from the date hereof all of its railroad situated in the State of Texas and known and designated as the Galveston, Harrisburg and San Antonio Railway, with all its branches and all the rolling stock, telegraph lines, tools, and property of every kind and nature whatsoever now in use upon or in connection with said railroad or its branches, and together with all the appurtenances thereunto belonging, and all other property now owned, held, and possessed by it, with the right to possess, maintain, use, and operate the said property and to receive the rents, issues, and profits thereof.

V. That the said Texas and New Orleans Railroad Company of 1874 hereby leases to the said Southern Pacific Company for the term of ninety-nine years from the date hereof all of its railroad situated in the State of Texas and known and designated as the Texas 23 and New Orleans Railroad of 1874, together with all its branches and all the rolling stock, telegraph lines, tools, and property of every kind and nature whatsoever now in use upon or in connection with said railroad or branches, and together with all the appurtenances thereunto belonging, with the right to possess, maintain, use, and operate the said property and to receive the rents, issues, and profits thereof.

VI. That the said Louisiana Western Railroad Company hereby leases to the said Southern Pacific Company for the term of ninety-nine years from the date hereof all of its railroad situated in the State of Texas and Louisiana and known and designated as the Louisiana Western Railroad, together with all its branches and all the rolling stock, telegraph lines, tools, and property of every kind and nature whatsoever now in use upon or in connection with said railroad or branches and together with all the appurtenances thereunto belonging, with the right to possess, maintain, use, and operate the said property and to receive the rents, issues, and profits thereof.

VII. That the said Morgan's Louisiana and Texas Railroad and Steamship Company hereby lease to the said Southern Pa-
24 cific Company for the term of ninety-nine years from the date thereof its railroad situated in the State of Louisiana and known and designated as the Morgan's Louisiana and Texas Railroad, together with all the branches thereof and the rolling stock, telegraph lines, tools, and property of every kind and nature whatsoever now in use upon or in connection with said railroad and branches, and together with all the appurtenances thereunto belonging; also all the steamships, steamboats, tugs, wharves, piers, landings, depots, buildings, and all other property real and personal now owned, held, or possessed by the said Morgan's Louisiana and Texas Railroad and Steamship Company with the right to possess, maintain, use, and operate the said property and to receive the rents, issues, and profits thereof.

VIII. That the said Mexican International Railroad Company hereby leases to the said Southern Pacific Company for the term of ninety-nine years from the date hereof all of its railroad and the branches thereof situated in the Republic of Mexico, known and designated as the Mexican International Railroad, together with all its branches and the rolling stock, telegraph lines, tools, and 25 property of every kind and nature whatsoever now in use upon or in connection with said railroad and together with all the appurtenances thereunto belonging, with the right to possess, maintain, use, and operate the said property and to receive rents, issues, and profits thereof.

In consideration of the leases aforesaid the said Southern Pacific Company agrees to and with the other corporations, parties hereto, that it will keep the said leased property in good order, condition, and repair; operate, maintain, add to, and better the same at its own expense; pay all taxes legally assessed against or levied thereon; and will upon the termination of this lease return the same to the respective parties from which it was leased or to their successors, with additions and betterments in as good condition and repair as the same was at the date hereof.

That it hereby assumes and will discharge all the liabilities and obligations of every kind of the said railroad companies, and each of them, except the obligations to pay the principal of their indebtedness, known as the bonded indebtedness now outstanding and secured by mortgage or deed of trust, or which may hereafter be incurred by either of said companies under the provisions of 26 any existing mortgage or deed of trust, or any mortgage or deed of trust hereafter, with the consent of this company made. That as to such bonded indebtedness, it will pay off and discharge at maturity the interest upon the same, and will, upon demand of either of said railroad companies, guarantee, in such form as said company may require, the payment of the principal and interest thereof.

That said Southern Pacific Company will annually on the first day of May pay the following named railroad companies as rental a sum equal to ninety-three and one-twelfth (93–1/12) per cent of its net profits, if any net profits there be, for the year ending on the thirty-first day of December next preceding that date as follows:

To the said Southern Pacific Railroad Company, existing under the laws of the United States and the State of California, twenty-six and one-half (26–1/2) per cent of said net profits;

To the said Southern Pacific Railroad Company, existing under the laws of the Territory of Arizona, twelve (12) per cent of said net profits;

To the said Southern Pacific Railroad Company, existing under the laws of the Territory of New Mexico, four (4) per cent of said net profits;

27 To the said Galveston, Harrisburg and San Antonio Railway Company sixteen and one-quarter (16–1/4) per cent of said net profits;

To the said Texas and New Orleans Railroad Company of 1874 seven and one-half (7–1/2) per cent of said net profits;

To the said Louisiana Western Railroad Company three and one-third (3–1/3) per cent of said net profits;

To the said Morgan's Louisiana and Texas Railroad and Steamship Company twenty-two and one-half (22–1/2) per cent of said net profits;

To the said Mexican International Railroad Company one (1) per cent of said net profits;

The term net profits as used herein shall be construed to mean the monies on hand available for dividends after all expenses, payments, and disbursements of every nature and kind of the said Southern Pacific Company, except for the rental of railroads now or hereafter leased by said company, have been deducted.

In testimony whereof the parties hereto have caused these presents to be signed by their respective presidents and countersigned by their secretaries, and their corporate seals to be hereunto affixed pur-28 suant to orders of their respective boards of directors on the day and year first herein written.

34 NEW YORK, August 28, 1884.

At a meeting of Leland Stanford, C. P. Huntington, Charles Crocker, and Timothy Hopkins, representing Mrs. M. F. S. Hopkins, it was mutually agreed to meet together from day to day for the purpose of discussing and deciding business matters in which all were interested.

W. E. Brown was appointed secretary, and requested to keep minutes of meetings and a record of transactions.

The first business was to formulate a basis of settlement with Thomas W. Pierce, and it was agreed to purchase from Mr. Pierce 5,747 shares of the capital stock of the Galveston, Har. & San Antonio R. R. Co. and 548 shares of the capital stock of the 35 Texas & New Orleans R. R. Co., and to give him credit for the same on the books of the Southern Dev. Co. It was then agreed to make up the interest on all the accounts of the stockholders of the S. D. Co. to August 30th, 1884.

S., H., H. & C. to assume payment of the bills payable of the S. D. Co. & the amount due to the P. I. Co. on the books of the S. D. Co.

Notes of the S. D. Co. payable in one year to be executed in favor of the five stockholders, drawing interest at 6% pr. annum, for the balance due to each. Mr. Pierce places in the hands of the four others, one quarter to each, notes given for his balance, as collateral security for his proportion of indebtedness to them; he also 36 places in their hands his 10,000 shares of capital stock of the S. D. Co. as further collateral security for his indebtedness.

The Secretary was instructed to make up a statement embodying these points of agreement.

Adjourned.

The letters S., H., H., and C. used in these minutes refer to Leland Stanford, C. P. Huntington, Charles Crocker, and Mrs. M. F. S. Hopkins.

S. D. Co. refers to Southern Development Co. P. I. Co. refers to Pacific Improvement Co.

W. E. BROWN, Secretary.

NEW YORK, August 29, 1884.

Meeting again called.

California & Oregon R. R. matters were discussed and informal suggestions considered.

37 One suggestion that was made that the C. P. R. R. Co. guarantee 6% on 15,000,000 of bonds, 1,800 mile, 2% on 12,000,000 of prefd. stock, 480 mile, equal to $2,280 pr mile on 500 miles of road.

Oregon and California people to take $2,500,000 of C. P. 1st mortgage bonds at par, paying the money as the work progresses; we furnish balance necessary to complete it.

It was agreed that $300,000 more of S. P. of Cal. bonds be sent to C. F. Crocker to add to the $700,000, already sent, to be used as collateral in place of bonds of S. P. of New Mexico in possession of N. Luning.

Adjourned.

W. E. BROWN, Secretary.

38 NEW YORK, August 30, 1884.

Meeting again called.

It is agreed that twenty-year bonds be issued at 6% interest, to be used by the C. P. R. R. Co. as far as they can be made available, to take up floating indebtedness of the company and for such other uses as may be thought desirable by action of the board of directors from time to time, the company reserving the right to redeem these bonds on six months' notice at their par value, commencing with the lowest outstanding numbers.

If the market price should be less than par, then the company to advertise and give the bonds to the lowest bidder.

39 The holders of these bonds shall have the right to exchange them for stock of the company, at the market price, but not less than fifty pr cent of their par value. Issue of bonds not to exceed $10,000,000.

NEW YORK, Sept. 3d, 1884.

Meeting again called.

Have American Development Company transfer to Southern Dev. Co. all the bonds and stock of the Mexican International R. R. Co. for constructing and equipping the railroad and telegraph line.

NEW YORK, Sept. 5th, 1884.

Meeting again called and a basis of settlement with Mr. T. W. Pierce, submitted by the secretary as of date, August 30th, 1884, 40 and its terms agreed upon by all the parties interested. The notes of the S. D. Co. were then executed and delivered in accordance with the basis of settlement and agreements made and executed by Mr. Pierce to each of the other four parties.

The secretary was directed to have the proper entries made on the books of the S. D. Co.

Adjourned.

W. E. BROWN, Secretary.

NEW YORK, Sept. 10, 1884.

Meeting again called.

I. E. Gates and W. E. Brown were appointed a committee to examine all securities on hand in New York, and all that are 41 used as collaterals for payment of the liabilities of S., H., H., and C.

To ascertain what securities are available, and generally to make such an examination of the properties of S., H., H., and C. in New York as they would make if examining for an executor of one of the parties, and to make out a schedule of all securities belonging to S., H., H., and C. in New York, so that the several parties in interest can sign the schedule as of date as being correct on that date.

Adjourned.

W. E. BROWN, Secretary.

42 NEW YORK, Sept. 11th, 1884.

Meeting again called.

Memorandum of proposition for equalizing accounts was suggested and submitted by the secretary, as follows:

Use bonds belonging to S. D. Co. to the extent of $14,000,000 to pay on account of notes due S., H., H., and C. from that Co.
64 at a valuation of, say, 85¢ on the dollar.

This would give $3,500,000 to each of the four, in bonds. Then let the P. I. Co. buy and sell these bonds at same rate from the parties interested, until the accounts are made equal, as follows:

L. S. has due to him	12,471,390.78
Cr. $3,500,000 bonds, at 85	2,975,000.
		$15,446,390.78
C. P. H. has due to him	14,502,341.71
Cr. $1,100,000 bonds, at 85	935,000.
		$15,437,341.71
C. C. has due to him	16,266,454.99
Dr. 1,000,000 bonds, at 85	850,000.
		$15,416,454.99
65 Mrs. H., due to her	17,088,585.70
Dr. 2,000,000 bonds, at 85	1,700,000
		$15,388,585.70

The question of using the bonds of G., H. & S. A. Co. belonging to the S. D. Co. for making payments on the notes of S. D. Co. was discussed with Mr. Pierce, and all agreed that the proposition was a good one.

66 The following communication was sent to board of directors of Galveston, Harrisburgh & San Antonio Railroad Co.:

NEW YORK, October 28th, 1884.

To the board of directors of the Galveston, Harrisburgh & San Antonio Railroad Co.

GENTLEMEN: Whereas the Southern Development Company has constructed a railroad and telegraph line from El Paso to San Antonio, in the State of Texas, under a contract with your company, and has received for said construction 13,416 five per cent first-67 mortgage bonds of $1,000 each, and 3,354 six per cent second-mortgage bonds of $1,000 each, and the capital stock issued upon the said line of railroad and telegraph;

And whereas the difficulties which were encountered in the said construction were greater than were anticipated, involving an unexpected outlay of more than three millions of dollars;

And whereas the Galveston, Harrisburgh & San Antonio Railroad Company have issued an additional amount of second-mortgage bonds to the number of 3,355 of $1,000 each, which it now has on hand in its treasury:

Now, therefore, in consideration of the foregoing premises, 68 the Southern Development Company prays the board of directors of the Galveston, Harrisburgh & San Antonio Railroad Company to vote an additional payment on account of its contract with the Southern Development Company, as part remuneration for the loss it has sustained in the construction of the said railroad and telegraph line, to the extent of the said 3,355 second mortgage bonds which it now has on hand.

Very respectfully,

W. E. BROWN,
President pro tem. Southern Dev. Co.

NEW YORK, Oct. 29, 1884.

Meeting of stockholders of the Southern Dev. Co. at office of Leland Stanford.

Present: Leland Stanford, 10,000 shares; C. P. Huntington, 10,000 shares; Chas. Crocker, 10,000 shares; Mrs. M. F. S. Hopkins, by Timothy Hopkins, 10,000 shares; T. W. Pierce, 10,000 shares.

The following resolution was offered by Chas. Crocker and seconded by Timothy Hopkins:

Resolved, That the board of directors of this company be and are hereby authorized and requested to sell the first and second 70 mortgage bonds of the Galveston, Harrisburgh & San Antonio Railroad Company now owned by the Southern Dev. Co. at the best price they can obtain, but not less than eighty cents on the dollar of their par value and accrued interest. The proceeds of such sale or sales to be applied exclusively to payments on account of outstanding liabilities of the Southern Dev. Co.

The resolution was unanimously adopted.

The following resolution was offered by T. W. Pierce and seconded by Chas. Crocker:

Resolved, That the board of directors of this company be 71 authorized to exchange the capital stock owned by this company in the various railroad companies that constitute the Southern Pac. system, for the capital stock of the Southern Pacific Company, upon such terms as may be agreed upon by the officers of the several companies.

The resolution was unanimously adopted.

General discussion about dividing securities and segregating securities belonging to other companies which are used for collaterals.

Mr. Wilson sends statement of contracts made between Memphis & New Orleans line and parties from whom it was purchased.

1st contract gave them one-sixth of the following securities: 500 miles × $20,000=10,000,000 income bonds; 500 miles × 10,000=5,000,000 stock; which gives them $1,666,666.67 inc. bonds, 833,333.33 stock; $2,500,000.

1st mortgage to be limited to $24,000 pr. mile.

73 2d contract gives them income bonds, 1,333,333.33; stock, 666,666.67; $2,000,000.

1st mortgage limited to $30,000 pr. mile.

Between the dates of the two contracts the sellers of the road had assigned about one-sixth of their interest in the securities to Hobart Smith & Co., who have not as yet fully assented to the provisions of the second contract. Mr. Wilson thinks, however, that they will probably do so.

Mr. Pierce came in and expressed his views as to contract with Wells, Fargo & Co. on Galveston, Har. & San Antonio Rail-

74 road. It was agreed (Mr. T. W. Pierce concurring) that assets of the Southern Dev. Co. may be divided pro rata in kind as far as may be advisable, Mr. Pierce desiring that his proportion of said assets be kept intact, as collateral security for his portion of the indebtedness of the company until said indebtedness was paid.

82 DEFENDANTS' EXHIBIT (LYNCH) No. 22, MARCH 12, 1915.

Resolved, That the proposed suit by the Government of the Unit States to require the Southern Pacific Company to sell the capi stock of the Central Pacific Railroad is not in the public intere nor is there in our opinion any sufficient legal reason requiring th such suit should be brought.

The ownership of the Central Pacific Railroad Company by t Southern Pacific Company does not in any sense constitute a co bination in restraint of trade. On the contrary, the lines of r road owned by the Central Pacific Railroad Company and the li of railroad owned by the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, all which are, and have been since 1885, leased to and operated by t Southern Pacific Company, were built and extended practically one system of railroads and by one ownership and control. T Central Pacific Railroad, the main line of which is from Og to San Francisco, was the original nucleus of this system of r roads. The transcontinental line, of which the Central Pacific R road is a part, was opened for traffic in 1869. The construction of the lines of the Southern Pacific Railroad, connecting with 83 the Central Pacific Railroad, began in 1871. The main line from Goshen to Los Angeles was completed in 1876, and the line from Los Angeles to Fort Yuma was completed in October, 1877. This line was extended eastwardly from Fort Yuma to a connection with the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe R. R. at Deming in March, 1881, with the Texas and Pacific Ry. at Sierra Blanca in January, 1882, and with the Galveston, Harrisburg and San Antonio Ry. at Pecos, Texas, in February, 1883. The capital stock of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company was at all times held in substantially the same ownership and control as the stock of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, and as soon as any section of the Southern Pacific Railroad was opened for operation, it was leased to and operated by the Central Pacific Railroad Company as lessee, which lease continued until February 1, 1885, when the lease of the lines of the Southern Pacific Railroad to the Central Pacific Railroad was cancelled, and a new lease of the Southern Pacific Railroad lines made to the Southern Pacific Company, which at all times since has been the lessee in possession of and operating said lines, such lease being for the term of 99 years. At the same time, the Southern Pacific Company became the lessee of the lines of the Central 84 Pacific Railroad Company for the term of 99 years, and has at all times since been in possession of and operating the lines of that company. The lines of railroad, therefore, comprised in the ownership of the Central Pacific Railroad Company and the Southern Pacific Railroad Company were never in separate ownership or in competition, but have at all times been practically in one ownership and control and have been built up, developed, and operated as a unified system of roads responsive to the demands of the communities served as much as if the same had been in the ownership and control of one company. To separate the ownership of these lines, therefore, breaks up the unified system and naturally impairs the efficiency of that system to serve the community. Such separation leaves the Southern Pacific Railroad without a through line and connection necessary to unite its different branch lines together for operation and also deprives it of terminals and main lines which are essential to the service of the community reached by its lines. Likewise the Central Pacific Railroad in separate ownership and control will be left without terminal properties and connections necessary for its successful operation, all of which will necessarily disturb the service that these lines are now giving 85 as a unified system to the public. We are also persuaded that the evils of the proposed dissolution could not be offset by any compensating advantages to be derived from the proposed creation of two unequal competitors.

Resolved, That this body fully endorses the decision of the railroad commission of California in so far as it gives reasons against the breaking up and separation of the lines now operated by the Southern Pacific Company in California, and we believe that such decision was in the very best interests of the public and should be sustained. We further maintain that there is no business reason for the suggested separation, and such separation would be a commercial injury to the people of this State and against our interest.

SAN FRANCISCO CHAMBER OF COMMERCE,
C. F. MICHAELS, President.

Second. The following are the names of the directors and all other officers of the said company:

Directors: T. G. Phelps, San Mateo, California; B. G. Lathrop, San Francisco, California; W. B. Carr, San Francisco, California; T. B. Shannon, San Francisco, California; Lloyd Tevis, San Francisco, California; Lewis Cunningham, San Francisco, California; Edgar Mills, Sacramento, California.

President, T. G. Phelps; secretary, Lloyd Tevis; treasurer, Edgar Mills.

Third. The amount subscribed of the capital stock of the said company is eighteen thousand shares, of one hundred dollars each, amounting to one million eight hundred thousand dollars ($1,800,000).

The amount actually paid in on the said capital stock is seventy-o thousand dollars ($72,000.00).

Fourth. The following is a description of the lines of the road of id company surveyed and of the lines thereof fixed upon for the nstruction of the road:

Up to this date but few lines have been surveyed and only so much were necessary to commence and carry on the construction of that rtion of the railroad of the company lying between the towns of n Jose and Gilroy, in the county of Santa Clara. The line thus rveyed and finally located is thirty miles in length and runs in arly a direct line between those points. The work of grading that rtion of the road of the company is rapidly progressing and will on be completed. The iron for laying the track on this portion the line has been purchased and shipped and is now on its way to n Francisco, and the company confidently expect to have the said irty miles between San Jose and Gilroy completed on or before the t day of April, 1869.

The company has not deemed it necessary up to this date to prosecute any surveys beyond Gilroy, as for a long distance beyond the line will run through valleys, which need surveys ly as the work progresses.

The actual cost of the surveys up to this date is eighteen hundred nd twenty-nine 50/100 dollars ($1,829.50).

Fifth, sixth, and seventh. As no portion of the railroad of the mpany is yet completed or in running order, no amounts have been ceived from passengers or for freight and no expenses have been curred in running or operating the same.

Eighth. The following is a statement of the indebtedness of said mpany:

The said company has issued to H. M. Newhall, Charles Mayne, nd Peter Donahue, as trustees for its bondholders, four hundred and ighty bonds for one thousand dollars each, amounting to four hun-red and eighty thousand ($480,000) dollars, dated July 1st, 1868, nd payable thirty years from date, with interest at the rate of six er cent per annum, and paid to said parties upon a contract for he construction of that portion of the railroad of said company etween San Jose and Gilroy. These bonds are secured by a mortgage upon said portion of said railroad.

No reports have been made to the company from its engineers or officers.

Officers: President, Chas. Crocker, Sacramento; vice prest., C. P. Huntington, New York; treasurer, Mark Hopkins, Sacramento; secretary, J. L. Willcutt, San Francisco; chief engineer, Geo. E. Gray, San Francisco.

95 Third. The amount subscribed to the capital stock is fifty-two thousand two hundred and forty shares (52,240) of one hundred ($100) dollars each, amounting to five million two hundred and twenty-four thousand ($5,224,000) dollars.

The amount actually paid in on the said capital stock is one million nine hundred and ninety-four thousand eight hundred ($1,994,800) dollars.

Fourth. Two hundred and eighty (280) miles of line have been surveyed, as described in accompanying copy of report of the chief engineer.

The cost of surveys has been thirty thousand and ninety 52/100 dollars ($30,090.52).

Fifth. The amount received for transportation of passengers for the year is two hundred and fifty-six thousand four hundred and ten 13/100 ($256,410.13) dollars.

Sixth. The amount received for transportation of freight for the year is one hundred and forty-four thousand four hundred and forty-four 48/100 ($144,444.48) dollars.

96 Seventh. The expenses of the said road and its fixtures for the year is two hundred and twenty-two thousand four hundred and twenty-seven 06/100 ($222,427.06) dollars.

Eighth. The following is a statement of the indebtedness of said company:

The said company has issued to H. M. Newhall, Chas. Mayne, and Peter Donahue, as trustees for its bondholders, four hundred and eighty (480) bonds for one thousand dollars ($1,000) gold coin each, amounting to four hundred and eighty thousand dollars ($480,000), dated July 1st, 1868, and payable thirty years from date with interest at the rate of six (6) per cent per annum and paid to said parties upon a contract for the construction of that portion of the railroad of said company between San Jose and Gilroy. These bonds are secured by a mortgage upon said portion of said railroad.

The said company having on the 13th day of October, 1870, taken possession of the San Francisco and San Jose Railroad (from San Francisco to San Jose) and a consolidation of the capital 97 stock, debts, property, and assets & franchises of said companies having been made as provided by law, it is also indebted for seven hundred and forty bonds of the last-named company of one thousand dollars ($1,000) gold coin each, amounting to seven hundred and forty thousand dollars ($740,000), the said bonds having been issued by the said San Francisco and San Jose Railroad Company to Charles McLaughlin and Alexander H. Houston as trustees for its bondholders and dated July 1st, 1864, and payable twenty years from date with interest at rate of eight (8) per cent per annum. The said bonds were paid to said parties upon a contract for construction of that portion of the railroad between San Francisco and San Jose and are secured by a mortgage upon said portion of said railroad.

Ninth. The accompanying report of the chief engineer is the only report that has been received from any officer of the company during the year.

99 Southern Pacific Railroad Company—Copy of report of the chief engineer for year ending June 30th, 1871.

To the president and directors of the Southern Pacific Railroad of California:

GENTLEMEN: I herewith report the progress of surveys and continuation on the Southern Pacific Railroad during the current year ending June 30th, 1871.

Since the last annual report of my predecessor the surveys have been diligently prosecuted. Two hundred and eighty miles have been surveyed and explored. Of this nearly the entire distance has been in exploring, from the completed portion of your road at Gilroy, through the different passes over the Mount Diablo range to the San Joaquin Valley. The surface material encountered in these passes in this range is generally a decomposed sand stone, with considerable clay and sand, through which the water has cut deep channels and canons, making the progress of survey a work of time and study.

100 From the data obtained by my predecessors and from the survey continued under my charge we hope to be enabled to lay before you in a few months a detailed report of the work done and the most feasible route for a railroad embraced under your charter. These surveys have progressed necessarily very slow, owing to the mountainous regions traversed and the absence of reliable information of that portion of the State.

A provision of your charter requiring an additional twenty miles of railroad and telegraph line to be completed from Gilroy southward on July 1st, 1871, has been complied with; the twenty miles being completed, equipped, and in running order on June 30th, 1871, and over which excursion trains ran the entire distance from Gilroy to the end of the track on the 1st day of July, 1871.

Respectfully yours, &c.,

(Signed) GEO. E. GRAY,
Chief Engineer Southern Pacific Railroad.

104 Annual report of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company to the Secretary of the Interior, Washington, D. C.

In pursuance of the provisions of an act of Congress entitled "An act relative to filing reports of railroad companies", approved July 25th, 1868, the undersigned, the president of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, presents the following report for the year ending June 30th, 1873:

First. The following are the names of the stockholders of said company, with their places of residence:

County of San Mateo, California; Contract & Finance Co., Sacramento, Cal.; Chas. Crocker, Sacramento; Peter Donahue, San Francisco, Cal.; C. P. Huntington, New York; Mark Hopkins, Sacramento, Cal.; A. E. Head, San Francisco, Cal.; Charles Mayne, San Francisco; H. M. Newhall, San Francisco; Leland Stan-105 ford, Sacramento, Cal.; Lloyd Tevis, San Francisco, Cal.; J. L. Willcutt, San Francisco.

Second. The following are the names and residences of the directors and all other officers of the company:

Directors: C. P. Huntington, New York; Leland Stanford, Sacramento, Cala.; Mark Hopkins, Sacramento, Cal.; Lloyd Tevis, San Francisco, Cala.; Peter Donahue, San Francisco, Cal.; Chas. Mayne, San Francisco, Cal.; J. L. Willcutt, San Fran°.

Officers: President, C. P. Huntington, New York; vice presdt., Lloyd Tevis, San Francisco, Cala.; treasurer, Mark Hopkins, Sacramento, Cala.; secretary, J. L. Willcutt, San Francisco, Cala.; chief engineer, Geo. E. Gray, San Francisco; general superintendent, A. N. Towne, Sacramento, Cala.; land agent, B. B. Redding, Sacramento, Cala.

106 Third. The amount subscribed to the capital stock is one hundred and thirty-one thousand eight hundred and ninety-four (131,894) shares of one hundred (100) dollars each, amounting to thirteen million one hundred and eighty-nine thousand four hundred (13,189,400) dollars.

Fourth. Explorations and examinations of former preliminary lines have been continued since the last fiscal report, amounting to about seven hundred and fifty (750) miles. One hundred and fourteen 50/100 (114 50/100) miles of road have been permanently located and sixty-four 50/100 (64 50/100) miles completed. Twenty (20) miles of this latter distance is on the route from Tipton to Delano and fifty (50) miles on the line from Tehichipa Pass to Fort Yuma, the latter distance commencing at the San Fernando Pass, via Los Angeles, thence towards San Bernardino, terminating about twenty-nine (29) miles easterly from Los Angeles. Forty-two 50/100 (42 50/100) miles have been completed on the branch line in the Salinas Valley. The cost of the surveys to this date has been one hundred and five thousand (105,000) dollars.

107 Fifth. The amount received for transportation of passengers for the year is four hundred and sixty-nine thousand seven hundred and eighty-nine 63/100 (469,789 63/100) dollars.

Sixth. The amount received for transportation of freight for the year is four hundred and eighty-six thousand four hundred and sixty-five 37/100 (486,465 37/100) dollars.

Seventh. The expenses of said road and its fixtures for the year are four hundred and fifty-eight thousand seven hundred and thirty-nine 14/100 (458,739 14/100) dollars.

Eighth. The following is a statement of the indebtedness of the company:

The company has issued eight thousand and fifty (8,050) first-mortgage bonds of $1,000 each gold coin, amounting to eight million and fifty thousand (8,050,000) dollars, all bearing date of November 1st, 1870, and payable on the 1st day of April, 1901, with interest, payable semiannually, at the rate of six per cent per annum.

108 Appended hereto are copies of the annual reports of the general superintendent and land agent for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1873.

Owing to the illness of the chief engineer, his report is incomplete, but the data herewith furnished has been obtained from information on file in his office.

SOUTHERN PACIFIC RAILROAD CO.,
GENERAL SUPERINTENDENT'S OFFICE,
San Francisco, August 8th, 1873.

C. P. HUNTINGTON, Esq.,
President Southern Pacific R. R. Co., New York.

DEAR SIR: Herewith I respectfully submit statement of the operation and business of the road for the fiscal year ending June 30th, 1873, together with comparative statement of the earnings and expenses of the previous year.

San Joaquin Valley Branch.—That portion of the road which is temporarily leased and operated by the Central Pacific R. R.

109 Co. in the San Joaquin Valley from Goshen to Tipton, 20 9/10 miles, was opened up for business July 25th, 1872; also from Tipton to Delano, 20 3/10 miles, July 14th, 1873.

Extension of the road.—The extension of the road in the Salinas Valley from Salinas City to Soledad, distance 25 3/10 miles, is completed and will be put in operation on the 12th inst. This opens up a new section of the country, from which a large increase of business may be expected.

Number of miles road operated:

	Year ending June 30—
	1872.	1873.
Average number of miles operated (exclusive of the above) was	100	121 6/10

SOUTHERN PACIFIC RAILROAD CO., LAND DEPARTMENT,
Sacramento, June 30, 1873.

To the President and Directors of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company.

GENTLEMEN: The route of the road in this State on which the Land Department at Washington ordered the lands to be 110 withdrawn is four hundred and eighty miles long, extending from San Jose through the San Joaquin Valley and Tehichipa Pass to the Colorado River. The reservation of lands extends to the odd-numbered sections for thirty miles on each side of the road, twenty miles of which are directly granted if vacant, and when not vacant a sufficient amount is to be taken from the unappropriated land between the twenty and thirty mile limits to make up the deficiency.

I have obtained the records from the local land offices, which show that there are enough of vacant lands between the twenty and thirty mile limits from which to obtain indemnity for those that are settled upon or reserved within the twenty-mile limit or grant proper. Therefore it is safe to state that the railroad company will receive, upon the completion of the road, the full amount of its land grant, or 6,144,000 acres.

About one-third of this land is situated in the San Joaquin, Tulare, and other fertile valleys in the southern part of the central portion of this State. Of these lands only 62,257 09/100 acres have been contracted to be sold.

Three thousand applications to purchase have been received and filed in this office. Sales could be made daily on the applica-111 tions, but I have deemed it (in the absence of instructions) for the best interest of the company to withhold land from sale until more of the road shall have been completed and patents received. At least fifteen hundred of the applicants have actually settled upon the lands of the company and are improving and cultivating them, thus enhancing the value not only of the land occupied but of those which are contiguous. The fact that ninety miles of the main trunk of the railroad and that sixty miles of the Pajaro and Salinas branch of it have been constructed directly through the grant, as well as the continued influx of population, is having the effect of increasing the average price of the farming land, of which the company has vast tracts in many of the most fertile valleys in the State and those most noted for the excellence of their agricultural products.

The company has built ninety 26/100 miles of the road, which has been accepted by the Government, viz, fifty 26/100 miles, commencing at San Jose, in Santa Clara County, the initial point, and running south therefrom, and forty miles commencing at Goshen, in Tulare County, and running south therefrom to a point within one 2/3 miles north of the town of Delano.

112 Part of the lands between San Jose and the fiftieth 26/100 mile, has been listed in the U. S. land office and are in process of being patented to the company. The Commissioner of the General Land Office is now having prepared a diagram of the definite limits of the grant along the line of the road between Goshen and Delano. As soon as it shall be finished and official copies thereof received at the local land office listings of the lands will be immediately asked for and the same forwarded to Washington for approval and patenting.

When the patents shall be received the lands will be immediately graded and prices fixed. After this the lands will be ready for disposal whenever the board of directors shall order the sales to commence.

Respectfully, &c.,

(Sg'd) B. B. REDDING, Land Agent.

Total	$1,162,738.33
116 Operating expenses	463,674.34
Earnings over operating expenses	$699,033.99

Comparative statement of earnings and operating expenses.—The earnings and operating expenses since the organization of the company have been as follows, viz:

Year.	Earnings.	Operating expenses.	Earnings over operating expenses.
1870 and '71, 9 months, Oct. 1, 1870, to June 30, 1871	$430,097.50	$222,427.06	$207,670.44
1871 and '72	723,856.01	376,278.11	347,577.90
1872 and '73	1,035,311.56	458,739.14	576,572.42
1873 and '74	1,162,738.33	463,674.34	699,063.99

An examination of the above statement will show that while earnings have increased the ratio of operating expenses to earnings has decreased, being 52 per cent in the year ending June 30, 1871, 44 3–10 per cent in the year ending June 30, 1873, and only 39 8–10 per cent in the year ending June 30, 1874.

Financial condition.—The report of the secretary, herewith submitted (see page 29), gives a full exhibit of the earnings and 117 operating expenses, and also of the financial condition of the company at the close of the fiscal year ending June 30, 1874.

The Los Angeles division.—As your board thought that it would be for the best interest of the company to build that portion of your road from Los Angeles via San Gorgonio to Fort Yuma, on the Colorado River, to secure the trade of Arizona and Sonora, before completing the road from the Tulare Valley to Los Angeles, they have built 50 miles on that division during the past year. But as this division is not connected with that portion of the road running out from San Francisco, and as it can hardly be said as yet to have been fully opened for general business, the earnings have been light and are not included in the preceding statement. Since the 1st of April, 1874, the earnings and operating expenses on this division have been as follows, viz:

Month.	Earnings.	Operating expenses.	Earnings over operating expenses.
April	$2,032.31	[1] $2,172.01	.....
May	6,553.09	5,222.07	$1,331.0
June	6,738.94	4,704.47	2,034.4
Total	$15,324.34	$12,098.55	$3,225.7

[1] Deficit, $139.70.

118 The last annual report.—As the last annual report was not published until a late period, and but few copies circulated, the general statements in that report in regard to the organization of the company, the grants from the State of California and the United States, and the business prospects of the road, are repeated in this report.

Organization.—The present organization of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company was effected October 12, 1870, by the consolidation of the following companies, viz, the San Francisco & San Jose Railroad Company, the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, the Santa Clara & Pajaro Valley Railroad Company, and the California Southern Railroad Company, all of which had been duly incorporated under the laws of the State of California. By virtue of the consolidation the new company succeeded to all the rights, privileges, and franchises of the companies above named.

The object of the new corporation was to construct, equip, maintain, and operate a line of railroad from the city of San Francisco to a point on the Colorado River, in the southeastern portion 119 of the State, a distance of, say, six hundred and twenty-nine miles, with a branch from Tehachapi Pass to the Colorado River, at or near Fort Yuma, a distance of, say, three hundred and fifty-three miles.

Grants from the State of California and the city of San Francisco.—Your company has received from the State of California a grant of thirty acres of land, situated in what is known as Mission Bay, in the city of San Francisco, an equal amount having been granted to the Central Pacific Railroad Company.

Since the last report the tracks have been extended down Fourth Street to Louisiana Street, and thence along the water front on that street to Eldorado Street. This extension will secure the object so long desired, the bringing together of ship and car, and will largely increase the earnings of the road.

Land grant of the United States Government.—As before stated, the contract for building the road is such that it leaves to the company, unencumbered, all the lands granted by the act of Congress, excepting the right of way 200 feet wide through the public lands.

The length of road upon which lands have been granted is, 120 say, nine hundred and thirty-two miles. The grant embraces all unoccupied lands designated by odd-numbered sections for twenty miles on each side of the road; and when any of these odd-numbered sections have been reserved or otherwise disposed of the company has the right to select a sufficient amount from the unappropriated lands between the twenty and thirty mile limits to make up the deficiency. From examinations made in the local land offices it has been ascertained that there is a sufficient amount of vacant land between the twenty and thirty mile limits from which to select, in place of land settled upon or reserved within the boundaries of the grant proper. It is therefore safe to say that the company will receive, upon the completion of the road, the full amount of land covered by the grant. The land agent of the company, after a careful examination and classification of the lands, places their value, at a low estimate, at $30,000,000; and it is with much satisfaction that you can contemplate the ownership of this immense property, especially when you consider that its value to yourselves and the country has nearly all been created by your own energy and perseverance.

Your board would recommend that the lands be sold to actual settlers at low rates, according to location and quality, as soon 121 as arrangements for their sale can be completed, as it will be much more advantageous to the company to sell their lands at low prices and have them brought under cultivation at once than to hold them, even though much higher prices could be realized after a few years.

The policy of the General Government in granting each alternate section of land to aid in the construction of railroad lines through those districts far removed from navigable waters is fully justified by the rapid increase in the value of lands along the line of road so constructed.

Before the Southern Pacific Railroad was built, land in some of the great valleys through which it runs was of very little value, and there was no market for it even at the minimum Government price of $1.25 per acre, while now, with the road in operation, it is being rapidly taken up at the price fixed by the Government, which is twice that charged for lands unaffected by these improvements, so that the Government not only receives the same amount of money that it would have received if no grant had been made to the railroad company but also has a market for its lands where there would have been none without the road. And this is not all; the construction of a line of railroad, with all the necessary fixtures and 122 buildings, adds largely to the amount of taxable property in every township through which it passes, and thus tends to lighten taxation on the people who settle along the line of the road.

Prospective business of the road.—There are several considerations that have an important bearing upon the prospective business of your road which demand special notice:

First. The construction of the railroad from Watsonville to Santa Cruz. This railroad will pass through the extensive redwood forest and will afford a vast tonnage for your road, as the timber will find a ready market in large quantities in the Salinas and other valleys long the line. A branch road is also nearly completed from your oad to Monterey, which will give that town an all-rail connection ith San Francisco and bring the business over your road.

Second. The towns and villages through which the Southern Pa-ific Railroad passes afford the most delightful as well as the most ailable suburban residence. San Jose, Santa Clara, Redwood City, lenlo Park, Belmont, and other places equally well located, with a imate that is unsurpassed, with the intelligence and refinement of their citizens, and their educational and religious advantages, 23 afford great inducement to all who are seeking quiet and delightful residences within easy access of the city. Already any of the business men of San Francisco are finding a home be-ond the city limits, and the steady and rapid increase of this sub-rban population guarantees to your road a large and profitable local usiness.

Third. The discovery of extensive deposits of coal in close prox-nity to the line of your road, which can be easily reached as the oad is extended.

When we consider that coal from these deposits can be delivered n San Francisco over the low grades of your road at the minimum st for transportation, and when we consider also the limited supply f coal on the Pacific coast from other sources, together with the ct that the road can supply itself with cheap fuel and secure a large ncrease in its business in the transportation of coal for domestic nd manufacturing purposes, the importance of this interest can not ell be overestimated.

Fourth. The general location of the Southern Pacific Railroad is eculiarly favorable for developing and controlling a large and emunerative miscellaneous business, for it occupies almost the only passes through which a railroad extending from San Fran-24 cisco to the Colorado River can be built, and must therefore command the entire business between San Francisco and the outhern portion of California, as well as nothern Mexico and Ariona. At the Colorado River it will meet the Texas & Pacific Rail-oad, and when this connection is made it will give your road a direct ommunication by rail with all the southern and southwestern por-ions of the United States and the shortest line from San Francisco o New Orleans and the country bordering the Gulf of Mexico, over hich you may look for much of the surplus grain from the southern alf of California to pass on its way to the European market.

Fifth. The country tributary to your road embraces nearly onehird of the entire State of California, say 50,000 square miles. In raversing this large extent of country the road passes through some of the finest valleys in California, such as the San Jose, Santa Clara, Pajaro, Salinas, Tulare, and the large and fertile valleys south of the Sierra Madre, in the counties of Los Angeles and San Bernardino. The soil in those valleys is exceedingly fertile and produces all kinds of vegetables and grain of the temperate zones and most of the fruits of the semitropical regions, such as oranges, lemons, 125 limes, olives, apricots, figs, etc., in great abundance. Recent experiments in the culture of tobacco near Gilroy, where some four hundred acres were planted the past season, have shown that the soil in that part of the State is peculiarly adapted to that crop, the yield per acre being from 1,500 to 2,000 pounds of a superior quality, equal to the best Havana, and from 2,500 to 3,000 pounds per acre of the coarser varieties. Recent experiments have also demonstrated that jute, ramie, and cotton can be grown in great abundance along the line of your road, for which the producer will always find a ready sale and remunerative prices, as these products will bear transportation, and thus have access to the world's markets.

Among the foothills and on the slopes of the mountains are vast tracts of land abounding in wild oats and native grasses, which are very nutritious and afford pasturage for sheep and cattle throughout the entire year; and the temperature is so mild, even in winter, that shelter is seldom required. Nearly all the land in the foothills also produces the grape in great abundance, and much of it is considered the best vineland in the world, as it never fails to yield a crop. There are also immense tracts of timberland covered with redwood, 126 red cedar, pine, and other varieties, which will afford an extensive lumber business for the road; in short, the country traversed by and tributary to the Southern Pacific Railroad has almost every variety of land adapted to every branch of agriculture with a mild and healthful climate, and is already attracting the attention of emigrants from the Eastern States, as well as from the nations of Europe, and is being rapidly taken up along the line of the road and even in advance of its construction.

With all these vast and varied interests awaiting the construction of your road, the villages and cities with their rapid increase of population, the fertile valleys with their great abundance and variety of agricultural resources, the forests with their wealth of lumber, the mines with their vast supplies of coal and untold millions of the precious metals, we think you may reasonably hope for satisfactory dividends on your investments when the road is completed.

We can not, however, ignore the fact that at this time a spirit of hostility against property held in a corporate capacity is being aroused and stimulated among the people by a small portion of the newspaper press and a class of people who never seem happy unless they are disturbing some legitimate interests.

127 The claim advanced is virtually this, in the case of railroads, that having been built and paid for by one company of men, they should be controlled by another who have no interest in them whatever, except as a means of transportation for themselves and the products of their own industry. But ownership and control can no more be separated in the management of railroads than in the conduct of any other legitimate business.

A sense of justice, as well as the necessities of the case, establish the principle that ownership and control must go together. Railroad companies must have passengers and freight to transport or their investment will be unremunerative, and the people along railroad lines must have easy and rapid transportation or the products of their industry would be of little value. And we hope and believe that the time will soon come when property in railroads properly managed will be as safe from excessive taxation, unfriendly legislation, and enormous awards for damages to persons and property as though owned by private individuals, for in the end excessive charges imposed upon the roads must be paid by those who use them.

128 The companies that are employing their time, energy, and capital in constructing, equipping, and operating railroads, and the agriculturists and manufacturers are naturally, and of right should be, allies and not antagonists. And this fact will be fully recognized and understood when the agrarian war cry against corporate property has been placed to more correct views of the relation between labor and capital. That portion of your road now completed and in operation is earning more than sufficient to pay the interest on its bonded debt, and is increasing in value from month to month. Still your board would recommend that the company go forward with the work of construction with great caution, practicing the most rigid economy in operating the completed portion of your road, acquiring all necessary grounds for depots, sidings, machine shops, and other necessary purposes, and thereby strengthening the credit of the company so as to give its securities a high standing in the great financial centers from which the capital necessary for the completion of the road must be drawn; and then when the time comes, as it surely will, that capital invested in good railroad securities will be considered safe, this great work can be carried rapidly forward to completion.

129 In conclusion your president and board of directors would express their acknowledgments to all the officers and employes of the company for their faithfulness and efficiency in the performance of their respective duties.

General superintendent's report.

A. N. TOWNE,
GENERAL SUPERINTENDENT'S OFFICE,
San Francisco, August 21, 1874.

C. P. HUNTINGTON, ESQ.,
President Southern Pacific R. R. Co., New York.

SIR: Herewith I respectfully submit a report of the operation and business of the road for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1874, together with comparative statement of the earnings and expenses of the previous year.

* * * * * * *

Matters in general.—The Southern Pacific Road in the San Joaquin Valley, leased to the Central Pacific, extends from Goshen to the north bank of the Kern River, distance 71 8/10 miles, of 130 which 29 8/10 miles (from Delano to the latter point) were opened up for business August 1st, 1874. The bridge over the Kern River, it is expected, will be completed and trains running into Bakersfield, distant about 2 4/10 miles, as early as October 1st.

The average number of miles of road operated for the year ending June 30th, 1874, exclusive of the above, was 157.2/10.

The number of miles of road in operation August 1st, 1874, was as follows:

San Francisco to Soledad	142.9
Carnadero Junction to Tres Pinos	18
Goshen to terminus (north bank of Kern River)	71.8
Total	232.7

The completion of the Salinas & Monterey R. R. (narrow gauge) is promised by the end of September. Work also has been commenced on the Santa Cruz & Watsonville R. R., connecting with your road at Pajaro. Both of these roads, it is believed, will prove to be quite valuable feeders.

All that was promised concerning the percentage of operating expenses has been more than fulfilled, and the earnings com-131 pared with previous years show a steady increase in both freight and passenger business, which we confidently believe will continue.

It is a source of satisfaction that the road has been operated during the year without accident to its passenger trains, all trains having been run with great regularity and without loss of life or injury to passengers.

My acknowledgments are due to the officers, heads of the different departments, and to the employes for their cheerful cooperation in the successful management of the road.

Respectfully submitted.

A. N. TOWNE, General Superintendent.

132 DEFENDANTS' EXHIBIT NO. 23, MARCH 12, 1915.

(6. Report of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company for the year ending June 30, 1875.)

Annual report of the board of directors of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company to the stockholders for the fiscal year ending June 30th, 1875. San Francisco: H. S. Crocker & Co., stationers and printers. 1875.

Report.

OFFICE SOUTHERN PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY,
COR. FOURTH AND TOWNSEND STREETS,
San Francisco, October 1st, 1875.

To the stockholders:

The board of directors herewith submit the reports of subordinate officers, which give the operations of the road for the fiscal year ending June 30th, 1875, and the financial condition of the company at that date.

Since the last report the company has been reorganized and consolidated with the Los Angeles and San Pedro Railroad Company, under the name of the "Southern Pacific Railroad 133 Company", December 18th, 1874.

Capital stock:

The capital stock of the new corporation authorized is	$90,000,000
The amount of capital stock subscribed is	23,770,330
The amount of capital stock paid in is	22,412,200

Progress of construction.—Since the last report the Western Development Company, which has the contract for building the road, has completed sixty-four and one-half miles of road (up to August 1, 1875), and which is now being operated by the company, as follows:

From Lerdo to Caliente	36 miles.
From Spadra to Colton	28½ miles.
	64½ miles.

Since August 8th, and up to the present writing (October 1st), the track has been laid from Colton to a point seven and one-half miles southerly and beyond San Gorgonio Pass, and twenty-nine miles beyond Colton. The grading is completed to a point 35 miles beyond San Gorgonio, and upon the arrival of rails via Cape Horn, now overdue, track laying will be resumed, and also the grading (which has been temporarily suspended), and the track will 134 be pushed forward to the Colorado River, which can be reached by March next, if the company shall so decide.

Tehachapi Pass.—In the meantime the Western Development Company has been pushing the work of grading your road in the Tehachapi Pass—through the "Sierra Nevada" Mountains—with great energy. They have now employed twenty-nine hundred and sixty Chinese laborers, besides many hundred white as foremen, teamsters, carpenters, masons, and at other occupations, upon forty-three miles of heavy work in this pass. They have also fifteen hundred men employed upon the San Fernando Tunnel, which is proceeding rapidly to completion.

All this work is under the general superintendence of Mr. J. B. Harris, assisted by Mr. Arthur Brown, as superintendent of bridge and tunnel lining. Mr. Harris reports that this work will be advanced so as to permit the commencement of track laying at Caliente about March 1st, and continue on until the connection is made at San Fernando about July 1st next.

Length of road completed Oct. 1st, 1875, is as follows:

135	San Francisco to Tres Pinos	100.5
	Carnadero Junction to Soledad	60.4
Goshen to Caliente		96.0
San Fernando to 7 miles beyond San Gorgonio, via Los Angeles		107.5
Los Angeles to Wilmington		22.2
Total miles		386.6

Earnings and operating expenses.—The earnings and operating expenses for the year ending June 30th, 1875, were as follows:

Earnings:
	Freight	$741,318.25
	Passengers	617,148.70
	Express	21,141.17
	Lighterage, freight	44,879.88
	Lighterage, passenger	14,488.91
	Rental	315,427.45
	Storage	5,191.63
	Miscellaneous	3,313.42
	Mail	14,277.53
136	Telegraph	3,269.60
	Total earnings	$1,780,456

Operating expenses:
Expenses of superintendents	$7,197.28
Station service	103,146.29
Train service	63,214.91
Locomotive service	149,583.52
Telegraph service	447.22

137 Loss and damage (property)	4,091.20
Damages (personal)	1,167.72
Wharf	16,787.62
Steamer and lighterage	21,834.20
Expense of leased roads	123,100.00
Total operating expenses		773,485.52
Net earnings		1,006,971.02

J. L. WILLCUTT, Secretary.

CHAS. J. ROBINSON, Auditor.

Details of repairs and equipment.—For full details of repairs, including cost of same and the running expenses, you are referred to the reports of A. C. Bassett, superintendent of Northern Division (see pages 9 to 20), and E. E. Hewitt, superintendent of Los Angeles Division (see pages 23 to 31).

The report of the secretary.—You are referred to the report of the secretary (see pages 35 to 39) for a full exhibit of the financial condition of the company up to the close of the year ending June 30th, 1875.

It is not deemed necessary at this time to make an 138 extended exhibit of the future prospects of your company in this report, as a pamphlet giving "Description, progress, and business with reference to the financial condition of the company and the value of its first mortgage six per cent gold bonds" has been lately published by the financial agent of the company at New York, Mr. C. P. Huntington, and which is very full and complete.

A copy of this pamphlet will be forwarded to each stockholder.

(Copy.)

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 10th, 1876.

To the president and directors of the S. P. R. R. Co.:

I have the honor to submit the following as my report of the operations of the engineer's department for the fiscal year ending June 30th, 1876.

In our annual report for the year ending June 30th, 1875, it was stated "The road was completed from Sumner to Caliente, a distance of 16 miles", &c. Since that report the construction has progressed steadily from Caliente to San Fernando station, a distance of 124.4 miles.

On that portion of this division embracing the Tehachapi Pass from Caliente to Tehachapi Station, a distance of 25.4 miles, very heavy and expensive work in grading was encountered. The 141 location of this subdivision required careful study and sound judgment. It is on this part of the route where we resorted to a novel expedient to obtain distance and to accommodate the grades to the natural surface of the country.

This was accomplished by taking advantage of a nearly conical butte, circling round it, and then tunneling through a spur of the butte over which the line ran in making the circuit. The circuit is made in a lineal distance of $3{,}794\frac{7}{10}$ feet and a difference in elevation, where the line crosses itself, of $77\frac{5}{10}$ feet. Seventeen tunnels were necessary on this subdivision, having an aggregate length of $7{,}677\frac{1}{10}$ feet.

It is confidently believed, under all the circumstances, this location has been judiciously made and will stand the test of impartial criticism.

The track was laid and ready for the transportation of passengers, mails, and freights from Caliente to Tehachapi station on June 30th, 1876.

From Tehachapi Station to and including San Fernando Tunnel, a distance of $94\frac{2}{10}$ miles, the grading is well advanced. Three tunnels were necessary on this subdivision—two in the Soledad Canon, 142 of an aggregate length of 560 feet, and one in the San Fernando Pass, of $6{,}966\frac{1}{2}$ feet. It is anticipated this subdivision will be completed and an all-rail connection made between San Francisco and Los Angeles, on or before Sept. 15th, 1876.

There has been 5 miles graded and track laid between San Fernando Tunnel and San Fernando station. Trains commenced running carrying passengers, mails, and freights from the tunnel to San Fernando on Jany. 1st, 1876.

In our annual report before referred to it was stated "50 miles from Spadra to San Gorgonio had been graded and the track laid to Colton, and that a contract had been entered into to grade 50 miles from San Gorgonio to near Dos Palms, &c." Since that report the track has been laid from Colton to San Gorgonio, and thence to Indian Wells, in the Cabazon Valley, a total distance from Colton to Indian Wells of $71\frac{1}{2}$ miles.

Trains commenced running carrying passengers, mails, and freights on May 29th, 1876.

Indian Wells, the present terminal of the road, is one hundred and sixteen miles from Fort Yuma, on the Colorado River; the final location of this subdivision has been completed, and the line is now ready for the graders.

143 To recapitulate: There have been completed and brought into operation during the year ending June 30th, 1876, the following subdivisions of railroad and telegraph line, all of which is first class:

	Miles.
From Caliente to Tehachapi Station	24.40
" San Fernando Tunnel to San Fernando	5.00
" Colton to Indian Wells	71.50
Total miles	100.90

Of this distance of 100 90/100 miles there was laid 29 36/100 miles of iron weighing 56 lbs. per lineal yard and 71 54/100 miles of steel rails weighing 50 lbs. per lineal yard.

There has been about 850 miles of line instrumentally surveyed during the year besides many side trial lines, of which no account is here made.

This company have in operation transporting passengers, mails, and freights the following miles of railroad:

	Miles.
From San Francisco to Tres Pinos	100.50
" Carnadero to Soledad	60.40
" Goshen to Tehachapi Station	121.00
" San Fernando Tunnel to Indian Wells	155.20
" Los Angeles to Wilmington	22.25
Total	459.35

144 Extended reconnaissances were made during the year, principally under the charge (in the field) of Isaac W. Smith, Esq., commencing at the terminus of completed road, and thence into Nevada, Arizona & New Mexico, to El Paso, on the Rio Grande.

The first examination was made from Dos Palms in Cabazon Valley, thence to Ehrenberg, on the Colorado River, and thence to Phoenix, on Salt River, just above the junction of this river, with the Gila in Arizona, a distance of about 245 miles.

The information obtained demonstrated it would require a careful instrumental survey to decide the practicability of this route, an instrumental survey is now in progress and will be completed in a few days.

A reconnaissance was made from Los Angeles to San Diego, thence via the different passes through the mountain range lying north and eastward from San Diego, thence to the plains between the mountains and Fort Yuma, all of which has been heretofore reported upon.

An extended reconnaissance was made starting near Camp Cody on the Mojave River, thence to Soda Lake, Ivanport, Los Vegas, 145 the Amargoza Valley, Collville, and the Rio Virgen River. Further examinations in the above directions are desirable.

The reconnaissance from Dos Palms to the junction of the Salt and Gila Rivers was continued from Phoenix to Tucson, Railroad Pass, Camp Bowie to El Paso, and Franklin on the Rio Grande, a distance of 408 3/4 miles. The distance from Indian Wells, the end of the completed road, to El Paso will be about 675 miles. A very favorable route for a railroad was found from the Colorado River to the Rio Grande River with generally easy grades and inexpensive construction if properly located.

Respectfully submitted.

GEO. E. GRAY, Chief Engineer.

(8. Report of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company for the year ending June 30, 1877.)

OFFICE SOUTHERN PACIFIC R. R. CO. OF CALIFORNIA, C. P. HUNTINGTON, AGT. & ATTY.,
No. 9 NASSAU STREET,
New York, Sept. 29, 1877.

Hon. CARL SCHUZ,
Secretary of the Interior, &c., &c.,
Washington, D. C.

SIR: I have the honor to hand you herewith the annual report of the Southern Pacific Rail Road Company (of California) for the year ending June 30th, 1877, which is submitted in accordance with an act of Congress entitled "An act relative to filing reports of rail road companies", approved June 25th, 1868, the receipt of which I will thank you to acknowledge.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

SAN FRANCISCO, July 3rd, 1877.

To the president and directors of the Southern Pacific Railroad:

I have the honor to submit the following account of surveys made by the engineer's department and the additional miles of railroad constructed for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1877.

In our annual report ending June 30, 1876, it was then stated: "The railroad was completed from Caliente to Tehachapi Station and from San Fernando Station to San Fernando Tunnel, and 148 from Colton to Indian Wells (since called Indio, a total distance of 100 9/10 miles, and considerable advancement had been made in grading on other portions of the line." Since that report the construction has steadily progressed.

Grading and track laying was completed from Tehachapi to Mojave, a distance of 20 2/10 miles (and trains commenced running, conveying U. S. mails, passengers, and freights), August 8, 1876.

From Mojave to and including San Fernando tunnel the grading and track laying for a distance of 75 00/100 miles was completed, and trains commenced running, conveying U. S. mails, passenger and freights, September 6, 1877.

Grading and track laying commenced at Goshen Mar. 1st, 187 and was completed to Huron, a distance of 40 miles, Jany. 9, 187 Trains commenced running, conveying U. S. mails, passengers, a freights, Feby. 1st, 1877.

January 1st, 1877, grading and track laying commenced at Ind
(formerly called Indian Wells), and was completed to the Colora River near Yuma, a distance of 118 3/10 miles, on the 20th of Ma 1877, and trains commenced running, conveying U. S. mails, passe gers, and freights, on the 23d of May, 1877.

149 To recapitulate, there has been constructed and brought in operation during the fiscal year ending June 30th the follo ing portions of railroad and telegraph line, all of which is first cla

From Mojave to and including San Fernando tunnel	75
From Goshen to Huron	40
From Indio to Colorado River near Yuma	118
Total completed	253

Of this distance of 253.78 miles the whole has been laid w steel rails, weighing not less than 50 lbs. per lineal yard.

This company now have in operation carrying U. S. mails, p sengers, freights, etc., the following miles of railroad and telegr lines, viz:

From San Francisco to Tres Pinos	10
From Carnadero to Soledad	6
From Huron via Goshen and Los Angeles to the Colorado River near Yuma	52
(x) From Los Angeles to Wilmington (new depot)	2
Total in operation	71

150 (x) This distance includes the "Y" at Goshen, 0 28/100 m
The location of the bridge to cross the Colorado River been fixed upon, and the materials for the same are now being idly delivered for its erection. It is intended to have the br completed by Sept. 1st next.

The bridge will be all of wood, will have a draw of 80 fe the clear, opening placed on a turn-table. There will be five o spans (fixed) of 80 feet each resting on piled piers, driven to rock underlying the bed of the river.

Grading for depot grounds, engine house, and general station purposes are in progress at Yuma, and will be completed on or before the completion of the bridge.

There has been 650 miles of instrumental and experimental lines run in addition to final locations, during the fiscal year, besides a large extent of country examined barometrically east of the Colorado River, the latter having been the subject for special reports.

Respectfully submitted,

(Sgd.) GEO. E. GRAY, Chief Engineer.

Annual report of the board of directors of the Central Pacific Railroad Company to the stockholders for the year ending December 31st, 1872. Sacramento: Record Book and Job Printing House. 1873.

Report.

OFFICE CENTRAL PACIFIC RAILROAD CO.,
Sacramento, July 8th, 1873.

The directors herewith submit to the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Central Pacific Railroad Company such reports of subordinate officers as will give a general resumé of the operations of the road from its commencement up to the 1st of this month, and a particular account of the condition of the company's property and financial condition up to December 31st, 1872.

Your careful attention to these reports is invited.

The capital stock authorized is	$100,000,000.00
The capital stock subscribed is	59,644,000.00
The capital stock paid in is	54,283,100.00
153 Of the amount subscribed there is held in trust for the company	5,333,300.00

Indebtedness.—The debts of the company are:

Funded debt	54,084,000.00
Less sinking fund	878,847.00
	53,205,153.00
United States subsidy bonds	27,855,680.00
Total	81,060,833.00

For detailed statement of funded debt see secretary's report, hereto appended, Table No. 2.

Assets.—The assets of the company are:

1,222 miles main line of railroad and telegraph, with all necessary sidings, turnouts, switches, turntables, depots, depot buildings, roundhouses, and snow galleries, also wharves, slips, piers, and steamers for ferries at San Francisco (cost)	$130,485,678.74
Equipments for same—Locomotives, cars, snowplows, etc. (cost)	5,622,693.04
Real estate purchased for use of road (cost)	968,976.00
154 Shops and machinery (cost)	1,280,223.25
Telegraph instruments, furniture, safes, etc., at stations and offices (cost)	76,602.00
Sacramento River steamers (cost)	830,372.00
Material on hand:
In shops for constructing and repairs (per inventory) (cost)	985,283.25
In store of supply department (per inventory) (cost)	112,769.25
Fuel on hand (per inventory) (cost)	325,048.25
Balance of accounts outstanding after deducting obligations	2,366,130.00
Farming lands—estimated value	29,306,000.00
Undivided half 60 acres land in Mission Bay, in San Francisco; 500 acres water front at Oakland; about 140 acres and water front at Sacramento—estimated value, independent of improvements	7,750,000.00
Cash in hands of treasurer	147,156.00
Total	180,257,024.00

Length of road.—The following statement shows the length of the main line and branches December 31st, 1872:

Division.	Termini.	Length (miles).
Main Line	San Francisco to Junction with U. P. R. R.	883
Oregon Division	Roseville to Redding	152
San Joaquin Division	Lathrop to Goshen	146
San Jose Division	Niles to San Jose	18
Alameda Division	Alameda to Haywards	17
Oakland	Oakland to Brooklyn	6
Total		1,222

The length of side tracks is $110\frac{40}{100}$ miles, equivalent to an aggregate of $1,332\frac{40}{100}$ miles single-track road:

Statement of equipment, Dec. 31, 1872.

Locomotives	184	Platform cars	1,494
First-class passenger cars	93	Section cars	179
Second-class passenger cars	54	Hand cars	222
Palace sleeping cars	21	Dump cars	110
Mail and express cars	15	Track-laying cars	51
Baggage cars	25	Directors and superintendents' cars	2
Caboose cars	38	Wrecking cars	2
Hay cars	1	Snow plows	7
Box freight cars	1,704	Wrecking cars	2
Directors and superintendents' cars	2	Snow plows	7

In the Sacramento shops there have been, in addition to the above, four hundred and thirty-seven cars built since January 1st, 1873; three locomotives, and seven now building and nearly completed. The Miller platform has been put on all the passenger cars, and passenger trains are equipped with the Westinghouse air brakes.

Shops.—There are complete and extensive shops for the construction and repair of locomotives and cars, fully equipped with most approved machinery for that purpose, located at Sacramento (within the city limits), on large and commodious grounds belonging to the company; and also division repair shops, located at San Francisco, Oakland, Lathrop, Rocklin, Truckee, Wadsworth, Winnemucca, Carlin, Toano, Terrace, and Ogden. These shops and the machinery have been largely added to during the year.

Far removed as we are from manufacturing centers, shops complete for the manufacture of cars and locomotives are a necessity, which justifies the liberal expenditure above noted, of $1,280,223.25, made for that purpose, and the large amount of material necessarily kept on hand, at a cost of $1,098,052.47.

San Francisco ferries to and from Oakland and Alameda.—The equipment of these ferries is composed of the following steamboats

With wharves, piers, and slips for their accommodation. One of these steamers, the Thoroughfare, is a large, powerful boat, designed exclusively for transportation of freight trains between Oakland and San Francisco, with track capacity for eighteen cars, besides additional room and pens for sixteen carloads of stock. It is 158 a most decided success, and determines the question of manner of approach to the city of San Francisco.

The railroad hospital.—Located in the city of Sacramento, on ple grounds, is a large and commodious building, built by the com- ny in 1869.

It is under the able administration of Dr. A. B. Nixon, and has lly realized the expectation of its founders.

Every officer and employee of the company contributes monthly fty cents from his pay, as "hospital dues," which constitutes a spital fund to defray the current expenses of the institution. The yment of this monthly hospital due entitles the employee to free mission and medical attendance at the hospital in case of sick- ss or injury while in the service of the company.

Thus far the fund from this source has been sufficient to defray e current expenses of the hospital and pay the interest on its st. There is no reason to doubt it will continue to be self-sus- taining.

The building of this asylum has proved a humane provision against the improvidence too frequent among men, and is garded with favor among employees, tending to attach them to e service of the company.

The actual cost of real estate purchased for railroad terminal and ation purposes on the line of your road is $968,976.06.

Its real value at this time is very much more, as it has been largely hanced since it was acquired, and from natural causes its value will ntinue to increase.

These locations and purchases were made with reference to the ture wants, no less than the present need, of your company, and e believed to be ample to meet all the requirements of its increasing siness for many years to come.

There have been important improvements made at the joint cost the Central Pacific and Southern Pacific Railroad Companies of 52,224. upon the sixty-acre tract of land granted to these companies by the State, at Mission Bay, in the city of San Francisco. Further improvement is deemed unnecessary there until a proper ordinance shall be passed by the city authorities closing certain streets and allowing the cars to reach deep water, which, we 162 understand, the city is now willing to do. At your next annual meeting we hope to be able to report that the necessary concessions have been made and that the track has been extended to deep water, so as to bring the cars and ships together at that point.

At the city of Oakland you have 288 acres most advantageously located, besides 500 acres of water front opposite the city of San Francisco, from which a pier has been constructed to ship's channel that amply meets the present wants of commerce at that point. One hundred and fifteen ships have taken full cargoes of wheat at this pier for foreign ports since the last harvest.

At the city of Sacramento your company was granted 2,800 feet of water front in the most central business part of the town. This grant was confirmed by act of the legislature in 1863. It has since been improved by the construction of docks and tracks covering the entire length; with three stationary engines, derricks, and other needful appliances for the rapid and economical discharge of merchandise and heavy weights to and from cars and water craft. As a business facility, in the interest of the increasing commerce centering at this point, it is exceedingly valuable. In addition to this water-front property, your company owns a connected tract 163 of about 140 acres, conveniently situated within the city limits, on a portion of which its principal shops are located.

At every station on the entire length of your road ample room has been acquired for railroad purposes.

The right of way acquired from the National Government is four hundred feet in width and that derived from individual landowners as far as practicable, is of the same width.

The land grant from the United States Government to the Central Pacific Railroad of 12,800 acres per mile for 742 miles is	9,497,600 acres
Deduct for lands previously granted and reserved, say	1,500,000 acres
Leaves	7,997,600 acres
The land grant to the California and Oregon Railroad of 12,800 acres per mile for 291 miles is	3,724,800 acres
Total	11,722,400 acres

(The grant to the C. & O. R. R. Co. provides that where lands are lost to the railroad company by reason of previous 164 grants or reservations they can be made good from an indemnity grant of ten miles in extent on either side of the twenty-mile limit, which insures to the railroad company the full amount of land granted.)

The value of these lands at the Government minimum price for adjoining lands, $2.50 per acre, would be	$29,306,0

Much of this is the choicest agricultural and timbered land in the untry, and will sell for a much larger price.

The policy of the company has been to sell its farming lands at w prices and on easy terms of payment to actual settlers, believing e best interests of the company are promoted by selling in limited antities within twenty miles of its road to those who will cultivate e soil and who will own the soil they cultivate. By this means we rite an industrious agricultural population, whose improvements d production tend to increase the business of your road and to hance the value of your unsold lands. Most of the lands that have en sold were purchased for gold on a credit of five years, a payment f twenty per cent being made at the time of sale and the remainder in equal annual installments, with annual interest at the rate of ten per cent per annum, payable in advance, on all sums remaining unpaid.

Of these lands there were sold previous to October 1st, 1870, 27,635 $\frac{55}{100}$ acres, which brought the sum of $295,065.50, being an verage of $2.21 per acre.

From October 1, 1870, to December 31, 1872, there was sold 22,765 acres, which brought the sum of $484,227.97, being an verage of $3.93 per acre.

From December 31, 1872, to June 30, 1873, there was sold 20,638 $\frac{71}{100}$ cres, which brought the sum of $132,337.54, being an average of 6.41 per acre.

These sales were made to 1,446 individual purchasers, being an verage of about 187 acres to each buyer.

This annual advance in the average price of lands sold indicates he increasing value of the unsold lands of your company, and when iewed in connection with the annual increase of the business of our road, fully justifies the policy of selling, as far as practicable, o the actual settler for cultivation.

The active competition with the California Pacific Railroad Company for the traffic between Sacramento and San Francisco, which existed in 1871, was terminated by mutual agreement between that company and your own, by which the Central Pacific guaranteed the payment of 1,600 of the twenty-year six per cent mortgage bonds of the California Pacific Railroad Company, for $1,000 each, which arrangement has proved highly advantageous to your company in a financial point of view.

Since the construction of your road to a junction with the Union Pacific at Ogden, there has been added to it by construction and consolidation, 480 miles, viz: Western division, 141 miles; Oregon division, 152 miles; San Joaquin, 146 miles; San Jose, 18 miles; Alameda, 17 miles; Oakland, 6 miles. All these additions to the main line have proven at once profitable investments, adding to and with themselves increasing the pro rata earnings and net income of each mile of the whole.

These additions, like the stem line, have mostly penetrated a sparsely settled and undeveloped country, but of vast resources, and together they may be said to command the entire scope of the San Joaquin and Sacramento Valleys, and all the country, in fact, whose business shall seek the Pacific. The Sacramento and San Joaquin Valleys—the two great valleys of California—alone comprise an area of 480 miles in length by an average of 70 miles in breadth, or 167 21,504,000 acres of arable land, susceptible of varied and most profitable cultivation, which must bring a very large traffic to your road as soon as they shall be brought into culture, and which is confidently expected in the near future.

From the valley of the Sacramento to Ogden the Truckee and the Humboldt Rivers alone offer a practicable pass through the range of mountains that occupy so largely the country from the Wahsatch to the Sierra Nevada, lying parallel to them and running north and south. The natural and only drainage of all that vast country for hundreds of miles north and south is to the lines of your road, and it is the same with the drainage of the great valley system of California. Your lines are so laid with reference to the topography and passes of the country that these valleys and their tributaries are completely commanded, and hereafter the construction of all lines of railroads in this vast country of hundreds of thousands of square miles must prove feeders to your lines.

It is not too much to assume that no railroad system in the world is so comprehensive as this, which nature has pointed out, and 168 of which your company has been so fortunate as to secure and develop. It is the very key to the commerce of the Pacific.

The results of the operations of your roads for the year 1872 are more than satisfactory; they are conclusive of preeminent financial success. Though your lines command this vast country so rich in mineral, agricultural, and manufacturing resources and of great commercial advantages, it is but sparsely occupied and but slightly developed, and your roads only fairly opened for business. Your interest account necessarily is large, consequent upon the cost of your roads.

The natural difficulties to be overcome upon the main line were immense. During the period when that work was being performed the War of the Rebellion was raging. Material was at war prices. The bonds received from the Government, as well as your own mortgage bonds, were sold for currency which had to be converted into gold at a great sacrifice. Yet the year 1872 shows the ability of your roads to take care of themselves and pay interest with a handsome balance over. With the population and development that is certain n the future, the annual increase of business for years to come will ontinue; as the causes remain, but with growing force, great financial success therefore is assured.

169 On the original line from Sacramento to Ogden, as well as upon the other parts, large expenditures have been made in perfecting them since they were opened for business, until now they are in such a state of completeness as to tracks, depots, machinery, snow galleries, docks, wharves, and terminal accommodations and supplies on hand that you may reasonably expect dividends upon your shares from this time on. Heretofore the net earnings have gone to construct and bring your property to its present state of completeness and effectiveness.

At the present time the question of control of railroads is somewhat agitated. Congress in the Pacific Railroad act, section 18, says: "And be it further enacted, That whenever it appears that the net earnings of the entire road and telegraph, including the amount allowed for services rendered for the United States, deducting all expenditures, including repairs and the furnishing, running, and managing of said road, shall exceed ten per centum upon its cost (exclusive of the five per centum to be paid to the United States), Congress may reduce the rates of fare thereon, if unreasonable in amount, and may fix and establish the same by law." This 170 takes the control of freights and fares on the Pacific railroads from the States and Territories through and into which they run, and leaves the question entirely with Congress, in accordance with the section above quoted. The principle embraced in the act of Congress, that the companies are to control their business unmolested, in any event, until a fair return is had upon their investment, must prevail for all railroads.

Ownership and control must be inseparable. If the owners in a business are not to control, but its management and control to be by those who do not own, then that business cannot be prosecuted.

But the necessities of the case and the sense of justice will establish it as a principle that ownership and control in railroad matters, as in other legitimate business, must go together.

During the past year much has been said about the relations of your road to the Government. Your board of directors are much pleased to be able to state that the company has more than fulfilled every obligation arising out of its contract with the Government, and has saved to the Government, by its rapid construction and consequent opening for business (seven years earlier than its 171 contract required), more millions than the company netted in gold from the bonds received from the Government. All the additions are consolidated with the main line, and are equally with it security to the Government for its loan, and these addition are and will ever be more valuable per mile than the greater part o the main line.

To confound the ignorant or malicious caluminators of you company you can point to the record of what you have done and t the contract under which you did it. By the contract you will abid and by it be judged, asking no favors, only justice; but if the equitie are to govern you can well afford to go into an accounting of mutu benefits and stand by the balance sheet.

To give to the Government and the country the benefits of you road seven years earlier than the contract required cost your com pany probably not less than ten (10) millions of dollars more tha it would have cost had the full time been taken for constructio which the contract allowed. One of the reasons for the sacrifice t secure rapid construction was the absolute necessity of reaching th Great Salt Lake Valley in time to meet the Union Pacific there, s that we might command the business to that point and to th 172 north and south of the line and secure the fair advantages d the expensive work of the "Sierras." Almost any sacrifi was justified by this consideration, but the Government and the cou try have none the less the benefit of the sacrifice. And even yo company, besides having secured the advantage consequent upo making the junction with the Union Pacific at Ogden in the Gre Salt Lake Valley is in great measure compensated by having th benefits arising from the use of the road so early and the develo ment of business so much in advance of what otherwise would be th case. But no one could at that time foresee the great developme of local business consequent upon the construction of your roads in the then unoccupied country between the valley of the Truckee a that of Salt Lake. It is a suggestive fact that between these valle a distance of nearly six hundred miles, where now there is a bu ness such as demands lateral lines of railroads for its accommodatio there lived at the time when your road was commenced but one whi man. The reports of other roads, so far as they have come to o knowledge, show no such wonderful increase of business yearly you will perceive, has been made by your roads. But we can n clearly see that they will be greater in the future.
173 The immigration this year promises to be more than doul that of any year since the junction of the roads at Ogden.

The wealth of our soil, as exhibited in its great wool, grain, a vine productions, and the advantages of climate are attracting tention that must each year largely increase the flow of immigrati

The trade of the Pacific Ocean, centering at the bay of San Fr cisco, shows a remarkable growth, and is a foretaste of the gr business that is to come from the exchange of productions with eming millions of the islands of the Pacific Ocean and the coun-ies bordering upon it.

Altogether the prospects of your company are bright, and you ave the satisfaction of knowing at the same time you have per-ormed a most beneficent work in opening up to settlement a country therwise in great part inaccessible for development.

74 Chief Engineer's Report, S. S. Montague.

Report of the Chief Engineer.

ENGINEER'S OFFICE, C. P. R. R.,
Sacramento, July 1, 1873.

To the President and Directors of the Central Pacific Railroad:

GENTLEMEN: In presenting a general report of the progress of sur-eys and construction and of the present condition of your road it will, I presume, be unnecessary to trace in detail the history of the ork from its inception, as most matters of interest in this connec-ion have from time to time been placed before you.

The most important works undertaken by your company since the onnection of the main line with the Union Pacific Railroad have een confined to the State of California, and have been designed as part of a general railroad system comprehending in its plan the evelopment of the great interior valleys of the State, and pro-viding suitable means of communication between them and 75 the most eligible point for the connection of inland and ocean commerce.

In furtherance of this plan the construction of the Western Pa-ific had been commenced previous to the completion of the track on he main line and the connection of the Central Pacific and Union acific roads, and was opened for traffic in the fall of 1869, thus orming an unbroken line from Omaha to San Francisco Bay.

Simultaneously with the construction of the Western Pacific, ork was commenced on the extension of the California and Oregon ailroad. This road was in operation previous to 1868 to a point out seven miles south of Marysville, and it was pushed rapidly rward to the town of Redding, Shasta County, one hundred and venty miles from Sacramento, and, by the line of our preliminary rvey, one hundred and thirty-nine miles from the northern undary of the State.

The construction of the road thus far, through the counties of lacer, Sutter, Yuba, Butte, Tehama, and Shasta, has developed me of the best agricultural lands of the State, and will render productive a large region heretofore uncultivated and unpopulate for want of facilities for transporting grain and other products market.

176 The certainty of the grain crop, in the northern part the valley especially, will always render farming lands the very desirable, and the appreciation of real property since the co struction of the road is ample evidence that its advantages are n overlooked by those seeking investments in that direction.

The fine grazing region in the northern part of this State a southern Oregon is already being occupied, and the products these large districts, when fully stocked with sheep and cattle, m find an outlet to a market over your line. Added to this may mentioned the business of the thrifty mining and agricultural po lation of Siskiyou and adjoining counties, and the transportati of lumber from some of the best pineries in the State. Large posits of marble and iron are known to exist in convenient proxim to the line, which will undoubtedly be worked with profit at an ea day. Valuable deposits of coal have already been discovered Shasta County, but have not yet been worked extensively, and simi discoveries have been reported in the adjoining counties on the no

The connection of this line with the Oregon and Califo

177 Railroad, or its construction as an independent line to Columbia River, will make this one of the most import routes of travel on the Pacific coast, and will be sought not by the business community, but by tourists, to whom it will open of the most interesting fields for pleasure and observation that yet attracted their attention.

Not less important than the California and Oregon is the Joaquin Valley Railroad, forming the great southern, as the fo does the northern, arm of the system.

Both of these roads, since their commencement, have been co dated with and are now known, respectively, as the Oregon and Joaquin divisions of the Central Pacific Railroad. The latter verging from the main line at Lathrop, runs southeasterly in a n direct line for a distance of one hundred and forty-six miles to shen, where it connects with the Southern Pacific Railroad, whi already constructed from this point to Delano, a distance of forty-one miles further south, and is ultimately, as I understan be extended southerly through the State to the Colorado River, forming an important feeder to this part of your road, making fact, a link in the great southern transcontinental route, 178 must eventually find its most eligible terminus at San cisco Bay. In view of its importance in this respect, a as with regard to the heavy local traffic which must result fro development of the agricultural resources of this valley, the ro been constructed upon a maximum grade of ten and one-half feet per mile ascending and with a grade of but five and one-fourth feet per mile against freight descending the valley. The alignment is also very favorable, the total curvature after leaving Lathrop being, in a distance of one hundred and forty-six miles, but two hundred and fifty-five degrees, with a minimum radius of five thousand seven hundred and thirty feet.

This great valley, extending from the confluence of the San Joaquin and Sacramento Rivers, southeasterly for a distance of two hundred and forty miles, with a width of from sixty to seventy miles, nearly all susceptible of cultivation, is as yet sparsely populated, though the large grain shipments from the comparatively small area under cultivation fully attest its value as a grain-producing region.

With the completion of the system of irrigation already in contemplation by resident and foreign capitalists, and for which 179 the topography of the country is admirably adapted, the population of this valley must rapidly increase; and when this is accomplished its productive capacity can hardly be overestimated.

Work has already been commenced on one of the principal irrigating canals, and it is confidently expected that more extensive operations will soon be inaugurated, looking to the speedy development of a large area, now comparatively useless except for grazing purposes.

The general business anticipated upon this, as well as upon the Oregon Division of your road, has thus far been more than realized; and although these lines now command the greater portion of the business of the mining districts of the Sierra Nevada, as they do the business of the valley, it is thought that the construction of lateral lines may at many points be made remunerative, tending to develop local enterprises which are now languishing for lack of a cheap and expeditious means of communication with the main lines leading to the seaboard.

The vast forests of pine and other valuable timber which abound in many parts of the Sierra Nevada; valuable ore deposits undeveloped or but indifferently worked, for the reasons just men-180 tioned; and towns that were once the centers of busy mining districts are waiting for this communication with the valleys and coast, and promise remunerative returns when it shall be provided.

The topography of California and the country lying between the Sierra Nevada and Wahsatch Mountains is such that the business of the country must naturally flow towards, and find its outlet over, your road; in fact, can not avoid centering upon your line. Hence the construction of lateral roads in this country must necessarily become feeders to your own.

The Virginia and Truckee Railroad, connecting with the Centr Pacific at Reno, is an important illustration, and the impulse i construction has given to business in Virginia, Gold Hill, and vici ity warrants the belief that many similar enterprises will soon inaugurated in Nevada and elsewhere. Surveys are already bei made for a railroad from Elko to Eureka, White Pine, Pioche, a other important mining districts. The Utah Northern and Ut Central roads, extending north and south, respectively, through t fertile and populous valleys of Bear River and Great Salt La both form important connections with, and already bring a lar amount of business to, your line.

The construction of the San Pablo and Tulare Railro 181 which is already graded from Fassett (on the Central Paci Railroad) to Antioch, will place you in connection with roads leading to the Mount Diablo Coal Mines, and will enable to receive and distribute coal for use on the road at much less th the present cost, and its distribution for use throughout the St must make this an important item for local freight.

Location and construction.—The history of the location of Central Pacific Railroad across the Sierra Nevada, and thence to S Lake Valley, having been referred to in detail in former reports is, I presume, unnecessary to repeat it here.

The heavy grades and sharp curves necessarily adopted in locat a railroad line across this formidable range, of course render its eration very expensive, though not more so than was anticipated.

In the construction of the road it has been the aim to bring it to the standard of the first-class roads of the country. Embs ments and excavations have been made of ample width, and the is well balanced. Where the material composing the roadbed not suitable for this purpose it has been transported from 182 most available localities, though in some cases it has found necessary to haul long distances.

On the mountain divisions, as well as elsewhere, where stone c be procured, all culverts and bridge piers have been built of material, but in the valleys it has generally been found necessa substitute wood for structures. In such cases, whenever it coul obtained, redwood or cedar has been used.

The redwood, so well known on this coast, closely resemble cedar in appearance, and fully equals it in durability. It has used almost exclusively for ties on the valley roads, as well a such portions of trestle and culvert work as are most expos decay.

For bridges and the superstructure of trestlework on the roads, Puget Sound pine has been used almost exclusively, an purposes where rigidity and strength are both essential qualities it has no superior among American woods.

Owing to the periodical rise and overflow of the principal streams in the Sacramento and San Joaquin Valleys, it has been found necessary to introduce trestlework or piling for the approaches to 183 many of the principal bridges, where otherwise embankments would not only have been more desirable, but would also have been cheaper, and the circumstances which required the construction will also require the maintenance of this work or its replacement with some more durable material. This, however, is not an immediate necessity, as the present structures may generally be depended on for several years without extensive repairs.

Your road first reached San Francisco Bay by a connection with the San Francisco and Oakland and San Francisco and Alameda Railroads, since consolidated with the Central Pacific Railroad.

The wharves in use by those roads had been built with a view to the accommodation of the Oakland and Alameda ferry business, and were extended only to a depth of water sufficient to meet the boats used upon those lines. Extensive additions were at once made to the Alameda Wharf for the temporary accommodation of the overland and interior freight, which was discharged there upon lighters, towed across the bay, and delivered to consignees at the Second and King Street Wharf, at which point freight for shipment on the road was also received, thus making San Francisco, practically, the 184 terminus of the overland road as soon as the rails were laid to the eastern shore of the bay.

With the constantly increasing overland as well as local freight the necessity for some more expeditious method of handling it soon became apparent, and the steamer Oakland was accordingly fitted up as a car-ferry boat, carrying five loaded cars; and suitable slips being provided at Alameda and Second Street Wharves, freight was thus landed in San Francisco with but little delay and without breaking bulk.

Meantime, work had been commenced at Oakland Wharf with the view of extending it to ship's channel and providing suitable slips for the reception of the largest sea-going vessels, as well as for the boats in the regular passenger and freight ferry service.

The length of this wharf when it came into the possession of your company was about 6,900 feet, with a width sufficient for a railroad track and a roadway for teams, having at the terminus a single slip for the ferryboat El Capitan.

The plan adopted for its extension consisted of a new track for the main overland line, connecting with the old wharf about 4,000 feet from the Oakland shore and running parallel with the same to its terminus; and thence the extension of the wharf for a dis-

185 tance of about 4,200 feet, with a width sufficient for three parallel tracks and a roadway for teams; the construction of three slips, one for the passenger boat El Capitan, one for a new car-ferry boat, and one of sufficient capacity to hold four large ships, with warehouses alongside for the temporary storage of grain when vessels were not at hand to receive it. Outside of these slips there is an available frontage on either side of more than four thousand feet, where vessels lie with convenience and safety.

Extensive passenger depots were also provided for, and every arrangement made for the rapid transshipment of passengers and freight.

A new freight ferryboat with a capacity for eighteen loaded cars and additional room for sixteen carloads of loose stock was built and ready for use as soon as the new wharf was completed, in January, 1871, since which time all of the freight and passenger business of the company's roads has been concentrated at this point. Recent extensive additions have been made for the reception and storage of lumber awaiting shipment by rail. The construction of this 186 wharf has consumed 7,006,875 feet board measure of timber and plank, 848,658 lineal feet of round piles, and 215 tons of iron.

In manner of construction and for excellence of material, I think this may safely challenge a comparison with any similar structure in the world. Its efficiency for the purposes intended is best attested by the convenience and economy with which freight is handled and transshipped, and the security it affords the largest vessels, many of which have lain in its slips during the heaviest storms that have occurred since its construction, and with much less inconvenience than was experienced by vessels on the opposite side of the bay.

During the past year there have been loaded here with grain 110 vessels, carrying 161,135 tons, and all the local and overland freight received at or shipped from the terminus at San Francisco over your road, as well as all lumber, timber, ties, iron, and other material for use on the road, passes over this wharf.

The stability of this structure has as yet been unaffected by the action of the currents or by the heavy storms which at times prevail in the bay of San Francisco, and although it can not be re-

187 garded as permanent, its life will greatly exceed that of the San Francisco wharves, where the ravages of the teredo have been so destructive to all wooden structures exposed to their attacks.

The immunity of the wharves on the eastern side of the bay from the attacks of the teredo is undoubtedly due to the fresh water from the Straits of Carquinez, which, at certain stages of the tide, flow along this shore.

The experiment of using piles treated by the "Robbins process," as a preventive both against decay and the work of the teredo, has been made at Oakland Wharf, and also in some of the new work at Second Street and in Mission Bay. The piles so treated have thus far withstood the attacks of the teredo, and, it is to be hoped, will continue to do so, as any process by which timber and piles may be treated, at a reasonable cost, and render it safe from the destructive agencies referred to, must prove of great value to your company, as well as to the public.

Work at San Francisco.—The additions which had been made to Second Street Wharf, San Francisco, though occupying all the available space south of Townsend Street, soon proved inadequate to the wants of the rapidly increasing freight business, and 188 early in 1871 steps were taken for its better accommodation. The block of ground lying between Fourth and Fifth, King and Townsend Streets was purchased as a site for temporary freight depots, and the use of the adjacent block west of Fifth Street and the greater portion of the block east of Fourth Street was also secured for yard purposes. Work was commenced on the buildings early in 1872. Meanwhile a new slip had been constructed for the steamer Thoroughfare (new car ferryboat) at the foot of King Street, and a double track was laid through King Street to the blocks above named, there connecting with ten parallel tracks, extending from Fourth to Sixth Streets, and two tracks on Townsend Street.

Two large buildings for the receiving and delivery of freight were also erected—one fifty feet in width, fronting on Townsend and extending from Fourth to Fifth Streets, and the other seventy-five feet in width, fronting on King Street, and likewise extending from Fourth to Fifth Street, a distance of eight hundred and twenty-five feet. The freight offices are in the second story of the latter, and the two buildings are connected by a footbridge over the ten tracks above noted. The general arrangement of the yard and buildings are, 189 it is thought, the best of which the space occupied will admit; and the advantage of separate buildings for receiving and delivering, where so large an amount of freight is daily handled, must be apparent to anyone who has experience in the business.

A large amount of work has been done in Mission Bay conjointly with the Southern Pacific Railroad Company—wharves covering an area of nearly seven acres have been built, and two depots, 60 x 300 and 60 x 500 feet, respectively, have been erected thereon. Tracks have been laid connecting these depots and wharves with the main tracks at Fourth and Townsend Streets. Spur tracks have also been laid from King Street to the Pacific Mail Steamship Company's wharf, at the foot of Beale Street, and to Hooper's warehouse, between Berry and Channel Streets. The former is a most important connection, as it brings the cars within a convenient distance of the China steamers, thus facilitating the transshipment of teas, silks, and, in fact, of all Asiatic freight seeking overland transit. It may be noted here that it is only on those wharves not directly under the control of the State or city government that this connection of ship and car has been accomplished, and until further action of the proper authorities shall have removed the present restrictions 190 which prevent the bringing together of ship and car in Mission Bay, you will be unable to use to advantage the property already acquired there for depot purposes. The new buildings and yard in San Francisco have now been in use for more than a year, and although the amount of business is already large, it is thought they will be found adequate to the requirements for two or three years to come, or until the grading of the Mission Bay lands and the erection of permanent depots thereon shall have been accomplished. An important feature of the improvements made by your company in this part of the city is the new building for your general offices. It is located on the corner of Fourth and Townsend Streets, fronting one hundred and eighty feet on each, with a depth of sixty and seventy feet, respectively. It is three stories high, built of brick upon a pile foundation, with front of pressed brick, and is constructed throughout in the most thorough and substantial manner. It contains seventy-seven rooms and was planned especially with a view to the convenience of the several departments by which it is to be occupied.

I omitted to mention a large amount of grading in Mission Bay, consisting of a wide embankment extending from Channel 191 Street southerly on the eastern line of Illinois Street to the Potrero, at which place the greater part of the material for the work was obtained. This work was also done conjointly with the Southern Pacific Railroad Company and is preliminary to the work of reclaiming the lands granted by the State to the two companies for depot purposes. The expenditures upon the work south of Channel Street have already amounted to $352,224.

Shops.—The construction of shops for the motive power and car departments was, of course, coincident with the construction of your road. Sacramento being a central and convenient point for the principal manufacturing and repair shops, it was early decided to locate them at this place, and the small structures at first required have gradually given place to the present large and commodious buildings, consisting of a roundhouse with stalls for twenty-nine locomotives; a machine shop one hundred by four hundred feet; car shop, ninety by two hundred and thirty feet, two stories high, with wing ninety by three hundred and ten feet; paint shop, two hundred and twenty-five by seventy feet, with five wings each twenty-four by seventy feet;

blacksmith shop, two hundred and fifty feet long, of which one 192 hundred and forty-five feet are sixty, and the rest ninety feet in width; boiler shop, sixty by one hundred and seventy feet; foundry, one hundred and twenty by eighty-three feet; copper shop, fifty-two by seventy feet; and a supply store, thirty-four by sixty feet. All of these shops are supplied with tools and machinery of the latest and most approved kind, and for economy and class of work produced are unsurpassed by any similar works in the country.

The necessities of your work will soon require a rolling mill, for which Sacramento will be a convenient location.

The car and machine shops, blacksmith shop, and roundhouse are built of brick, the others of wood. The ground upon which these buildings are located has mostly been reclaimed from what was formerly a swamp, and has been filled from a depth of ten to twenty-five feet, and the work of grading is still in progress, the necessity for more room in the near future being already apparent. About twelve hundred men are regularly employed in these shops.

In addition to the above, division repair shops have been erected 193 at San Francisco, Oakland Point, Lathrop, Rocklin, Truckee, Wadsworth, Winnemucca, Carlin, Toano, Terrace, and Ogden. Commodious depot buildings, adapted to the wants of the business, have been erected at the principal stations, and the necessary provision made for the storage of fuel and water.

Snow galleries.—A novel and important feature of the work on the Sierra Nevada has been the construction of galleries for the protection of the track from the heavy snowstorms incident to that region. The experiment was first made of covering the track in the cuts only, depending upon snowplows for clearing the embankments, but experience soon proved that where snow was liable to accumulate to a great depth its removal even from the high embankments would incur great expense and often delay the movement of trains; and it was therefore deemed best to make the covering through the deep snow belt continuous. More than thirty miles of these galleries were built, consuming 44,639,552 feet, board measure, of sawed timber, and 1,316,312 lineal feet of round timber, equivalent in the aggregate to 52,537,424 feet, board measure, of sawed timber, and 721 tons of iron and spikes. Two general styles of construction were 194 adopted—one intended for localities where the weight of the snow only had to be supported, and the other for such places as were exposed to "slides" and the slower but almost irresistible "glacial movement" of the snow on the steep and rocky slopes along which a great portion of the road near the summit was built.

A detailed description of the manner of constructing these galleries would occupy too much space for this report, but I need only say that they have proven a complete success, and though frequently covered with drifted snow to a depth of ten or twenty, and, in some places on the slope of Donner Mountain, of more than fifty feet, they have afforded a safe passage for trains through this inclement region at all times and seasons without any noticeable detentions.

As a security against fire the wooden coverings of sections of the sheds, of from one hundred to two hundred feet in length, at intervals of one-fourth to one-half mile, is being replaced with galvanized corrugated iron, and this work will be extended as rapidly as the material can be procured.

Present condition of the road.—The necessary repairs of track, bridges, buildings, wharves, etc., have been kept up, so that, with the exception of the unavoidable wear of track incident to the 195 heavy business of the road, it is at present in better condition than at any time since its construction.

In consequence of the heavy grades and sharp curves on the mountain divisions the life of the iron on that part of your road must always be much less than on the lighter grades of the valleys, and the renewal of some portions of the mountain track has already been found necessary. During the past year there have been received two thousand and fourteen tons of steel rails, weighing sixty pounds per yard, sufficient for twenty-one and a half miles of track, most of which has already been laid upon the mountain division. The superiority of this over iron rail, especially where exposed to the heavy service of your main lines, both on the mountains and in the valleys, can not be questioned. Its use on eastern roads is highly commended wherever it has been tried, and that the truest economy will always be found in the use of the best procurable materials, not only in track but all railroad structures, can not be doubted.

As a matter both of utility and experiment, a small amount of this steel rail has been laid on Oakland wharf and in the yard at San Francisco, at points exposed to excessive wear, and the result 196 has been very satisfactory. In one locality they have already outlasted three sets of iron rails, and the wear on the steel rail is almost imperceptible. I would recommend to your board the propriety and economy of providing steel rail not only for the mountain track but of the whole of your main lines as rapidly as the renewal of the rail may be necessary. The renewal of a considerable number of ties on the Truckee, Humboldt, and Salt Lake divisions has already been found necessary.

The ties laid between Promontory and Ogden, which were obtained on the Wahsatch and Uintah Mountains, have been found to decay most rapidly, the quality of the timber found on those ranges being evidently inferior to that of the Sierra Nevada, from which source most of the ties used between Blue Canon and Promontory have been obtained. A great difference is noticed in the life of the ties laid on the sandy and gravelly soil of the highlands and the strongly saline and alkaline soil of the river bottoms and "sinks" east of Wadsworth.

In the former most woods are found to decay more or less rapidly, while in the latter the ties are still as sound as when first laid.

Besides the ordinary repairs, a large amount of work 197 has from time to time been done in the widening of deep cuts, where the material has been loosened by blasting and in additions to the high embankments.

Bridges and trestles.—All of the bridges on your road are in good condition.

The only renewals of bridges required thus far have been to supply losses by fire, which have occurred in a few instances. All bridges over sixty feet span are of the "Howe truss" and are equal to the best class of wooden structures.

The ultimate replacement of these structures with iron bridges will undoubtedly be found advisable, but they may be safely depended upon for many years yet as safe against ordinary causes of decay.

The trestle work found necessary to introduce in the first construction has in some instances been replaced with stone culverts and embankments, and elsewhere it has been kept in thorough repair. Between Promontory and Blue Creek the line has been changed so as to avoid the two high trestles over which the track was originally laid, and at Blue Creek a stone arch culvert has been built, and the high trestle at that place replaced by an embankment.

198 A number of the smaller trestles, twenty or more, at different points on the Salt Lake and Humboldt divisions have been similarly replaced.

On the Sierra Nevada two trestles have already been filled, one near Colfax and one near Clipper Gap; another, crossing Deep Gulch about a mile east of Clipper Gap (the highest structure of the kind on the road), will soon be abandoned for the track just built upon a new line (without trestle), crossing the gulch just above the old one.

This change of line was necessary, as it was not deemed prudent to build an embankment on the old line and maintain the trestle at the same time. This change has materially improved the alignment, but has involved the necessity of an open cut of 90,000 and an embankment of 70,000 cubic yards, a tunnel 700 feet in length, with approaches of 100 feet on either end. Five hundred feet in length of this tunnel has been lined with granite masonry, with portals of the same material.

The other trestles, between and including those at Newcastle and Secrettown—seven in number—have recently been thoroughly repaired, and may safely be depended upon for three and prob-199 ably four or five years. To replace these, embankments aggregating 653,000 cubic yards will be required at a probable cost not to exceed forty cents per yard.

The long trestle forming the northern approach to the American River bridge has just been repaired, and may now be considered good for five years, and probably longer. This, like other similar structures in the valley, already referred to, must always be maintained.

The force at present employed on repairs of track, bridges, etc., is lighter than at any previous time since the road has been in operation, and it is thought that the expenses properly chargeable to this account may be kept within the present cost. The rapidity with which the track will require renewal will, of course, depend largely upon the amount of tonnage carried over it and the speed with which it is moved, and, as before mentioned, I would most earnestly recommend that whenever renewals of any kind become necessary they be made with the best and most durable materials. Though not always practicable in the first construction, permanent structures are in the end the most economical, and the amount of business that may be reasonably anticipated for your road will certainly warrant their adoption in the future.

200 The accompanying map shows the line of your road and its connections and their relative position to the great valleys of the State.

Respectfully submitted.

S. S. MONTAGUE, Chief Engineer.

202 General superintendent's report.

GENERAL SUPERINTENDENT'S OFFICE,
San Francisco, June 1st, 1875.

Hon. LELAND STANFORD,
President C. P. R. R. Co.

DEAR SIR: I beg to hand you herewith annual report of the operations of the road for the year ending December 31st, 1874, together with comparative statements of the earnings and expenses of the preceding year:

Earnings.	1873	1874
Gross earnings, coin	$7,643,469.58	$8,276,301.55
Gross earnings, currency	5,220,483.40	5,334,729.08
Total earnings, coin and currency	12,863,952.98	13,611,030.63
Total earnings, equal to currency	13,851,489.24	14,531,355.36

Operating expenses.	1873	1874
Operating expenses, coin	$4,929,684.09	$5,223,429.42
Operating expenses, currency	39,587.43	44,702.45
Total expenses, coin and currency	4,969,271.52	5,268,131.87
203 Total expenses, equal to currency	5,606,186.70	5,848,977.22
Percentage of operating expenses to gross earnings	40.47	40.25

As shown above, a slight decrease is noticeable in the percentage of operating expenses to gross earnings as compared with 1873.

The earnings over operating expenses for 1874 were (all in currency)	$8,682,378.14
For year ending December 31st, 1873	8,245,302.54
Being a gain of	$437,075.60

Or $5\frac{10}{100}$ per cent.

The number of miles of road operated, including the ferry between San Francisco and Oakland Wharf, at the close of the year, was $1,212\frac{44}{100}$ miles. There are also 74 miles in the San Joaquin Valley operated under lease from the Southern Pacific R. R. Co., of which $32\frac{1}{10}$ miles were completed November 8th.

General superintendent's report.

GENERAL SUPERINTENDENT'S OFFICE,
San Francisco, June 20th, 1876.

Hon. LELAND STANFORD,
President C. P. R. R. Co.

SIR: I herewith submit annual report of the operations of the road for the year ending December 31st, 1875, together with comparative statements of the earnings and operating expenses for the year 1874:

Earnings.	1874	1875
Gross earnings in coin	$8, 276, 301. 55	$9, 063, 729.8
Gross earnings in currency	5, 334, 729. 08	6, 601, 352.9
Total earnings, coin and currency	13, 611, 030. 63	15, 665, 081.8
Total earnings, equal to currency	14, 531, 355. 36	17, 021, 015.7

205

Operating expenses.	1874	1875
Operating expenses, coin	$5, 223, 429. 42	$6, 221, 554.7
Operating expenses, currency	44, 702. 45	265, 645.1
Total expenses, coin and currency	5, 268, 131. 87	6, 487, 199.8
Total expenses, equal to currency	5, 818, 977. 22	7, 417, 944.4
Percentage of operating expenses to gross earnings	40. 25	43.5

The earnings over operating expenses in 1875 (all in currency) were	$9, 603, 071.3
For year ending December 31st, 1874	8, 682, 373.1
Being a gain of	920, 698.2

Or 10.60 per cent.

At the close of the year there were, including the ferry between San Francisco and Oakland Wharf, $1{,}212\frac{33}{100}$ miles of road in operation under my management. To this should be added 96 miles in the San Joaquin Valley operated under lease from the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, of which $22\frac{4}{10}$ miles were completed May 11th, 1875.

206 I respectfully refer you to the report of the chief engineer for information relative to the track, bridges, snow galleries and buildings.

The large and convenient passenger apartments and baggage room at the new slips on East Street, near the foot of Market Street, in this city, were completed and occupied by the company for the ferry and general passenger travel of the Central Pacific Railroad September 4th, 1875. Adjoining these on the south is Market Street Wharf, used for the river steamers, together with those running between San Francisco and south Vallejo in connection with the California Pacific Railroad, thus concentrating our passenger travel at this point, which is reached by the street car lines, whose cars run through many of the business streets and pass the principal hotels.

The telegraph fire-alarm system and railroad patrol, inaugurated in 1874 and referred to in my last report, together with the water trains, which were run two days of each week, thoroughly wetting down the inside of galleries and snowsheds between Blue Canyon and Truckee, proved a most thorough protection against fire, and I have no losses of any moment to report from this source during the season.

207 It is gratifying, indeed, to notice a marked increase in the general traffic of the road over the preceding year, which is an index of the general prosperity of California, as well as of the entire Pacific coast, which has been comparatively exempt from the universal business depression experienced in the States east of the Rocky Mountains.

The rapid increase of business necessarily demands a large addition to the rolling stock, which is now in course of construction. This will be completed in time to move the products of the country, which promises to exceed in quantity and value those of any previous year.

While the traffic of the Visalia and Tulare divisions is comparatively light, it is very encouraging to note the extensive arrangements which are being made for irrigation and for general agricultural development all along the line, especially in the rich region of the State embraced in Fresno, Tulare, and Kern Counties, which development is made possible by the extension of the road through the San Joaquin Valley to Caliente, three hundred and twenty-four miles from San Francisco. This road offers to that section of the country the long-desired outlet to market, and a large increase 208 of business may be expected in the near future from it and the rich mining districts beyond.

The Eureka and Palisade Railroad (narrow gauge), referred to in my last report, was completed to Eureka (90 miles from Palisade) in November, 1875.

The Nevada County R. R. (also a narrow gauge), extending from Colfax to Grass Valley and Nevada City, was completed and in operation May 24th, 1876.

Both, it is believed, will contribute much business to our line.

I would add in conclusion that the present business prospects the company for the year 1876 are very flattering, with indicatio of a large increase over the preceding year.

Respectfully submitted.

A. N. TOWNE,
General Superintendent.

(12. Report of the Central Pacific Railroad Company for the ye ending June 30, 1877.)

FROM CENTRAL PACIFIC R. R. CO., C. P. HUNTINGTON, V. PREST.,
NOS. 9 NASSAU & 11 PINE STS.,
New York, Oct. 3d, 1877.

Hon. CARL SCHURZ,
Secretary of the Interior &c. &c., Washington, D. C.

SIR: I have the honor to hand you herewith the Annual Report the Central Pacific Railroad Company to the Secretary of the I terior for the year ending June 30th, 1877, the receipt of which will thank you to acknowledge.

Very respectfully,

C. P. HUNTINGTON, Vice Prest.

210 * * * * * * *

To appease public clamor and to remove all doubt or u certainty relative to the question of survey and measurement, a that it might hereafter remain beyond cavil, Congress, on the 19 day of July, 1876, by a resolution of the House of Representativ requested the Hon. Secretary of War to detail a sufficient force fr the Engineer Corps of the Army to make a careful and exact surv of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, it having been alleged th the measurement reported by the company was at least hastily ma if not intentionally incorrect.

But it will be seen by the report of Government engineers in char that after a most careful and accurate survey they certify that t road is 951/1000 of a mile longer than the distance upon which bon were issued.

In this connection it is but proper that I should quote from t closing paragraph of the official report of W. H. Heuer, captain U. S. Engineers in charge, in which he says: "Although not quired of me in this report, I feel it but doing the Central Pacific Railroad Company an act of justice to mention the admirable condition in which their road bed was found. It is certainly 211 maintained to that high standard of excellence so important and necessary to a national road."

Accepting the Government survey of the distance between Sacramento and Ogden, together with a careful measurement of other portions of the road, we had at the commencement of the year, including the ferry between San Francisco and Oakland Wharf and that portion of the Southern Pacific Railroad between Goshen and Caliente (operated under lease), in the aggregate 1,308.87 miles. There was laid during the year 71/100 miles of track—70/100 between East Oakland and Melrose and 1/100 between Broadway and Masticks. Also additions of leased lines have been made at different times, as follows:

Southern Pacific R. R. Co.:
May 26th.	Caliente to Keene	13.60
August 8th.	Keene to Mojave	31.80
September 6th.	Los Angeles to Mojave	100.50
September 6th.	Los Angeles to Wilmington	22.30
September 6th.	Los Angeles to Indio	129.50
Los Angeles & San Diego R. R. Co.:
September 6th.	Florence to Anaheim	20.70
212 Northern Railway Company:
August 16th.	West Oakland to Shell Mound	2.12
Berkeley Branch R. R. Co.:
August 16th.	Shell Mound to Berkeley	3.16
Amador Branch R. R. Co.:
December 3d.	Galt to Ione	27.20

making a total at the close of the year of 1,660.46 miles operated.

The completion of that portion of the Southern Pacific Railroad (leased to the Central Pacific Railroad Co.) to the Colorado River secures to that company the traffic to and from Arizona, which promises to be very large; and as the road shall be extended beyond the river through this rich mining territory it will largely develop and secure the trade also of New Mexico and the adjacent country.

The looked for remunerative business over this long line will, we confidently believe, materially increase the earnings for the current year and more than compensate for the loss of traffic we may expect from the short harvest consequent upon the drouth more or less affecting the southern portion of the State.

Respectfully submitted.

A. N. TOWNE,
General Superintendent.

REPORT OF THE COMMISSION.

On February 17, 1913, the railroads herein mentioned applied to this commission for its approval of five certain proposed transactions hereinafter more specifically referred to. On the second day of December, 1912, the Supreme Court of the United States, in the case of United States vs. Union Pacific Railroad Company, Southern Pacific Company et al., rendered a decision declaring the ownership by said Union Pacific Railroad Company (hereinafter referred to as the Union Pacific) of certain shares of the capital stock of the Southern Pacific Company (hereinafter referred to as the Southern Pacific) to be a combination in restraint of trade and decreeing that said Union Pacific should dispose of said stock of the Southern Pacific, and likewise providing for an injunction against the voting of the stock of the Southern Pacific by the Union Pacific and prohibiting the payment of any dividends upon said stock of the Southern Pacific.

242 In order to better understand the issues before this com mission a brief review of the history of this case is advisable.

Heretofore the Southern Pacific had secured all of the stock of th Central Pacific Railway Company (hereinafter referred to as th Central Pacific), Central Pacific Railroad Company, Southern Pa cific Railroad Company, and various other lines of railway within the States of California, Nevada, Utah, Arizona, and New Mexic by which ownership the said Southern Pacific secured control of line of railroad from El Paso to San Francisco and from Ogden t
San Francisco. Thereafter the Union Pacific, by securing control o 46 per cent of the stock of the Southern Pacific, secured wha amounted to actual control of the Southern Pacific, thereby placin the Union Pacific in a position so that at the time of the bringin of the suit in question it had actual control of a line of railroad fro Omaha to San Francisco, comprising the lines of the Union Pacif and the Central Pacific, a second line of railroad from El Paso t San Francisco, operated by the Southern Pacific, a third line of rai road from Salt Lake to Los Angeles, operated by the San Pedro Los Angeles and Salt Lake Railway Company, and a fourth 243 line of railroad from Granger, Wyoming, and Ogden, Utah to Portland, Oregon, including all of the lines heretofore de scribed.

The Supreme Court of the United States in the case of United States of America vs. Union Pacific Railroad Company, heretofore referred to, held that the dominance by the Union Pacific of the lin of the Southern Pacific constituting the so-called Sunset route fro El Paso to San Francisco, and the route from Ogden to San Fran cisco, brought about the ownership or dominance by the same agenc of two competing transcontinental lines, thereby bringing about combination in restraint of trade in violation of the so-called Sher man Anti-Trust Act. As has already been said, the court decide that to destroy such combination the Union Pacific should divest itsel of its ownership of Southern Pacific stock, amounting to the aggre gate amount of $126,650,000 par value.

In accordance with such decision the various companies ha agreed upon a certain agreement (hereinafter referred to as th agreement), which has been filed with this commission and in pa approved by the Attorney General of the United States. Thi agreement, in addition to providing for the sale of the stock of th Southern Pacific held by the Union Pacific to the stockholder 244 of the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific in proportion one share of this stock owned by the Union Pacific to eac four shares of Union Pacific stock, and one share of said Southe Pacific stock to each three shares of Southern Pacific stock owned by stockholders other than the Union Pacific, provides also for the sale by the Southern Pacific of the stock of the Central Pacific theretofore acquired by said Southern Pacific. This provision, the evidence shows, is the result of the suggestion of the Attorney General of the United States, he having apparently taken the position that the ownership by the Southern Pacific of the Central Pacific stock constitutes the same kind of prohibited act under the Sherman Anti-Trust Act as the ownership by the Union Pacific of Southern Pacific stock brought about. Admittedly, however, the provision of the agreement requiring the sale of the stock of the Central Pacific by the Southern Pacific is in excess of the requirements of the decree of the Supreme Court of the United States. The only portion of that decree which relates at all to a relationship between the Union Pacific and the Central Pacific is that which provides that the decree shall not prevent "the Central Pacific connection from Ogden to 245 San Francisco and thereby to control that line to the coast, thus affecting such a continuance of the Union Pacific and Central Pacific as is contemplated by the acts of Congress under which they were constructed." The acts of Congress referred to provide that the Central Pacific and the Union Pacific shall be operated and used for all purposes of communication, travel, and transportation, so far as the public and Government are concerned, as one connected continuous line (12 Statutes at Large, 489–495, enacted July 1, 1862), and to afford and secure to each equal advantages and facilities as to rates, time, and transportation without any discrimination of any kind in favor of the road or business of any or either of said companies or adverse to the road or business of any or either of the others (31 Statutes at Large, 356, enacted July 2, 1864).

The only thing provided in the agreement which was in accordance with the positive admonition of the Supreme Court is the sale by the Union Pacific of the stock of the Southern Pacific. Everything else provided in the agreement is, in our judgment, in excess of the requirements of the Supreme Court; but it is presupposed in the agreement that the design of the Attorney General of the United States was to bring about at the same time the dissolution of 246 the Southern Pacific and Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific and the Central Pacific in accordance with the suggestion of the Supreme Court hereinbefore referred to, which suggestion, however, went merely to an outlet for the Union Pacific over the lines of the Central Pacific to the coast, in accordance with the original plan of Congress as laid down in the statutes heretofore referred to, and did not in any way necessitate the sale by the Southern Pacific of all the Central Pacific feeders within this State.

The agreement presented to this commission, a part of which r quires the approval of this commission and a part of which does no contemplates:

First. The sale by the Union Pacific of the stock of the Souther Pacific heretofore referred to.

Second. The sale by the Southern Pacific to the Union Pacific o the Central Pacific stock held by the Southern Pacific.

Third. The cancellation of the leases of the Central Pacific an allied lines held by the Southern Pacific.

Fourth. The lease for 999 years by the Central Pacific of its lin of railroad from Tehama, California, to the Oregon line t 247 the Southern Pacific Railroad Company at an annual rent of 5 per cent upon the value of such line from Tehama to th Oregon line as determined by a method which will hereinafter b discussed.

Fifth. The sale by the Central Pacific to the Southern Pacifi Railroad Company of the line of railroad, now partly complete from Weed, in Siskiyou County, California, to Natron, Oregon, at valuation to be determined as hereinafter provided.

Sixth. The lease for 999 years by the Southern Pacific and th Southern Pacific Railroad Company to the Central Pacific of its lin of railroad from Sacramento by way of Benicia to Oakland at a annual rental of 2 1/2 per cent upon the value of said line to be deter mined in a manner hereafter described. This lease is to give to th lessee an equal joint use with the Southern Pacific Company of sai line, and no other line is to be admitted to said use without the per mission of said Central Pacific.

Seventh. The lease for 999 years by the Southern Pacific an Central Pacific to one another of the joint use of their respectiv terminals, including industry tracks, at all junctions of their respec tive lines within city limits.

Eighth. The lease for 999 years by the Southern Pacifi
248 Railroad Company and the Southern Pacific to the Centra Pacific of trackage and running rights over the lines of th former companies between Redwood City and San Francisco, fo through freight trains only, at an annual rental of 5 per cent upo the valuation, to be determined as hereinafter set out.

The entire consideration for these various trades, aside from th annual rental provided, is to be the assumption by the Union Pacifi of approximately two hundred million dollars of bonded indebted ness of the Central Pacific and the payment to the Southern Pacifi of about $104,000,000.

We, of course, accept without question the mandate of the Supreme Court, and it is our desire to exercise whatever authority we hav in this matter in a manner which will bring about the design of th

Supreme Court to produce active and actual competition between these two transcontinental lines. However, over the sale of the stock of the Southern Pacific by the Union Pacific as ordered by the Supreme Court we, of course, have no authority. Neither have we power under the public utilities act to require or to prevent the sale of the stock of the Central Pacific, one foreign corporation, by 249 the Southern Pacific, another foreign corporation, as provided for in the plan of the Attorney General. However, the representatives of both the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific have testified that this plan as presented in the agreement must be carried out without substantial change, and we feel that the entire plan is one which should be considered by us with a view to determining whether or not the entire plan, which must be accepted or rejected under the circumstances herein presented, is one designed to bring about in good faith the result contemplated by the mandate of the Supreme Court.

We concede that the Attorney General in urging the sale of the Central Pacific stock by the Southern Pacific merely has in mind the fact that by the control of the Central Pacific by the Southern Pacific the latter company, a competing transcontinental line under the design of Congress, is controlling a part of this transcontinental line and thereby is in directly the same position as regards the Western or Central Pacific end of this line as the Union Pacific is with reference to the Eastern or Union Pacific end thereof. That the elimination of this condition does not require the sale of the stock of the Central Pacific by the Southern Pacific is plain. This, 250 of course, is but one method of bringing about the result desired by the Attorney General. It is our opinion that this result could be equally well brought about by the sale to or long-term lease by the Union Pacific of the line of the Central Pacific from Ogden to Sacramento and thence, via Stockton, Niles, and Oakland, to San Francisco, being a portion of the continuous line referred to in 18 Statutes at Large, page 111, chapter 331 (June 20, 1874).

The plan presented to us in this agreement contemplates the control by the Union Pacific not only of a line to the coast, but also of many important feeders owned by the Central Pacific in northern and central California. As a matter of fact, the acquisition of the entire Central Pacific holdings by the Union Pacific will give it an entry into all of the important centers of population in California north of the Tehachapi Mountains, while its control by stock ownership of the San Pedro, Los Angeles and Salt Lake Railroad Company from Salt Lake to Los Angeles, with the connections of the Oregon Short Line from Salt Lake to Ogden, gives it an entry into the region south of the Tehachapi Mountains, and its ownership of the Oregon Short Line and the Oregon Railway and Navigation Company gives it access to Portland and other Oregon points.

251 The Southern Pacific, on the other hand, while it is left with its coast line from San Francisco to Los Angeles, will, in our opinion, if this agreement is consummated, compete at a disadvantage at all points north of the Tehachapi Mountains with the Union Pacific-Central Pacific line. In fact, it is in evidence in this case from the testimony of the representatives of the Southern Pacific itself that that line will be excluded from practically all of the deciduous fruit business in California, as well as a major portion of the dried fruit business and a large portion of the citrus fruit business originating at points north of the Tehachapi Mountains.

We do not believe it necessary to the determination of the questions that are now presented to us to present in detail the traffic conditions which we consider will be brought about if the rearrangement contemplated by this agreement is consummated. Mr. Sproule, president of the Southern Pacific, testified that 47 per cent of the traffic carried by the Southern Pacific as it now exists, controlling as it does the Central Pacific to Ogden, passes through the El Paso gateway. This, of course, includes practically all the Southern Pacific's traffic originating south of the Tehachapi Mountains and all of the 252 traffic moving by water from Galveston over the Southern Pacific and Gulf line, and necessarily includes but a small percentage of the business produced north of the Tehachapi Mountains. Under present conditions the Southern Pacific, having regard solely to traffic convenience, carries by way of its Sunset Route only a comparatively small amount of freight which originates at points north of the Tehachapi Mountains. It would appear that under the circumstances of this case the traffic will largely move over the most convenient and expeditious route. Such being the case, we are justified in concluding that for most of the traffic originating north of the Tehachapi Mountains the Sunset Route is a less convenient route than the route by way of Ogden gateway, and if this conclusion is correct the Southern Pacific will compete at a disadvantage for most of this traffic when the ownership of the lines through the Ogden gateway and the El Paso gateway is in the hands of competing owners. Thus if the Union Pacific secures control of the Central Pacific, with its feeders as far south as Goshen and into practically all of the important commercial centers in northern and central California, the Southern Pacific will be placed in the position of the inferior road at all of these points, while if the Union Pacific

253 were to secure merely the control of the main line of the Central Pacific from Ogden to San Francisco the condition would be reversed and the Union Pacific-Central Pacific line would compete at a disadvantage or be compelled to build additional feeders.

We do not pretend to say, nor do we consider it necessary to decide, how serious an impairment of the Southern Pacific will be brought about by the securing of the Central Pacific main line and feeders by the Union Pacific, but we are of the opinion that the present commanding position of that road can not be maintained under the contract which is presented to us for approval, and that there is room for grave fear that if the agreement is carried out this State will, instead of securing two strong competing lines, secure one dominant line and one much impaired line.

The desire of the Supreme Court and the Attorney General to produce active competition between these two transcontinental lines, of course, is founded in the belief that such competition will produce advantageous results to the shippers. We do not believe, however, that any appreciable reduction of transcontinental rates will be brought about by the unmerging of these lines, particularly under the terms of the agreement here under consideration. If, how-254 ever, active and bona fide competition is produced between these lines there will be more striving after business and, consequently, probably some improvement in service—how great it is impossible to determine. We do not believe that the improvement in service will be very marked, because of the fact that the freight east and west through both the Ogden and El Paso gateways is at the present time carried in active competition with two other transcontinental lines, namely, the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway Company and Western Pacific Railway Company.

Believing as we do that the plan here under consideration will not substantially benefit the shippers of the transcontinental freight, either in rates or in service, it is well to consider what, if any, effect will be the natural result of this arrangement upon local traffic. At the present time the local lines of the Southern Pacific and the Central Pacific form one system within this State, reaching from Oregon to the Mexican line, and from Yuma and a point near Reno on the east. All local lines of these two systems are now under the control of one agency and operated as a unit. The result of the reorganization plan as set forth in this agreement will be the substitu-255 tion as to a great part of this territory of two agencies to perform the work now performed by one.

While the representatives of both the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific state positively that it is contrary to their policy to permit the reorganization scheme to increase the rates, or to interfere with the service locally within the State, yet we can not refrain from observing that this result usually follows upon a substitution of two agencies in the performance of a service theretofore performed by one. We invariably have it urged upon us in rate controversies before the commission where rates are to be made over two connecting lines that the joint movement over two connecting lines is more expensive to the carriers in the aggregate than a single movement over one line between the same points. Therefore, regardless of the present disposition of the parties hereto, we feel that serious consideration must be given by the commission to the possibility or probability of applications which may hereafter be made by carriers to increase rates in this State in cases where, as the result of the consummation of this agreement, points now upon one line may, by reason of the dismemberment of the Southern Pacific lines in 256 this State be found located one solely on the Southern Pacific and the other solely on the Central Pacific.

It is our disposition to believe that it would be better for the local business within this State if the local lines now controlled by the Southern Pacific could remain under the control of one agency and not be separated and given over to the control of two. This conclusion, in conjunction with the opinion we have already expressed that the advantage to shippers as to transcontinental freight will be negligible if the provisions of this contract are carried out, leads us to suggest that it would be better to adopt the other method already suggested of bringing about the design of Congress in providing that the Central Pacific and the Union Pacific should be one continuous transcontinental line, namely, by the sale or long-term lease of the line of the Central Pacific from Ogden to Sacramento to the Union Pacific and the provision for a trackage right from Sacramento to bay points for the Union Pacific and the retention by the Southern Pacific of the remainder of the Central Pacific system.

Having given our views upon that portion of the contract, which, while involved in the entire plan, does not specifically require our approval, we shall now consider those matters for which our approval is required.

257 The lease by the Central Pacific of its line of road from Tehama to the Oregon line, to the Southern Pacific Railroad Company for 999 years, we believe, is unobjectionable, and should meet with our approval, except as to the method of determining the rental thereof. Inasmuch as the same fault which we find with the method here involved is inherent in the method of determining the rentals in each instance and the sale price of the road from Weed to Natron, it is well for us at this time to point out our objection and to suggest a remedy.

The agreement provides that the Southern Pacific shall pay to the Central Pacific an annual rental of 5 per cent of the value of the line to be leased, the value to be agreed upon by the parties, if possible, and if not, to be determined by arbitration according to a method laid down in the agreement.

This commission has heretofore held that in cases involving the sale by a public utility of any portion of its property devoted to the public use, or the rental of such property, the valuation shall be subject to this commission's approval, and we see no reason for departing from this principle in this case. While we do not 258 disapprove of the plan of arriving at the valuation outlined in the agreement as a preliminary ascertainment of such value, still for such vallue to have final effect it will be necessary for this commission in each instance to pass upon it. The observation applies to all cases of salle or lease herein considered.

In the Tehama-Oregon line transaction we do not object to the term of 999 years, constituting, of course, practically a perpetual lease, because we conceive this to be a case wherein a sale of this property would meet with our approval, and where such sale is only prevented by the outstanding bonded obligations rendering a sale impracticable.

We likewise approve of the provision for the sale of that portion of the Weed-Nattron branch which is located in California, except as to the valuation, as heretofore stated. The same may be said as to the Redwood-Sam Francisco lease, except as to the term thereof. Except in those cases where we would approve a sale of the property and a sale is only prevented by the outstanding obligations which are liens upon the property, we think a perpetual lease is not warranted. In other words, except in those cases where we would approve a sale we will not approve a perpetual lease. This is equally applicable to the term of 999 years provided in all of the 259 other leases which are hereafter to be considered.

The commission is, however, willing to permit the leases in this case to run for a period of fifty years, and for the further period until the commission or other competent State authority, after notice and hearing, directs their cancellation or modification, whereupon such cancellation or modification shall be made.

The city of Sacramento was represented at the hearing by its city attorney, who stated that the city was at present in litigation with the parties hereto, or some of them, in the matter of city franchises which the city claims have expired, and that the city expected that additional litigattion as to other city franchises would soon be initiated. The city attorney requested that the commission insert in its order a condition to the effect that no rights of the city should be prejudiced by the order. The city attorney of Oakland made a similar request. The attorneys for the applicants herein agreed that such condition might be inserted, and the commission will so, although it is of the opinion that no act on its part could construed to revive an expired city franchise or otherwise prejudi the cities with respect to such franchise.

260 The provision for the lease of the Benicia short line a the joint use of terminals, including industry tracks, are t ones to which we find the most serious objection. The agreeme contemplates that the Southern Pacific shall grant to the Centr Pacific for the Union Pacific the equal joint use and possession the short line from Sacramento to Oakland via Benicia at an annu rental, and that no additional company may use the tracks so leas unless it has first secured the written consent of both the Southe Pacific and the Central Pacific. In other words, these two compani are to have the use of these very desirable tracks to the exclusion any other railway company, unless both the Southern Pacific a the Central Pacific concur in letting in the stranger. We recogni fully that this property now belongs solely to the Southern Paci Railroad Company and is operated solely by the Southern Pacif Nevertheless, the grant by the Southern Pacific of the use of i tracks to one independent competitor (the Central Pacific), whi refusing to grant the same rights to another independent co petitor (the Western Pacific), would work a discrimination whi the welfare of this State does not permit and which this co

261 mission will not sanction. If the Southern Pacific is going throw its property open to one of its several independe competitors, it must play fair with the others and permit its use them also on terms which shall provide for a just compensation the extent to which the capacity of the property reasonably permi
If the present plan of a sale by the Southern Pacific of the Centr Pacific stock to the Union Pacific be abandoned and in lieu there the Union Pacific shall buy the line of the Central Pacific betwe Ogden and Sacramento or secures long-term lease thereof, with le or trackage rights thence into San Francisco, other consideratio might arise. It might then be held that the Union Pacific would acting in accordance with the plan of Congress to secure a connect line of railway via the Union Pacific and the Central Pacific to t coast, and that the Central Pacific was not acting voluntarily granting the trackage rights to enable the Union Pacific to reach t coast from Sacramento. This effect of the Federal statutes heret fore referred to would confine the right to an outlet for the Uni Pacific to the Stockton-Niles route.

While there is some argument in favor of the joint use certain terminals by the Southern and Central Pacific

262 the exclusion of other lines, particularly as affects such terminal as the Oakland Pier, still we do not believe that under all the circumstances of this case the provision that only by the joint approval of these companies are these terminals, including industry tracks, as we interpret the agreement, to be used by any other company, is justified. A condition concerning this matter will be inserted in the order.

We are not unmindful of the fact that, as testified by both Judge Lovett and Mr. Sproule, these companies are more or less under duress to contract. On the one hand the stock of the Southern Pacific owned by the Union Pacific is in the hands of the court for sale, and if an arrangement is not consummated before ninety days shall have elapsed after the decision of the court, this stock is to be placed in the hands of a receiver to be sold as the court directs. It is testified that the Attorney General is threatening proceedings against the Southern Pacific if it does not divest itself of control of its alleged competing line, the Central Pacific, and we appreciate the desire of the parties to bring about a solution of their troubles which will result in as little financial loss to them as possible, yet 263 we believe it is our duty to have in mind the effect of any arrangement which may be designed upon not only the contracting parties here, but the public. As we have already indicated, we do not believe the sale of the stock of the Central Pacific is necessary to bring about the result desired by the Supreme Court, or even by the Attorney General, but if Federal authorities acting within their jurisdiction within this matter, which is wholly without our jurisdiction, shall decide that the sale of this stock must be made, then we do not feel that it will be possible for us to protect the public beyond that protection which may be accorded by the imposition of conditions specified in the order herein, which conditions, while not designed to be oppressive to the contracting parties, have as their object the restoration of real competition in local traffic in addition to the competition in transcontinental traffic which is designed by the Attorney General.

We submit herewith the following form of order:

ORDER.

Central Pacific Railway Company, Southern Pacific Railroad Company, and Southern Pacific Company having filed with this commission their application for an order authorizing (a) the 264 lease by the Central Pacific Railway Company to the Southern Pacific Railroad Company of its line of railway between Tehama, California, and the California-Oregon boundary line; (b) the sale by the Central Pacific Railway Company to the Southern Pacific Railroad Company of so much of its line of railway between Weed, California, and Natron Station, Oregon, as lies within the State of California; (c) the grant by the Southern Pacific Railroad Company and the Southern Pacific Company to the Central Pacific Railway Company of the equal joint use and possession of the line of railway of the grantees between Sacramento and Oakland via Benicia and Port Costa, at an annual rental; (d) the grant by the Southern Pacific Railroad Company and the Southern Pacific Company to the Central Pacific Railway Company of trackage and running rights between Redwood City and San Francisco for the operation of through freight trains only, at an annual rental; and (e) the grant by the Southern Pacific Railroad Company (or the Southern Pacific Company) to the Central Pacific Railway Company and the grant by the Central Pacific Railway Company to the Southern Pacific Railroad Company (or the Southern Pacific Company) of the joint and equal use of all terminals, including industry tracks at all junctions of their respective lines within city limits, at annual 265 rentals, all as set forth in said application on file with this commission; and a public hearing having been held on said application, and the Western Pacific Railway Company having appeared in opposition to the granting of said application, and the commission being fully advised in the premises, we hereby find as a fact that public convenience and necessity will not be served by the granting of said application except on the conditions hereinafter specified, basing our order on this finding of fact and on the further findings contained in the opinion which precedes this order,

It is hereby ordered that said application be, and the same is hereby, granted, but only on the following express conditions, and not otherwise, to wit:

1. The price at which the property covered by the agreement between the applicants hereto shall be sold or the valuation on which its rental shall be based, as the case may be, shall be only such price or valuation as shall first have been formally submitted to and approved by the railroad commission. This condition shall not be held to be a condition precedent to the consummation of said agreement, but such sale price and rentals shall not be paid or become due un-266 til such approval of the railroad commission has been secured.

2. The rates and fares which may be filed with the railroad commission by any party or parties to said agreement, between points within the State of California, growing out of the altered conditions resulting from said agreement, shall in no case exceed the rates and fares in effect between said points on the twenty-fourth day of February, 1913, over the lines now operated by the Southern Pacific Company. Within sixty days from the effective date of said agreement the railroads parties hereto shall file with this commission joint rates and fares for the transportation of freight and passengers between all points in the State of California, which said joint rates and fares shall not exceed the present rates and fares of the Southern Pacific Company between the said points now on file with this commission.

3. The term of each 999-year lease referred to in the agreement, other than the lease of the line of railway between Tehama and the California-Oregon line, as to which the term is approved, shall be fifty years and for such further period of time thereafter, and upon such terms as the railroad commission, after notice and hearing, shall have determined to be reasonable.

267 4. In the event that the Southern Pacific Company and the Southern Pacific Railroad Company hereafter grant to the Central Pacific Railway Company, under the terms of said agreement or otherwise, or any other line, the use or possession of the line of railway known as the Benicia short line, said Southern Pacific Company and Southern Pacific Railroad Company shall grant a similar privilege to any other competing line of railway which may make application therefor, for an equitable compensation, to the extent to which said line may reasonably be used. If the parties can not agree as to the terms of the use or possession or the reasonableness of being admitted to said use or possession, they shall make formal application to the railroad commission, which will thereupon, after proceedings duly had, determine the question involved.

5. In the event that any of the companies parties to said agreement shall grant, the one to the other, or to any other railroad company, the use or possession of any of the terminals, including industry tracks, specified in said agreement, said company or companies granting such use or possession shall grant a similar privilege to any other competing line of railway which may make appli-

268 cation therefor, for an equitable compensation, to the extent to which such facilities may reasonably be used. In the event that the parties can not agree, the same proceedings shall be had as in the preceding paragraph. This condition, however, may be modified by the commission in the event of terminal facilities now jointly used by any two of the parties to said agreement, in such cases as the commission after a hearing shall find to be reasonable.

6. Neither this order nor any act done in pursuance of its authority shall be construed as extending, reviving, or in any way affecting the term of any franchise or permit or as prejudicing in any way the rights of the State of California or of any city, town, county, or other political subdivision thereof.

7. This order shall not become effective for any purpose unless and until all the parties to said agreement shall first have filed with the railroad commission a stipulation under the hand and seal of said applicants, duly authorized by the board of directors or other competent governing body of each thereof, agreeing for themselves and their respective successors and assigns, to be bound by and comply in good faith with each condition of this order.

REPORT OF THE COMMISSION—SUPPLEMENTAL OPINION.

Inasmuch as we understand the imposition of the conditions set out in the main opinion and order will result in the rejection of the contract in its entirety, thus rendering further negotiations between the parties necessary, it is proper to set out specifically what arrangements we will approve and the reasons therefor.

The Supreme Court orders one act only, aside from the temporary expedients incidental to the carrying out of the decree, namely, the sale by the Union Pacific of the Southern Pacific stock. It permits, however, to the Union Pacific "the Central Pacific connection from Ogden to San Francisco * * *, thus effecting such a continuity of the Union Pacific and Central Pacific as was contemplated by the acts of Congress under which they were constructed." (United States vs. Union Pacific Railroad Company et al.) Recog-271 nizing the importance of such a suggestion from the Supreme Court, we will treat the decree as directing such an outlet over the Central Pacific as here suggested and will assume that it is the duty of any inferior tribunal acting within its jurisdiction to exercise any discretion which it may have in such a manner as to effectuate this design of the Supreme Court, as well contained in its suggestion as required by its command. Therefore, we proceed upon the theory that the Union Pacific is to be divested of control of the Southern Pacific by such disposition of the Southern Pacific stock as will make these two lines bona fide independent lines, and that the Union Pacific is to be invested with an outlet to the coast.

The Attorney General of the United States has recognized these two requirements, but he has added an additional requirement, admittedly not commanded or suggested in the decree and which could not be directly brought about except by a new proceeding in the Federal courts prosecuted to a decree favorable to his contention in the Supreme Court of the United States. This is the requirement that the Southern Pacific Company sell the stock of the Central Pacific. We assume, however, that the insistence by the At-272 torney General upon the sale by the Southern Pacific Company of the stock of the Central Pacific held by it is only incidental to his main design, which is to prevent the control by the Southern Pacific Company, which owns the Sunset line by way of the El Paso gateway, of a line at least in part competitive therewith to the Ogden gateway. We can not believe that the plan of the Attorney General to bring about his desired result makes necessary anything more than the surrender by the Southern Pacific Company of the Central Pacific main line and its exclusion from any interest therein. Certainly the main design does not necessitate the surrender by the Southern Pacific to its present dominant ally, but competitor to be, of its most important feeders and all of its advantages secured by reason of its being first in the field. Neither does it contemplate the admission of this formidable rival to the exclusion of any other rival or ally to the joint use of one of its advantageous short lines nor to the exclusive joint use of its important terminals. Neither do we think the Attorney General desires to upset local traffic conditions by breaking a well-built system of local lines well suited to serve the local needs of the people of this State into two disassociated sets of branches, some of which begin and end nowhere if we 273 have reference to their separate ownership. These local lines are the result of many years of growth, and anyone at all familia with railroad conditions in this State knows that they can b much more conveniently and economically managed as one loca system than by the substitution of two incomplete local systems an two agencies to perform the service now being carried on by one com plete system in charge of one agency.

That the Attorney General has in view the bringing about of result and is not insisting upon any particular method of accom plishing such result is, we believe, a fair inference. We are con firmed in this by his attitude expressed by telegraph on the first da of the hearing of this case as to the exclusive use of the Benicia cu off and the terminals of the Southern Pacific by the Union Pacific.

We then conclude that all that the Attorney General adds to th two requirements of the Supreme Court is the one additional whic contemplates the disposition by the Southern Pacific Company of it control of the main line of the Central Pacific, with which it is sup posed to compete by the El Paso route, and that he is not committe to any particular method, and that his approval may be ex 274 pected to any reasonable method of effectually accomplishin this result.

The essential elements of the plan of the Supreme Court as adde to by the Attorney General are:

First. The sale of the Southern Pacific stock by the Union Pacifi

Second. The securing by the Union Pacific of an outlet to th coast over the Central Pacific line; and Third. The surrender by the Southern Pacific Company of so muc of the Central Pacific line as is necessary to prevent said Southe Pacific Company from controlling a line designed to compete with it El Paso route.

With the first requirement we have no direct official concern, bu we invite the attention of the Attorney General and the court to th contention of the Western Pacific Railroad Company that the syndi cate formed by Kuhn, Loeb & Company, the Union Pacific banker is in effect accomplishing by indirection what the Supreme Court re fused to permit to be accomplished directly, viz., the purchase by th stockholders of the Union Pacific of the Southern Pacific stock. I is urged that this banking house and the syndicate formed by it ar controlled by the large stockholders of the Union Pacific, an 275 that by making Southern Pacific stock an undesirable inves
ment, the stockholders of the Southern Pacific Company wi be deterred from buying and the Union Pacific controlled syndicat will thereby secure control of this stock, thus leaving the Union Pa cific and Southern Pacific controlled by the same stockholders, a arrangement which the Supreme Court has already condemned.

The two other conditions, we believe, may be readily worked out together so as substantially to meet the requirement of the court and the Attorney General as well. If a lease similar in terms to the one agreed upon to the Tehama-Oregon line of the Central Pacific be made by the Central Pacific to the Union Pacific of the line from Ogden to Sacramento, including the line from Roseville to Tehama, freed from the objection already urged against the method of arriving at a value, this commission will approve such a lease. We see no reason why a flat price covering the value of this line can not be agreed upon since an exclusive lease for such a long time would be tantamount to ownership, or a lease with option to purchase when the bonded indebtedness admits, might be consummated. This arrangement would place the Union Pacific at Sacramento in a position in regard to an outlet to the coast different from that occupied 276 by any other line at that point. Under the acts of Congress providing for the construction of Union Pacific and Central Pacific, as construed by the Supreme Court of the United States, it is provided that the Union Pacific have an outlet over the Central Pacific to San Francisco. Such being the case, if the Central Pacific or its successor in interest gives to the Union Pacific access to San Francisco from Sacramento over the Central Pacific line between these two points, such agency will have done so not as a voluntary act, but as a requirement of Congress, and certainly can not be held as thereby subjecting itself to any penalty or disadvantage by reason of such act. Therefore, if the scheme which we have suggested is adopted and the Union Pacific secures exclusive control of the Central Pacific line from Ogden to Sacramento, it may likewise secure exclusive or joint control of the line from Sacramento to Oakland by way of Niles, because of the fact that this is the outlet of the Central Pacific referred to in the congressional acts and admitted to be such by the parties to this case. Therefore, under such conditions we will sanction an arrangement which puts the Union Pacific in entire or joint control with the Southern Pacific of the Central Pacific line from Sacramento by way of Niles to Oakland.

277 As regards the terminals, we are willing to permit the exclusive use by the Union Pacific of the joint use by it with the Southern Pacific of such terminals as are incident to this line of railroad from Sacramento, but not the facilities which are incident to any other line independent of this line.

Having secured by the method herein outlined an outlet to San Francisco over the line and in a way selected for it by Congress, the Union Pacific may not say that it finds itself in Sacramento in any different position as regards any other line from Sacramento to Oakland than is the Western Pacific or any other competing line, and there is no more reason for giving it a right of way over a more a vantageous line between Sacramento and Oakland even for an ad quate consideration than there is for giving such a right of way the Western Pacific or any other independent line. The only wa rant for the position of the Union Pacific that it should be allowed get to San Francisco is derived from the acts of Congress, whic alone constitute it superior in this respect to other lines. The inte tions of Congress having been effectuated by its admission to the u of the line designated by Congress, it may not urge as a righ 278 its admission either to the joint or several use of another lin

This conclusion has led the commission in its main opinio and order to impose as a condition upon the use by the Union Pacif of the Benicia short line the right under similar terms of any othe road to use the same.

We have endeavored herein to point out a method which we believ would satisfy the command and suggestion of the Supreme Court an the desire of the Attorney General, and have stated our reasons fo recommending this arrangement. If, however, the Attorney Genera and the Circuit Court in its discretion shall hold that the Southern Pacific shall sell all of the Central Pacific stock to the Union Pacific thereby giving to the Union Pacific through stock ownership no only the main line of the Central Pacific from Ogden by way of Sac ramento and Niles to Oakland, but also the important feeders from such line, we shall not be disposed to withhold our approval to the other provisions of the agreement presented to us on the sole ground that the Federal authorities have adopted the stock ownership plan for the transfer of this property with its attendant disadvantages and not the plan which we have recommended, which we believe from a careful investigation of the conditions is preferable 279 from the standpoint of the public. In other words we have deemed it best to point out to the Federal authorities our objection to the control of the entire Central Pacific system by the Union Pacific and have suggested an alternative plan which will meet such objections, but if after having considered our proposal the Federal authorities, acting within their jurisdiction, adhere to the original plan of the Attorney General we will waive this objection, because, while we consider it important, we do not consider it entirely essential. Particularly do we reach this conclusion by reason of the fact that this commission has the power to regulate local rates and service and the admitted intention of the parties not to attempt to use the separation of these lines as a means and excuse for increasing the rates and impairing the service.

If the Union Pacific, under the permission of the Attorney General and the Federal court, is permitted to purchase the stock of the Central Pacific, then we will limit it to the line between Sacramento and Oakland, to which this ownership entitles it and the terminals incident thereto. If it is accorded any other terminals or any other route by the voluntary act of the Southern Pacific Company, 280 we shall insist upon the conditions which we have imposed in the main opinion and order. We therefore recommend the arrangement which we have suggested for the acquirement by the Union Pacific of the main line of the Central Pacific from Ogden by way of Sacramento and Niles to Oakland and the branch line from Roseville to Tehama; but if the Attorney General and the circuit court, in spite of such recommendation, desire that the Union Pacific secure the stock of the Central Pacific, thereby securing not only this main line, but the branches, our approval will be given likewise to the following arrangements, but only on the conditions outlined in the main opinion and order.

We will approve, if application is made therefore, the arrangement outlined in the main decision respecting the lease of the line from Tehama to the Oregon State line, the sale of the Weed line, the lease of the Bay Shore cut-off, the lease of the Benicia short line from Sacramento to Oakland, the lease of the terminals, including industry tracks, specified in the agreement, the latter to be made definite and specific hereafter.

We recognize that some of the facilities of the Central Pacific 281 and Southern Pacific are so connected and interwoven that it is practically impossible to require their separation, and the commission will be disposed to recognize any necessities which may arise from such cause; but if the use of any other facilities, such as industry spurs and terminal facilities of a similar character, be accorded by the Southern Pacific to the Central Pacific or the Central Pacific to the Southern Pacific, then the voluntary according of such use will carry with it as an annexed condition the necessity of according a similar privilege to any other line similarly situated and willing to pay a reasonable compensation therefor. And it shall only be necessary in each instance for the line desiring these privileges to be accorded to it to secure the consent of the owner of such facilities and not the consent of the other company which has been voluntarily admitted to the use.

(g) The Central Pacific Railroad Company land bonds secured by mortgage dated October 1, 1870, to the amount of $2,134,000 and maturing October 1, 1900.

And whereas heretofore, and under date of February 1st, 1899, the said Central Pacific Railroad Company, in pursuance of a settlement agreement between the United States of America, the Central Pacific Railroad Company, and Messrs. Speyer & Co., dated February 1, 1899, entered into under the provisions of an act of Congress approved July 7th, 1898, executed its twenty promissory notes in favor of the United States of America for $2,940,635.78 each, maturing on or before the expiration of each successive six months from the date thereof, which notes were secured by the lien reserved by the acts of Congress approved July 1, 1862, and July 2, 1864, and the acts amending and supplementing the same, to secure the 287 indebtedness arising from the issue of bonds of the United States to aid in the construction of the bond-aided railroads of the Central Pacific Railroad Company of California and Western Pacific Railroad Company, respectively, and are agreed to be secured by pledge of refunding bonds to be issued hereunder as hereinafter provided, upon the pledge of which refunding bonds as security therefor, the said lien is to be transferred to the Trustee of this mortgage as security for all the bonds to be issued thereunder.

And whereas the said Railway Company is about to issue its refunding bonds to an amount which shall not in any event exceed in the aggregate the principal sum of one hundred million dollars at any one time outstanding, and which shall bear interest at a rate not exceeding four per cent per annum, payable semiannually, and to secure the same by mortgage upon the lines of railroad, equipment, and terminals hereinafter described, with their appurtenances;

And whereas the issue of the said refunding bonds and the execution of said mortgage to secure the same has been duly authorized by the board of directors of said Railway Company, as per resolutions, copies of which are as follows:

"Resolved, That for the purpose of readjusting the in-288 debtedness secured by liens upon the properties of the company, and for other corporate purposes, this company issue its bonds to be known as 'First refunding mortgage gold bonds,' to an amount which shall not in any event exceed in the aggregate the principal sum of $100,000,000 at any one time outstanding. Such bonds shall bear date August 1st, 1899, in the case of coupon bonds, and of the time of their issue, in the case of registered bonds, shall become and be payable on the first day of August, 1949, in gold coin of the United States of the present standard of weight and fineness, and shall bear interest at a rate not exceeding four per centum per annum, payable semiannually in like gold coin, on the first day of February and the first day of August in each year. Said bonds shall be issued either as coupon or registered bonds. The coupon bonds shall be for the principal sum of one thousand dollars or five hundreddollars each, and shall give to the holders the right to register the principal thereof, and also the right to convert the same into fully registered bonds. The registered bonds without coupons shall be each for the principal sum of one thousand dollars, or such multiples thereof as the company by resolution of its board of directors may from time 289 to time prescribe, and may be issued originally either as registered bonds or in exchange for coupon bonds for an equivalent sum. Such bonds, whether coupon bonds or registered bonds, shall be issued as shall be determined by the action of the board of directors or the executive committee of the company at such times and to such amounts as the purposes for which they are to be issued may require. When issued such bonds shall be signed by the president or any vice president of the company, and the corporate seal shall be thereunto affixed and attested by the secretary or any assistant secretary. In case the officers who shall have signed and sealed any such bonds shall cease to be officers of the company before the bonds so signed and sealed shall have been actually issued, certified, and delivered, such bonds may nevertheless be adopted and used by the company, and may be issued, certified, and delivered as though the persons who signed and sealed such bonds had not ceased to be officers of the company. There shall be attached to the coupon bonds coupons for the interest to grow due thereon, authenticated by the engraved signature of the treasurer or of any future treasurer of the company; and the company may adopt and use for that purpose the engraved signature of any person who shall have been such treasurer, 290 notwithstanding the fact that such person may have ceased to be such treasurer when such bonds shall have been actually issued, certified, and delivered.

"Resolved further, That in order to secure the payment of said bonds issued and to be issued, with interest thereon, this company execute a mortgage or deed of trust to the Central Trust Company of New York, a corporation of the State of New York, as Trustee, covering the properties of the company described in the printed form of mortgage now submitted to this board.

"Resolved further, That the said printed form of mortgage now submitted to the board, and the forms of bonds embodied therein, be, and the same are hereby, approved, and that the president, or any vice president, and the secretary, or any assistant secretary, be, and they are hereby, authorized to execute the same on behalf of the company under its corporate seal."

And whereas the said resolution of the board of directors of the Railway Company were thereafter submitted to a meeting of the stockholders of the Railway Company duly called and held, and such action of the said board of directors was duly ratified 291 and confirmed by resolution, a copy of which is as follows:

"Resolved, That the action of the board of directors in authorizing the issue of the first refunding mortgage gold bonds of the company and the execution of the first refunding mortgage to secure the same as set forth in the resolutions of the board of directors now submitted to this meeting be, and the same is, hereby in all respects ratified, approved, and confirmed."

And whereas the form of the coupon bonds, and of the coupons to be attached thereto, and of the registered bonds, and of the Trustee's certificate to be signed by the Central Trust Company of New York, severally and respectively, are to be substantially as follows, to wit:

(Form of coupon first refunding mortgage bond.)

No. $1,000 (or $500).

United States of America. The Central Pacific Railway Company.
First refunding mortgage gold bond.

Know all men by these presents, That the Central Pacific Railway Company, a corporation, hereinafter called the "Railway Company," for value received, promises to pay to the bearer, or, if reg-
292 istered, to the registered holder of this bond, on the first day of August, in the year 1949, at the office or agency of the Railway Company in the city of New York, one thousand (or five hundred) dollars gold coin of the United States, of the present standard of weight and fineness, and to pay interest thereon at the rate of not exceeding four per cent per annum from August 1, 1899, payable semiannually at the said office or agency in like gold coin, on the first day of February and the first day of August in each year, but only upon presentation and surrender, as they severally mature, of the coupons therefor annexed hereto.

Both the principal and interest of this bond are payable without deduction for any tax or taxes which the Railway Company may be required to pay or to retain therefrom, under any present or future law of the United States or of any State or county or municipality therein.

This bond is one of a series of first refunding mortgage gold bonds (coupon and registered) of the Railway Company, issued and to be issued for an aggregate principal sum not exceeding one hundred million dollars at any one time outstanding, under and in pursuance of, and all equally secured by, a mortgage or deed of trust dated August 1st, 1899, executed by the Railway Com-293 pany to the Central Trust Company of New York as Trustee of all the property and franchises of the Railway Company conveyed in trust by said mortgage or deed of trust, to which reference is hereby made for a statement of the property and franchises mortgaged, the nature and extent of the security, the rights of the holders of said bonds under the same, and the terms and conditions upon which said bonds are issued and secured.

This bond shall pass by delivery unless registered in the owner's name on the books of the Railway Company at its office or agency in the city of New York, such registry being noted on the bonds by the bond registrar of the Railway Company. After such registration no transfer shall be valid unless made on the company's books by the registered owner and similarly noted on the bond, but the same may be discharged from registry by being transferred to bearer, and thereafter transferability by delivery shall be restored, but this bond may again from time to time be registered or transferred to bearer as before. Such registration, however, shall not affect the negotiability of the coupons, which shall continue to be transferable by delivery merely.

The holder may also, at his option, surrender for cancella-294 tion this bond, with the coupons for future interest thereon in exchange for a registered bond without coupons, as provided in said mortgage or deed of trust.

This bond shall not become obligatory for any purpose until it shall have been authenticated, by the certificate, hereon endorsed, of the Trustee under said mortgage or deed of trust.

In witness whereof, The Central Pacific Railway Company has caused these presents to be signed by its president or one of its vice presidents, and its corporate seal to be hereunto affixed, and to be attested by its secretary or assistant secretary, and coupons for said interest with the engraved signature of its treasurer to be attached hereto this 1st day of August, 1899.

(The mortgage or deed of trust securing this bond has been duly stamped according to law.)

United States of America. The Central Pacific Railway Company.
First refunding mortgage gold bond.

Know all men by these presents that the Central Pacific Railway Company, a corporation, hereinafter called the "Railway Company," for value received, promises to pay to or registered assigns the sum of dollars gold coin of the United States of the present standard of weight and fineness on the first day of August, in the year 1949, at the office or agency of the Railway 296 Company in the city of New York, and to pay interest thereon at the rate of (not exceeding four) per cent per annum from the first day of February or August next preceding the date hereof, payable semiannually at said office or agency in like gold coin on the first day of February and on the first day of August in each year until the payment of said principal sum.

Both the principal and interest of this bond are payable without deduction for any tax or taxes which the Railway Company may be required to pay or to retain therefrom under any present or future law of the United States or of any State or county or municipality therein.

This bond is one of a series of first refunding mortgage gold bonds (coupon and registered) of the Railway Company, issued and to be issued for an aggregate principal sum not exceeding one hundred million dollars at any one time outstanding under and in pursuance of and all equally secured by a mortgage or deed of trust dated August 1st, 1899, executed by the Railway Company to the Central Trust Company of New York as Trustee of all the property and franchises of the Railway Company conveyed in trust in said mortgage or deed of trust, to which reference is hereby made for a statement of the property and franchises mortgaged, the nature and 297 extent of the security and the rights of the holders of said bonds under the same, and the terms and conditions upon which said bonds are issued and secured.

This bond is transferrable by the registered holder thereof in person, or by attorney duly authorized, on the books of the Railway Company, at its office or agency in the city of New York upon surrender and cancellation of this bond; and thereupon a new registered bond will be issued to the transferee in exchange herefor, as provided in said mortgage or deed of trust, and on payment, if the Railway Company shall so require, of the charge therein provided for.

This bond shall not become obligatory for any purpose until it shall have been authenticated by the certificate hereon indorsed by the trustee under said mortgage or deed of trust.

In witness whereof, the Central Pacific Railway Company has caused these presents to be signed by its president or one of its vice presidents, and its corporate seal to be hereunto affixed, and to be attested by its secretary or an assistant secretary this day of .

298 CENTRAL PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY,

By

[L. S.] Vice President.

Attest:

Assistant Secretary.

(Form of trustee's certificate.)

This bond is one of a series of bonds described in the within-mentioned mortgage or deed of trust executed by the Central Pacific Railway Company to the undersigned.

CENTRAL TRUST COMPANY OF NEW YORK, Trustee.

By

Vice President.

And whereas, in pursuance of such authority, and of all and every legal power and authority in it vested, the Railway Company proposes now to make and execute and from time to time hereafter to issue and to deliver bonds hereby secured; and in this indenture to declare the terms and conditions upon which every such bond is and shall be issued and secured.

Now, therefore, this indenture witnesseth:

That in order to secure the payment of the principal and i 299 terest of all such bonds at any time issued and outstanding u der this indenture, according to their tenor and effect, and t performance of all the covenants and conditions herein containe and to declare the terms and conditions upon which such bonds a issued and received, the Railway Company, party of the first par in consideration of the premises and of the purchase and acceptan of such bonds by the holders thereof, and of the sum of one dolla to it duly paid by the trustee at or before the ensealing and deliver of these presents, the receipt whereof is hereby acknowledged, ha executed and delivered these presents, and has granted, bargained sold, released, conveyed, assigned, transferred, and set over, and by these presents does grant, bargain, sell, release, convey, assign, trans fer, and set over, unto the Trustee, party of the second part, its suc cessors and assigns, forever:

All and singular, the railroads, estates, rights, properties, priv ileges, and franchises described as follows, to wit:

First. The lines of railroad owned by the Railway Company ex tending from a point about five miles west of Ogden, in the State of Utah, through the States of Utah, Nevada, and California, 300 to and into the city of Sacramento, in the State of California, and from said Sacramento to San Jose, in said last-mentioned State, and from Niles to Oakland and from Lathrop to Goshen, all in the State of California, and from Roseville, in said State of Cali fornia, to the California and Oregon boundary.

Second. All the railways belonging to the party of the first part in San Francisco, Oakland, and Alameda, in the State of California, and the terminals belonging to the party of the first part, used in connection therewith, including wharves, piers, docks, embankments, ferries, steamers, and transfer and ferry boats.

Third. All roadbeds, superstructures, rights of way, rails, tracks, sidetracks, bridges, viaducts, terminals, buildings, depots, stations, warehouses, car houses, engine houses, freight houses, coal houses, wood houses, machine shops and other shops, turntables, water sta tions, fences, docks, structures, erections, and fixtures and all other things of whatever kind, now owned or hereafter acquired by the Railway Company, or its successors, which shall in anywise or at any time, belong or appertain to or be provided for use upon, or for the purposes of, any of said lines of railroad hereby mortgaged 301 or intended to be mortgaged, and any and all other property, real or personal, of every kind and description, now or here after acquired by the Railway Company, or its successors, for use upon, or for the purposes of, such lines of railroad or terminals, or any of them.

Fourth. Any and all locomotives, engines, cars, and other rolling stock, equipment, machinery, instruments, tools, implements, materials, furniture, and other chattels of the railway company now owned or hereafter held, acquired, or provided by the railway company, or its successors, for use upon any of such lines of railroad or terminals or other property hereby mortgaged.

Fifth. Any and all other railroads, equipment, and terminals owned by the Central Pacific Railroad Company on the first day of February, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-nine.

Sixth. Any and all corporate or other rights, privileges, and franchises which the Railway Company now has or which the Railway Company or its successors hereafter shall acquire, possess, or become entitled to, for or appertaining to the construction, maintenance, use, or operation of such lines of railroad or terminals or other property hereby mortgaged; and 302 Seventh. Any and all the rents, issues, profits, tolls, and other income of such lines of railroad or terminals or other property now or at any time hereafter subject to the lien of this indenture:

To have and to hold the premises, railroads, properties, real or personal, rights, franchises, estates, and appurtenances hereby conveyed and assigned, or intended to be conveyed or assigned, unto the Trustee and to its successors and assigns forever.

But in trust for the equal and proportionate benefit and security of all present and future holders of the bonds and interest obligations issued and to be issued under and secured by this indenture, and for the enforcement of the payment of said bonds and interest obligations, when payable, and the performance of and compliance with the covenants and conditions of this indenture, without preference, priority, or distinction as to lien or otherwise of any one bond over any other bond issued hereunder by reason of priority in the issue or negotiation thereof, or otherwise howsoever.

And it is hereby covenanted and declared, That all such bonds, with the coupons for interest thereon, are to be issued and 303 certified and delivered, and that the mortgaged premises are to be held by the Trustee, subject to the further covenants, conditions, uses, and trusts hereinafter set forth; and it is covenanted between the parties hereto and for the benefit of the respective holders, from time to time, of bonds issued hereunder, as follows, viz:

ARTICLE ONE.

Issue and appropriation of bonds.

SECTION 1. All bonds to be secured hereby from time to time shall be executed and delivered by the Railway Company to the trustee hereunder, for certification, and thereupon the said Trustee shall certify and deliver the same, as provided in this article, and not otherwise. Any of such bonds from time to time at the option of the Railway Company may be executed, certified and issued originally, either as coupon bonds or as registered bonds. The aggregate amount of the bonds issued and outstanding under this indenture shall never at any one time exceed the principal sum of one hundred million dollars ($100,000,000).

Only such bonds as shall bear thereon endorsed such certificate of the said Trustee by it duly executed under the hand of its president, vice president, or second vice president, shall be secured 304 by this indenture, or shall be entitled to any lien or benefit hereunder; and every such certificate of the said Trustee upon any bond executed in behalf of the Railway Company shall be conclusive evidence that the bond so certified has been duly issued hereunder, and is entitled to the benefit of the trust hereby created.

Before certifying or delivering any coupon bond hereby secured, the said Trustee shall cut off and cancel all coupons thereof then matured; and the said Trustee shall not certify or deliver any registered bond bearing interest from any date more than six months prior to such certification or delivery.

SEC. 2. Of the bonds authorized to be issued under, and secured by, this indenture, bonds to the aggregate amount of fifty-eight million eight hundred and twenty thousand dollars ($58,820,000) and bearing interest at the rate of four per centum per annum payable semi-annually, immediately upon the execution and delivery hereof, or as soon thereafter as from time to time may be required by the Railway Company, shall by the said Trustee be certified and delivered to the Railway Company, or upon its order in writing under its corporate seal; but the Railway Company shall use all of the bonds so certified and delivered under this section, for delivery to the Treasurer of the United States under said settlement 305 agreement between the United States of America, the Central Pacific Railroad Company and Messrs. Speyer & Co., dated February 1st, 1899, and except as so required, may use the same for the general purposes of the Railway Company.

If and so far as any of the said bonds to the aggregate amount of fifty-eight million eight hundred and twenty thousand dollars ($58,820,000) shall be held by the United States of America in the form of registered bonds, the same or any part or parts thereof may at any time or from time to time be exchanged by it for coupon bonds issued hereunder and secured hereby to the like amount and carrying interest from the date from which interest is then due upon such registered bonds. Upon the request of the United States, made by or through its Secretary of the Treasury therefor, and upon the surrender by it to the Trustee of such registered bonds for cancellation, such coupon bonds shall be issued to the United States to the like amount with the amount of the registered bonds surrendered and carrying interest as above provided, and the surrendered registered bonds shall be cancelled.

When and as any of the bonds issued hereunder and so delivered to the Treasurer of the United States shall be returned to the 306 Railway Company and shall be delivered to the Trustee, either cancelled or for cancellation, the said Railway Company may execute in lieu thereof, and the Trustee shall, when such bonds shall have been cancelled, certify and deliver to the Railway Company, or upon its order in writing under its corporate seal, new coupon or registered bonds, or partly coupon and partly registered bonds, in the form above described to the amount, dollar for dollar in face value, of the bonds issued hereunder, so returned and delivered to the Trustee, bearing interest at the rate of four per centum per annum, or, if the said Railway Company shall so request, at a lower rate, and all such new bonds so executed, certified, and delivered shall be entitled to the benefit and security hereof and to share ratably therein with all other bonds from time to time issued and outstanding hereunder.

Arrangements have been made to secure the return to the Railway Company and reservation under section 3 of this article of bonds to the amount at their face value of $10,045,500, forming part of the bonds to the amount at their face value of $58,820,000 to be delivered to the Treasurer of the United States under the settlement agreement above referred to.

SEC. 3. The remainder of such authorized issue of bonds 307 over and above the fifty-eight million eight hundred and twenty thousand dollars ($58,820,000) face value to be delivered to the Treasurer of the United States as above stated; that is to say, bonds to the amount of forty-one million one hundred and eighty thousand dollars ($41,180,000), together with the bonds to the amount of ten million and forty-five thousand and five hundred dollars ($10,045,500) to be returned to the Railway Company as hereinbefore stated shall be reserved, to be executed from time to time, and to be certified and delivered by the said Trustee when and as called for by the Railway Company against deposit with the Trustee as security for the bonds issued and to be issued hereunder of outstanding old bonds of the classes hereinafter enumerated, together with all unmatured coupons appertaining thereto respectively, such bonds to be so issued under this mortgage against such deposit of such outstanding old bonds at the rates hereinafter mentioned; that is to say:

One thousand dollars face value of such refunding bonds against such deposit with the Trustee of each $1,000 face value of first-mortgage bonds of the Central Pacific Railroad Company of California or the Western Pacific Railroad Company mentioned 308 under subdivision (a), (b), or (c) in the foregoing enumeration of outstanding old bonds.

One thousand dollars face value of such refunding bonds against such deposit with the Trustee of each $1,000 face value of California and Oregon Railroad Company or Central Pacific Railroad Company, successor, first-mortgage bonds mentioned under subdivision (d) in such enumeration of outstanding old bonds.

One thousand dollars face value of such refunding bonds against such deposit with the Trustee of each $1,000 face value of Central Pacific Railroad Company first-mortgage (San Joaquin Valley division) bonds mentioned under subdivision (e) in such enumeration of outstanding old bonds.

Five hundred dollars face value of such refunding bonds against such deposit with the Trustee of each $1,000 face value of Central Pacific Railroad Company fifty-year five per cent bonds mentioned under subdivision (f) in such enumeration of outstanding old bonds.

Five hundred dollars face value of such refunding bonds against such deposit with the Trustee of each $1,000 face value of Central Pacific Railroad Company land bonds mentioned in subdivision (g) of such enumeration of outstanding old bonds.

309 Whenever, on or after the maturity of any of such outstanding old bonds, or on or after a date eight months prior to such maturity, the Railway Company shall tender or shall cause to be tendered to said Trustee cash sufficient to purchase or to pay the same at par (and shall also provide to the satisfaction of the said Trustee for any interest due upon such bonds, or accruing before their maturity), the said Trustee shall receive such cash, and in consideration thereof shall certify and deliver to the Railway Company or upon its order bonds hereby secured and reserved under this section at the rates above prescribed, respectively, for certification of such refunding bonds against the deposit with the Trustee of all such outstanding old bonds, for the purchase or payment of which cash shall have been so provided.

All cash received by the said Trustee under this subdivision of this section shall be by it held and applied to the purchase at not above par, or, if such purchase be impracticable, to the payment at par, of an equivalent amount of such outstanding old bonds then unpaid, for the purchase or payment of which such cash shall have been received.

Every outstanding old bond deposited with the Trustee, as above provided, shall by said Trustee be stamped with the words "Not negotiable. Held in trust for the purposes declared in the first refunding mortgage of the Central Pacific Railway Company, dated August 1, 1899", and (either with or without conversion into registered bonds, at the option of the said Trustee) shall be held by the said Trustee as purchaser, without extinguishment or impairment of lien, as additional security for the payment of the bonds hereby secured until (1) not less than ninety-five per cent of all bonds of the same issue at any time outstanding shall have been so deposited, when all deposited bonds of such issue shall, upon the written request of the Railway Company, be cancelled by the Trustee and surrendered to the Railway Company, or until (2) not less than ninety-five per cent of all outstanding old bonds of all the issues above enumerated shall have been deposited hereunder with the said Trustee, whereupon, on the written request of the Railway Company, the said Trustee shall cancel and shall surrender to the Railway Company all outstanding old bonds then in its possession.

If, at the time of the maturity of any such outstanding old bonds, the holder thereof shall decline to sell and to deliver the same at par and accrued interest, but shall require the payment thereof, then, upon payment thereof, the said Trustee shall certify and shall deliver to the Railway Company, or upon its order, the same amount at par of said bonds reserved hereunder as though said matured bonds had been purchased by the Railway Company and by it deposited with the said Trustee; and by virtue of such payment of such outstanding old bonds and the issue of such new bonds hereunder the Trustee shall be forthwith subrogated to and vested with all the rights and liens of the holders of the bonds so paid.

The Railway Company shall provide and maintain books, wherein it shall register as the property of the Trustee all such outstanding old bonds received by the said Trustee; and, except as herein expressly provided, no such outstanding old bonds shall be cancelled by the Trustee.

Neither the principal nor the interest of any such outstanding old bond so held by the said Trustee shall be collected or required to be paid, unless or until proceedings shall have been instituted to enforce the mortgage securing such bond, either by entry or by sale; but then and thereupon all of the bonds of that issue then so held by the said Trustee, and all interest thereon maturing on or subsequent to the date upon which the default was made, for which such proceedings shall have been instituted, shall be entitled to payment; and payment thereof shall be enforced ratably and equally with all other bonds of such issue not deposited with the said

Trustee; but all interest maturing upon any deposited outstand old bond prior to any default under this mortgage or under the mo gage securing such deposited bond shall be deemed to have been p and satisfied, and, upon request of the Railway Company theref the coupons or interest warrants representing such interest shall cancelled by the Trustee and returned to the Railway Company.

Upon the satisfaction and discharge of the mortgage or mo gages securing any issue of such outstanding old bonds, the Trus shall, when and as called for by the Railway Company, certify a deliver to it the aggregate amount of refunding bonds issuable und this mortgage against deposit of all the now outstanding bon secured by the mortgage or mortgages so satisfied and discharg except so far as such refunding bonds shall have been theretofo issued against deposit of such outstanding old bonds with the Trust as hereinbefore provided.

Notwithstanding anything to the contrary hereinbefore co
313 tained, upon being satisfied that all bonds deliverable to t
Treasurer of the United States under the settlement agre ment above referred to have been delivered and that sufficient provi sion has been made for the purchase or payment of each and eve outstanding old bond, the said Trustee, without any other or furth condition precedent, shall certify and shall deliver upon the order of t Railway Company the whole amount of the bonds by this indentu authorized and secured, and then remaining unissued; and from tim to time the Railway Company shall take all practicable measures t procure, upon terms which the Railway Company shall deem reaso able, the satisfaction and discharge of all the mortgages securin such outstanding old bonds.

SEC. 4. Whenever any coupon bond or bonds issued under an secured by this indenture, together with all unmatured coupo thereto belonging, shall be surrendered for exchange for registere bonds, the Railway Company shall issue and the said Trustee sha certify and deliver, in exchange for such coupon bond or bonds like amount of registered bonds without coupons. Such registere bonds shall be for $1,000, or for such multiples thereof as from tim to time the Railway Company may prescribe, and shall bear interes at the same rate as the surrendered coupon bonds, and fro 314 the date of maturity of the last matured coupons thereof. I every case of such exchange the said Trustee forthwith sha cancel the surrendered bond or bonds and coupons and shall deliv the same to the Railway Company.

Whenever any such registered bond shall be surrendered for tran fer the Railway Company shall issue, and the said Trustee sha certify and deliver to the transferee, upon surrender and cancellatio

f the bond or bonds transferred, a like amount of new registered onds for $1,000, or for such multiples of $1,000 as the Railway ompany from time to time may authorize, and bearing interest at he same rate as the surrendered registered bond, but no registered ond may be converted into a coupon bond.

For any exchange of coupon bonds for registered bonds, and for ny transfer of registered bonds without coupons, the Railway Com- any, at its option, may make a charge not exceeding one dollar for ach new registered bond issued upon such exchange or transfer.

SEC. 5. Upon surrender by the Railway Company to the Trustee or cancellation of any coupon or registered bonds issued hereunder and secured hereby, with a request that bonds be issued here- under for the like amount at a reduced rate of interest, the Trustee shall certify and deliver to the Railway Company onds issued hereunder and secured hereby to the amount at their ace value of the bonds so surrendered, and carrying interest at such ower rate of interest than four per cent per annum, payable semi- nnually, as the Railway Company may prescribe in that behalf, nd the new bonds so certified and delivered shall be entitled to share n the security of these presents with the like effect as if they had een bonds originally issued under this mortgage.

SEC. 6. In case any coupon bond issued hereunder, with the coupons hereto appertaining, or any registered bond without coupons, shall ecome mutilated or be destroyed, the Railway Company, in its dis- retion, may issue, and thereupon the said trustee shall certify and eliver, a new bond of like tenor and date, bearing the same distin- uishing number, in exchange and substitution for, and upon cancel- ation of, the mutilated coupon bond and its coupons, or the mutilated egistered bond, or in lieu of, and substitution for, the coupon bond nd its coupons, or the registered bond so destroyed, upon receipt of atisfactory evidence of the destruction of such coupon bond and its oupons or of such registered bond, and upon receipt also of satis- factory indemnity.

16 SEC. 7. Nothing in this article or in any other article of this indenture, expressed or implied, is intended or shall be con- trued to enlarge the security of the holders of any of said outstand- ng old bonds, or to create any trust in their favor, or to give to any erson or corporation other than the parties hereto and the holders f bonds issued under and secured by this indenture any legal or quitable right, remedy, or claim, under or in respect to this inden- ure, or any covenant, condition, or provision herein contained; all s covenants, conditions, and provisions being intended to be, and eing, for the sole and exclusive benefit of the parties hereto and of he holders of the bonds hereby secured.

ARTICLE TWO.

Particular covenants of the Railway Company.

The Railway Company covenants as follows:

SEC. 1. It will duly and punctually pay, or cause to be paid, to every holder of any bond issued and secured hereunder the principal and interest accruing thereon, at the dates and place and in the manner mentioned in such bonds or in the coupons thereto belonging, according to the true intent and meaning thereof, without deduction from either principal or interest for any tax or taxes imposed by the United States or any State or county or municipality thereof 317 which the Railway Company may be required to pay or to retain therefrom under or by reason of any present or future law. When and as paid all such coupons forthwith shall be cancelled.

SEC. 2. Whenever required by the Trustee, the Railway Company will grant, convey, confirm, assign, transfer, and set over unto the Trustee the estate, right, title, and interest of the Railway Company, in or to, all real and personal estate, corporate rights, and franchises which, in any way or manner, it shall acquire as appurtenant to, or for the use of the railroads hereby mortgaged; and also it will do, execute, acknowledge, and deliver, or it will cause to be done, executed, acknowledged and delivered, all and every such further acts, deeds, transfers, and assurances for the better assuring, conveying, and confirming unto the Trustee all and singular the premises, estates, and property hereby conveyed, or intended so to be, as they or either of them shall reasonably require for better accomplishing the provisions and purposes of this indenture, and for securing payment of the principal and interest of the bonds intended to be hereby secured.

But nothing in this indenture expressed or implied is intended or shall be construed, to limit the right or power of the Rail-318 way Company, hereby expressly reserved, to own, and hold or to construct, or to acquire, other lines of railroad, or branches or extensions, or interests therein, or other property free from the lien hereof.

SEC. 3. The Railway Company at an office or agency to be maintained by it in the city of New York will keep a sufficient register or registers of bonds issued hereunder, which registers at all reasonable times shall be open to the inspection of the Trustee; and, upon presentation for such purpose, it will, under such reasonable regulations as it may prescribe, register therein any coupon bonds and any bonds without coupons issued under the provisions hereof.

Upon presentation of any such registered coupon bond bearing a written power to transfer the same executed by the registered holder for the time being, in a form approved by the Railway Company, such bond shall be transferred upon such register. The registered holder of any such registered coupon bond also shall have the right to cause the same to be registered as payable to bearer, in which case transferability by delivery shall be restored, and thereafter the principal of such bond shall be payable to any person presenting the same; but any such coupon bond registered as payable to bearer may be registered again in the name of the holder with 319 the same effect as a first registration thereof. Successive registrations and transfers as aforesaid may be made from time to time as desired; and each registration shall be noted by the bond registrar on the bond.

Any registered bond without coupons may be transferred by instrument in writing executed by the registered holder, upon the surrender of such bond, and the payment of the charge for such transfer, in which case new registered bonds for an equivalent amount will be issued to the transferee or transferees, as provided in section 4 of article one hereof.

As to all bonds so registered, the person in whose name the same shall be registered shall, for all purposes of this indenture, be deemed and be regarded as the owner thereof, and thereafter, payment of, or on account of the principal of such bond, if it be a registered coupon bond, and of the principal and interest, if it be a registered bond without coupons, shall be made only to or upon the order of such registered holder thereof, but such registration may be changed as above provided. All such payments so made shall be valid and effectual to satisfy and to discharge the liability upon such bonds to the extent of the sum or sums so paid.

320 Registration of any coupon bond shall, however, not restrain the negotiability of any coupon thereto belonging, but every such coupon shall continue to pass by delivery and shall remain payable to bearer.

SEC. 4. The Railway Company will well and truly pay and discharge upon presentation thereof for payment at or after maturity, or will acquire and will deposit with the trustee hereunder all of the outstanding old bonds of the issues above mentioned; and it will punctually pay or cause to be paid, or, upon demand of the said Trustee, will provide to its satisfaction for the payment of, the interest on all such outstanding old bonds of said issues, not acquired and deposited hereunder, as and when such interest shall become due and payable, until all bonds of said issues shall have been finally paid and discharged, or shall have been acquired and deposited hereunder, and it will not extend any of such outstanding old bonds and will not cause or suffer the same to be extended.

SEC. 5. The Railway Company will not voluntarily create or suffer to be created any lien or charge having priority to or preference over the lien of these presents upon the mortgaged premises, or any 321 part thereof, or upon the income thereof; and, within three months after the same shall accrue, it will pay, or cause to be discharged, or will make adequate provision for the satisfaction or discharge of, all lawful claims and demands of mechanics, laborers, and others, which, if unpaid, might by law be given precedence to this indenture as a lien or charge upon the mortgaged premises or any part thereof, or the income thereof.

SEC. 6. The Railway Company from time to time will pay and discharge all taxes, assessments, and Governmental charges lawfully imposed upon the lines of railroad and other premises hereby mortgaged, or upon any part thereof, or upon the income and profits thereof, the lien of which would be prior to the lien hereof, so that the priority of this indenture shall be fully preserved in respect of such properties; provided, however, that nothing contained in this section shall require the Railway Company to pay any such tax, assessment, or charge, so long as the Railway Company in good faith shall contest the validity thereof.

SEC. 7. The Railway Company will not issue, negotiate, sell, or dispose of any bonds hereby secured in any manner other than in accordance with the provisions of this indenture, and the 322 agreements in that behalf herein contained; and in issuing, selling, negotiating, or otherwise disposing of such bonds from time to time it will well and truly apply or cause to be applied the same, or the proceeds thereof, to and for the purposes herein prescribed, and to and for no other or different purpose.

ARTICLE THREE.

Remedies of trustee and bondholders.

SECTION 1. The Railway Company covenants and agrees that it will not directly or indirectly extend or assent to the extension of the time for payment of any coupon or claim for interest upon any bonds secured hereby, and that it will not directly or indirectly be a party to any arrangement therefore by purchasing or funding said coupons or claims for interest on registered bonds or in any other manner. In case the payment of any such coupon or claim for interest should be so extended by or with the consent of the Railway Company, such coupon or claim for interest so extended shall not be entitled in case of default hereunder to the benefit or security of this indenture, except subject to the prior payment in full of the principal of all bonds issued hereunder and outstanding, and of all coupons and claims for interest on such bonds, the payment of 323 which has not been so extended, the intention of this agreement being to prevent any accumulation after maturity of coupons or claims for interest upon registered bonds.

SEC. 2. In case (1) default shall be made in the payment of any interest on any bond or bonds secured by this indenture, or in the performance of any of the covenants of the Railway Company contained in section 5 of article two hereof, and any such default shall have continued for a period of six months; or in case (2) default shall be made in the due and punctual payment of the principal of any bond hereby secured; or in case (3) default shall be made in the due observance or performance of any other covenant or condition herein required to be kept or performed by the Railway Company, and any such default under clause (3) hereof shall have continued for a period of six months after written notice thereof from the Trustee or from the holders of five per cent in amount of the bonds hereby secured; then, and in each and every such case, the Trustee personally, or by its agents or attorneys, may enter into and upon all or any part of the railways, rolling stock, property and premises, lands, rights, interest, and franchises hereby conveyed, and each and every part thereof, and may exclude the Railway Com-
324 pany, its agents and servants, wholly therefrom, and having and holding the same may use, operate, manage, and control said railways and other premises, regulate the tolls for the transportation of passengers and freight thereon, and conduct the business thereof, either personally or by their superintendents, managers, receivers, agents, and servants or attorneys, to the best advantage of the holders of the bonds hereby secured; and upon every such entry the Trustee, at the expense of the trust estate, from time to time, either by purchase, repairs, or construction, may maintain and restore, and insure or keep insured, the rolling stock, tools, and machinery, and other property, buildings, bridges, and structures erected, or provided for use, in connection with said railways and other premises, and whereof they shall become possessed, as aforesaid, in the same manner and to the same extent as is usual with railway companies, and likewise from time to time, at the expense of the trust estate, may make all necessary or proper repairs, renewals, and replacements, and useful alterations, additions, betterments, and improvements thereto and thereon, as to them may seem judicious; and in such case the Trustee shall have the right to manage the mortgaged premises, and to carry on the business and exercise
325 all rights and powers of the Railway Company, either in the name of the Railway Company or otherwise, as the Trustee shall deem best; and it shall be entitled to collect and to receive all tolls, earnings, incomes, rents, issues, and profits of the same an every part thereof; and after deducting the expenses of operatin said railways and other premises, and of conducting the busine thereof, and of all repairs, maintenance, renewals, replacement alterations, additions, betterments, and improvements, and all pa ments which may be made for taxes, assessments, insurance, an prior or other proper charges, upon the said premises and propert or any part thereof, as well as just and reasonable compensation fo its own services, and for all agents, clerks, servants, and other em ployees by it properly engaged and employed, it shall apply th moneys arising as aforesaid as follows:

In case the principal of the bonds hereby secured shall not hav become due, to the payment of the interest in default, in the order o the maturity of the installments of such interest, with interest thereo at the rate of four per cent per annum; such payments to be mad ratably to the persons entitled thereto without discrimination o preference.

326 In case the principal of the bonds hereby secured, shall hav become due, by declaration or otherwise, first, to the paymen of the accrued interest (with interest on the overdue installment thereof at the rate of four per cent per annum) in the order of th maturity of the installments, and then to the payment of the prin cipal of all bonds hereby secured; in every instance such payment to be made ratably to the persons entitled to such payment, withou any discrimination or preference.

These provisions, however, not being intended in anywise to mod ify the provisions of section 1 of this article.

SEC. 3. In case default shall be made in the payment of any inter est on any bond or bonds hereby secured, or in the performance o any of the covenants of the Railway Company contained in sectio 5 of article two hereof, and any such default shall have continued fo a period of six months, then and in every case of such continuing de fault, upon the written request of the holders of a majority in amoun of the bonds hereby secured then outstanding, the Trustee, b notice in writing delivered to the Railway Company, shall de 327 clare the principal of all bonds hereby secured then outstand ing to be due and payable immediately, and upon any such declaration the same shall become and be immediately due and pay able, anything in this indenture or in said bonds contained to the con trary notwithstanding. This provision, however, is subject to the con dition, that if at any time after the principal of said bonds shall hav been so declared due and payable, all arrears of interest upon all such bonds, with interest at the rate of four per cent per annum on over due installments of interest, and the expenses of the Trustee, shal either be paid by the Railway Company or be collected out of the mortgaged premises before any sale of the mortgaged premises shall have been made, then and in every such case the holders of a majority in amount of the bonds hereby secured then outstanding, by written notice to the Railway Company and to the Trustee may waive such default and its consequences; but no such waiver shall extend to or affect any subsequent default, or impair any right consequent thereon.

In case the Trustee shall have proceeded to enforce any right under this indenture by foreclosure, entry, or otherwise, and such proceedings shall have been discontinued or abandoned because of such 328 waiver or for any other reason, or shall have been determined adversely to the Trustee, then and in every such case the Railway Company and the Trustee shall be restored to their former position and rights hereunder in respect of the mortgaged premises, and all rights, remedies, and powers of the Trustee shall continue as though no such proceedings had been taken.

SEC. 4. In case (1) default shall be made in the payment of any interest on any bond at any time issued under and secured by this indenture or in the performance of any of the covenants of the Railway Company contained in section 5 of article two hereof, and any such default shall have continued for a period of six months; or in case (2) default shall be made in the due and punctual payment of the principal of any bond hereby secured; or in case (3) default shall be made in the due observance or performance of any other covenant or condition herein required to be kept or performed by the Railway Company, and any such default under clause (3) hereof shall have continued for a period of six months after written notice thereof from the Trustee or from the holders of five per cent in amount of the bonds hereby secured; then, and in each and every such case of default, provided, however, in respect of each of the two 329 cases so indicated, that such default shall have continued for six months, as above provided, the Trustee, with or without entry, personally or by attorney, in its discretion (a) may sell to the highest and best bidder all and singular the mortgaged property and premises, rights, franchises and interests, and appurtenances, and other real and personal property of every kind, and all right, title and interest, claim and demand therein, and right of redemption thereof, in one lot and as an entirety, unless a sale in parcels shall be required under the provisions of section 6 of this article, in which case such sale may be made in parcels as in said section provided: which sale or sales shall be made at public auction at such place in the city of Ogden, in the State of Utah, or at such other place and at such time and upon such terms as the Trustee may fix and briefly specify in the notice of sale to be given as herein provided; or (b) immediately upon the expiration of the six months in the two cases so indicated, and immediately upon default in payment of principal in the other case, may proceed to protect and enforce their rights and the rights of bondholders under this indenture by a suit or suits in equity or at law, whether for the specific performance of any covenant or agreement contained herein, or in aid of the execu-330 tion of any power herein granted, or for the foreclosure of this indenture, or for the enforcement of any other appropriate legal or equitable remedy as the Trustee, being advised by counsel learned in the law, shall deem most effectual to protect and enforce any of their rights or duties hereunder.

Upon the written request of the holders of twenty-five per cent in amount of the bonds hereby secured, in case of any such continuing default, it shall be the duty of the Trustee, upon being indemnified as hereinafter provided, to take all needful steps for the protection and enforcement of their rights and the rights of the holders of the bonds hereby secured, and to exercise the powers of entry or sale herein conferred, or both, or to take appropriate judicial proceedings by action, suit, or otherwise, as the Trustee, being advised by counsel learned in the law, shall deem most expedient in the interest of the holders of the bonds hereby secured.

SEC. 5. Anything in this indenture contained to the contrary notwithstanding, the holders of seventy-five per cent in amount of the bonds hereby secured and then outstanding, from time to time, shall have the right to direct and to control the method and place of conducting any and all proceedings for any sale of the premises 331 hereby conveyed, mortgaged, or pledged, or for the foreclosure of this indenture, or for the appointment of a receiver or of any other proceedings hereunder.

SEC. 6. In the event of any sale, whether made under the power of sale hereby granted and conferred, or under or by virtue of judicial proceedings, or of some judgment or decree of foreclosure and sale, the whole of the property hereby mortgaged shall be sold in one parcel and as an entirety, including all the rights, titles, estates, railroads, equipment, franchises, contracts, and other real and personal property of every name and nature, unless the holders of a majority in amount of the bonds hereby secured then outstanding shall in writing request the Trustee to cause said premises to be sold in parcels, in which case the sale shall be made in such parcels as may be specified in such request or petition, or unless such sale as an entirety is impracticable by reason of some statute or other cause, and this provision shall bind the parties hereto and each and every of the holders of the bonds and coupons hereby secured or intended so to be.

SEC. 7. Notice of any such sale pursuant to any provision of 332 this indenture shall state the time and place when and where the same is to be made, and shall contain a brief general deription of the property to be sold, and shall be sufficiently given if ublished once in each week for four successive weeks prior to such le in a newspaper published in the city of New York, in the State f New York, and a newspaper published in the city of Ogden, in e State of Utah, and otherwise as may be required by law.

SEC. 8. The Trustee from time to time may adjourn any sale to be ade by it under the provisions of this indenture by announcement t the time and place appointed for such sale or for such adjourned le or sales, and without further notice or publication it may make ch sale at the time and place to which the same shall be so djourned.

SEC. 9. Upon the completion of any sale or sales under this inden-re, the Trustee shall execute and deliver to the accepted purchaser r purchasers a good and sufficient deed, or good and sufficient deeds, f conveyance of the property and franchises sold. And the Trustee nd its successors are hereby appointed the true and lawful attorneys r attorney, irrevocable, of the Railway Company, in its name and ead to make all necessary deeds and conveyances of property thus sold; and for that purpose they may execute all necessary 33 acts of assignment and transfer, the Railway Company hereby ratifying and confirming all that its said attorney or attoreys shall lawfully do by virtue thereof.

Any such sale or sales made under or by virtue of this indenture, hether under the power of sale hereby granted or conferred or nder or by virtue of judicial proceedings shall operate to divest all ght, title, interest, claim, and demand whatsoever either in law or n equity of the Railway Company of, in, and to the premises sold, nd shall be a perpetual bar both at law and in equity against the ailway Company, its successors, and assigns, and against any and ll persons claiming or to claim the premises sold, or any part thereof, rom, through, or under the Railway Company, its successors, or ssigns.

The personal property and chattels conveyed, or intended to be onveyed, by or pursuant to this indenture, shall be real estate for ll the purposes of this indenture, and shall be held and taken to be ixtures and appurtenances of the said railroads and part thereof, nd are to be used and sold therewith and not separate therefrom, except as herein otherwise provided.

34 SEC. 10. The receipt of the Trustee shall be a sufficient discharge to any purchaser of the property, or any part thereof ld as aforesaid, for the purchase money, and no such purchaser, r his representatives, grantees, or assigns, after paying such purchase oney and receiving such receipt, shall be bound to see to the appli-tion of such purchase money upon or for any trust or purpose of this indenture, or in any manner whatsoever be answerable for loss, misapplication, or nonapplication of any such purchase m or any part thereof, or be bound to inquire as to the authoriza necessity, expediency, or regularity of any such sale.

upon or plead, or in any manner whatever claim or take the benefit or advantage of, any stay or extension law now or at y time hereafter in force in any locality where the mortgaged remises, or any part thereof, may or shall be situate, nor will it aim, take or insist on any benefit or advantage from any law now hereafter in force providing for the valuation or appraisement of e mortgaged premises, or any part thereof, prior to any sale or sales ereof to be made pursuant to any provisions herein contained, or the decree of any court of competent jurisdiction; nor after any ch sale or sales will it claim or exercise any right under any statute acted by any State to redeem the property so sold, or any part ereof; and it hereby expressly waives all benefit and advantage of y such law or laws; and it covenants that it will not hinder, delay, impede the execution of any power herein granted and delegated the Trustee, but that it will suffer and permit the execution of ery such power as though no such law or laws had been made or acted.

SEC. 15. In case the Railway Company shall make default in any f the respects mentioned in section 3 of article three hereof, and there shall be any judgment outstanding against the Railway Company unsecured by bond on appeal; or in case any judicial proceeding by any party other than the Trustee, a receiver shall e appointed of the Railway Company, or a judgment or order be tered for the sequestration of its property, the Trustee shall thereon be entitled forthwith to exercise the right of entry herein conrred, and also any and all other rights and powers herein conrred, and provided to be exercised by the Trustee upon the occur-nce and continuance of default as hereinbefore provided, and as atter of right the Trustee shall thereupon be entitled to the apintment of a receiver of the premises hereby mortgaged, and of e earnings, income, revenue, rents, issues, or profits thereof, with ch powers as the court making such appointment shall confer.

SEC. 16. The Railway Company, at any time before full payment the bonds hereby secured, and whenever it shall deem it expedient r the better protection and security of such bonds, although there then no default entitling the Trustee to enter into possession, with e consent of the Trustee, may surrender and deliver to the Trustee full possession of the whole or any part of the property, premi and interests hereby conveyed or intended so to be, for any peri fixed or indefinite. Upon such surrender and delivery to 339 Trustee, with its consent, the Trustee shall enter into and u take the place of any property released hereunder, ipso facto, sh become and be subject to the lien of this indenture as fully as specifically mortgaged hereby; but, if requested by the said Trust the Railway Company will convey the same to the Trustee, by appr priate deeds, upon the trusts and for the purposes of this indentur

SEC. 2. The Railway Company, while in possession of the mo gaged premises, shall also have full power, in its discretion, fr time to time to dispose of any portion of the machinery, equipme and implements at any time held, subject to the lien hereof, whi may have become unfit for such use, replacing the same by new m chinery, equipment, or implements, which shall become subject this indenture.

SEC. 3. In no event shall any purchaser or purchasers of any pro
erty sold or disposed of under any provision of this article be requir to see to the application of the purchase money.

349 SEC. 4. In case the mortgaged premises shall be in the p session of a receiver lawfully appointed, the powers in and this article conferred upon the Railway Company may be exerci by such receiver, with the approval of the Trustee; and if the Trus shall be in possession of the mortgaged premises under a provision of this indenture, then all the powers by this article co ferred upon the Railway Company may be exercised by the Trus in its discretion.

SEC. 5. The Railway Company from time to time may ma changes or alterations in, or substitutions of, any leases, or tracka rights subject to this indenture; but in any such event any modifi altered, or substituted leases or trackage rights forthwith sh come bound by, and be subject to, the terms of this indenture in e same manner as those previously existing.

SEC. 6. Sundry provisions.

SECTION 1. All the covenants, stipulations, promises, and ag ments in this indenture contained by or in behalf of the Rail Company shall bind its successors and assigns whether so expre or not.

SEC. 2. Nothing contained in this indenture or in any bond her secured shall prevent any consolidation or merger of the Rail Company with any other corporation, or any conveyance and tr fer, subject to the continuing lien of this indenture and to all provisions thereof, of all the mortgaged premises as an entirety railroad corporation at that time existing under and by vi of the laws of any State or States or the United States, and entitled to acquire the same; provided, however, that such consolidation, merger, or sale shall not impair the lien and security of this indenture or any of the rights or powers of the Trustee or of the bondholders hereunder, and that upon any such consolidation, merger, or sale, the due and punctual payment of the principal and interest of all of said bonds according to their tenor, and the due and punctual performance and observance of all the covenants and conditions of this indenture shall be assumed by the corporation formed by such consolidation or merger or purchasing as aforesaid.

SEC. 3. In case the Railway Company, pursuant to section 2 of this article, shall be consolidated or merged with any other corporation or shall sell, convey, and transfer, subject to this indenture, all the mortgaged premises as an entirety as aforesaid, the successor corporation formed by such consolidation or into which the Railway Company shall have been merged, or which shall have purchased and received a conveyance and transfer as aforesaid—upon executing, and causing to be recorded, an indenture with the Trustee, satisfactory to the Trustee, whereby such successor corporation shall assume the due and punctual payment of the principal and interest of said bonds and the performance of all the covenants and conditions of this indenture—shall succeed to and be substituted for, the Railway Company, party of the first part hereto, with the same effect as if it had been named herein as such party of the first part, and such successor corporation thereupon may cause to be signed and may issue, either in its own name or in the name of the Central Pacific Railway Company, any or all of such bonds which shall not theretofore have been signed by the Railway Company and certified by the Trustee; and upon the order of said successor corporation in lieu of the Railway Company, and subject to all the terms, conditions, and restrictions herein prescribed, the Trustee shall certify and deliver any of such bonds which shall have been previously signed and delivered by the officers of the Railway Company to the Trustee for certification, and any of such bonds which such successor corporation shall thereafter cause to be signed and delivered to the said Trustee for that purpose. All the bonds so issued shall in all respects have the same legal rank and security as the bonds theretofore or thereafter issued in accordance with the terms of this indenture.

SEC. 4. For every purpose of this indenture, including the execution, issue, and use of any and all bonds hereby secured, the terms "Railway Company" and "the Central Pacific Railway Company" include and mean not only the party of the first part hereto, but also any such successor corporation. Every such successor corporation shall possess and from time to time may exercise

each and every right and power hereunder of the Central Paci Railway Company in its name or otherwise.

SEC. 5. Any act or proceeding by any provision of this indentu required to be done or performed by any board or officer of the Ra way Company shall and may be done and performed with like fo and effect by the like board or officer of any railroad corporation th shall at the time be such lawful sole successor of the Railway Co pany.

SEC. 6. Except when otherwise indicated the words "the Truste or any other equivalent term as used in this indenture shall be h and construed to mean the Trustee or Trustees for the time bei whether original or successor, and the words "Trustee," "bon "bondholder," and "holder" shall include the plural as well as t singular number, and the term "majority" shall signify "major in amount."

361 The Central Trust Company of New York, Trustee, pa hereto of the second part, hereby accepts the trusts in this denture declared and provided and agrees to perform the same up the terms and conditions hereinbefore set forth.

In order to facilitate the record of this indenture, the same m be simultaneously executed in counterparts, each of which so e cuted shall be deemed to be an original, and such counterparts sh together constitute but one and the same instrument.

In witness whereof the Central Pacific Railway Company, party hereto of the first part, has caused this indenture to be sig and acknowledged or proved by its president and its corporate to be hereunto affixed, and the same to be attested by the signat of its secretary, and the Central Trust Company of New York, party of the second part, has caused its corporate seal to be here

[Form of coupon three and one-half per cent mortgage bonds.]

No. $1,000 (or $500).

United States of America. The Central Pacific Railway Company three and one-half per cent mortgage gold bond.

Know all men by these presents that the Central Pacific Railway Company, a corporation, hereinafter called the "Railway Company", for value received, promises to pay to the bearer, or, if registe to the registered holder, of this bond, on the first day of Aug nineteen hundred and twenty-nine, at the office or agency of the R way Company in the city of New York, one thousand (or five h dred) dollars, gold coin of the United States of the present st ard of weight and fineness, and to pay interest thereon at 385 rate of three and one-half per cent per annum from Aug 1st, 1899, payable semiannually at the said office or agenc like gold coin, on the first day of June and the first day of Decem in each year, but only upon presentation and surrender, as they s erally mature, of the coupons therefor annexed hereto.

Both the principal and interest of this bond are payable with deduction for any tax or taxes which the Railway Company may required to pay, or to retain therefrom, under any present or fut law of the United States, or of any State or county or municipal therein.

This bond is one of a series of three and one-half per cent mo gage gold bonds (coupon and registered) of the Railway Compa issued and to be issued for an aggregate principal sum not exceed twenty-five million dollars at any one time outstanding, under a in pursuance of, and all equally secured by, a mortgage or deed trust, dated August 1st, 1899, executed by the Railway Company the United States Trust Company of New York, as trustee, of the property and franchises of the Railway Company conveyed trust by said mortgage or deed of trust, to which reference 386 hereby made for a statement of the property and franchi mortgaged, the nature and extent of the security, the rig of the holders of said bonds under the same, and the terms and co ditions upon which said bonds are issued and secured.

This bond shall pass by delivery, unless registered in the owne name on the books of the Railway Company at its office or agen in the city of New York, such registry being noted on the bond the bond registrar of the Railway Company. After such registrati no transfer shall be valid unless made on the company's books by t registered owner and similarly noted on the bond, but the same ma be discharged from registry by being transferred to bearer, a thereafter transferability by delivery shall be restored, but this bo may again, from time to time, be registered or transferred to bear as before. Such registration, however, shall not affect the negot ability of the coupons, which shall continue to be transferable b delivery merely.

The holder may also, at his option, surrender for cancellation th bond, with the coupons for future interest thereon, in exchange for registered bond without coupons, as provided in said mortgage deed of trust.

This bond shall not become obligatory for any purpose
37 until it shall have been authenticated by the certificate, hereon endorsed, of the Trustee under said mortgage or deed of trust. In witness whereof the Central Pacific Railway Company has used these presents to be signed by its president or one of its vice presidents, and its corporate seal to be hereunto affixed, and to be attested by its secretary or an assistant secretary, and coupons for said interest with the engraved signature of its treasurer to be attached hereto, this first day of August, 1899.
